Many other instances can be cited which tend to show that the instinct of insects does not resemble human reason.

On the other hand, insects sometimes do things which do not seem to be the result of pure automatism. Darwin found that even earthworms exhibit more adaptability to circumstances than was shown by Mr. Beard's imprisoned bee in the glass jar.

A Generous Settlement

With characteristic liberality the Canadian Pacific Railway has settled the action for damages brought against it by Mrs. Katherine Rose, of Havelock, for the death of her husband, Wellington Rose. The latter was a fireman in the employ of the Canadian Pacific, and died from injuries received while on duty. Mrs. Rose receives $2,100 from the railway company.

LAKEFIELD MAN INJURED

John McCormack Had a Close Call for His Life Wednesday

On Wednesday afternoon, John McCormack, an aged employe of the Lakefield Cement Company, was seriously injured by an engine used for hauling the company's cars. McCormack was attending to the switch, and in attempting to get on the cowcatcher to ride a short distance he slipped and fell in front of the engine. The cowcatcher pushed him along the track, and had it not been that the engineer promptly reversed the engine he would have been killed. The unfortunate man was carried to the office of Dr. D. Fraser, where his injuries were found to be very serious, and he was immediately conveyed to his home about a mile from the village. It was found that the fibula, or small bone, of the right foot, was badly shattered, and it is feared that serious internal injuries may complicate the case, as the lower portion of the abdomen was badly bruised.

Mr. McCormack is about 80 years of age, and is an industrious and well-respected citizen. He is a widower and lives with his daughters, whose main support he has been.

Grain Coming to Peterboro

Large shipments of grain are being received in town from Rice Lake. The steamer "North Star" brought three loads in this week, averaging from 1,200 to 2,000 bushels each. The "Water Lily" is also bringing in large cargoes of grain and hogs. The grain shipments are consigned to W. H. Meldrum, the McAllister Milling Company, Central Milling Company, and the hogs to Mr. Matthews.

Interesting Items.

A salmon weighing 200 pounds is not to be found every day. It is therefore interesting to learn that such a huge fish was caught with hook and line off Gabarus Harbour, near Sydney, Nova Scotia, a short time ago. Being too large to be taken into the boat, it was towed from the fishing ground to the harbor. The men were codfishing at the time.

The State Legislature of New York has authorised the authorities of New York City to plant trees in the tenement districts. In this connection it is pointed out that it is not shade alone that makes it cooler under a tree in summer. The coolness of the tree itself helps, for its temperature is about forty-five degrees, Fahrenheit, at all times, as that of the human body is a fraction more than ninety-eight degrees. So a clump of trees cools the air as a piece of ice cools the water in a pitcher.

"Don't spit on the sidewalks!" is the new command of the New York Board of Health. Three years ago the board began its anti-spitting crusade by forbidding expectoration upon ferry-boats, trolley and elevated cars, and in car stations; and now the side walks are to be protected. The justification of these measures is the statement that twenty years ago almost six deaths in every hundred in New York City were caused by tuberculosis, whereas last year the deaths from this cause numbered only about two and a half in the hundred.

According to the statistics gathered by the United States Weather Bureau, 713 persons in the United States were killed or fatally injured by lightning during the year 1900. Of these 291 were struck under the open sky, 158 in houses, 57 under trees and 56 in barns. The circumstances attending the death of the remaining 151 victims were not ascertained. During the same year 973 persons were injured by lightning, but survived. The Bureau, upon statistics extending over 10 years ending with 1900, estimates the average annual number of deaths from lightning at from 700 to 800.

An engineer of Zurich, L. Thormann, reports, after a careful examination, that sufficient electric power could be developed from the waterfalls of the Alps to run all the railways of Switzerland. There would be little or no reduction of cost, he says, but the time may come when the change from steam to electricity may be desirable, because Switzerland has to import all the coal she uses. From 21 waterfalls, some of which are already partially utilized for industrial purposes, 86,000 horse-power could be developed, but only 60,000 horse-power would be required to replace the steam-power now used on the railroads.

Ruined by a Pig.

Fiction narrates many incidents wherein animal pets figure as causes of the ruin or salvation of their owners. In real life such instances are by no means rare. Not long ago there died in an English workhouse a man named John Evans, who, ten years ago, was a prosperous farmer, but who was brought to poverty by a pig. One day John discovered that his pigsty needed patching up, so he transferred his pigs to a hastily constructed enclosure under an old shed. The mother pig began rooting around and turned up some ancient gold pieces. There was a legend that the farm had once been the site of an old monastery, and that in the troublous times of the eighth Henry the monks had hidden their treasure in the garden. What more natural than that John should think his pig had discovered the hiding place of the monkish gold? He gave up working his farm and devoted all his time to digging about the barnyard, pulling down old walls and generally taking up the profession of a treasure-seeker. His spare time was spent in looking over old manuscripts, trying to find some records of the former owners of the place. His business went to pieces, his men robbed him and he was eventually a pauper and went to die in the poorhouse—all on account of that pig who turned up the gold pieces.

Kitchener's Aversion For Monocles.

Monocles are plentiful in Cape Town, but in Johannesburg and Pretoria they are conspicuous only by their absence. "K" does not like them. Captain —— of a famous cavalry regiment, out of all the swell officers, alone refused to give up his monocle for anybody. It was the current report in the regiment that he wore it in bed and also when he took his bath.

One day Lord Kitchener met the single pane officer outside the Transvaal Hotel in Pretoria. "One minute, captain," said the commander, "may I ask if it is absolutely necessary for you to wear that glass in your right eye?"

"Yaas, certainly, Lord Kitchener—er—er—I could not see without it."

"I am sorry to hear that, Captain ——, as I intended to give you a staff appointment, but I must have men around me who can see well. Kindly report yourself for duty to the officer commanding the lines of communication."

The discomfited cavalry officer obeyed the instructions. Three months afterwards he was taken prisoner by the Boers, who stripped him of his clothing and sent him back to camp, still attired in his eye-glass, but in nothing else.

Could Not Speak English.

One of the most common faults among those who speak incorrectly is the misuse of English prepositions. "Different from" becomes "different to" in the popular speech of England, and, too often, "different than" in America. The New York "Times" mentions a queer juggling of prepositions, the achievement of two small boys.

"William," asked the teacher, "why were you absent from school this morning?"

"Oh, some'un stole me coat on me."

"What's that? Stole your coat 'on you'?"

"Aw, he can't talk English," said William's brother James. "He means some'un stole his coat off 'im."

"It says here, Samanthy, that Reverend Toogood was a saloon passenger on the 'Majestic.' Beats all how them preachers do cut up when they git away from hum."—"Judge."

De [illegible], the celebrated eye specialist from Germany will be in Hastings on Wednesday, Nov. 19th until Thursday, Nov. 20th, at the Coughlin House Parlors; in Norwood on Friday, Nov. 21st until Nov. 24th, at Dr. Moffatt's Drug Store; in Keene, on Tuesday, Nov. 25th, until Wednesday, Nov. 26th, at Dr. Harrison's Office; in Lakefield, on Thursday, Nov. 27th, until Saturday, Nov. 29th, 1902, at Dr. Burgess Drug Store. Those having weak or imperfect eyes should not fail to consult him.

Invaders of the Sanctum.

A united states newspaper once announced that a notorious thief, well known locally, had been lynched for horse-stealing. The man called at the office, sound in wind and limb, and demanded a withdrawal of the unfounded statement. "We cannot retract," said the editor; "we never do." "But the 'Mail,' which published a similar report, has withdrawn it," said the man. "That may be," replied the editor. "The report appearing in the 'Mail' was no doubt without foundation; but our news is always true. However, we don't mind saying in the next issue that the rope broke, and that you escaped with a slight contusion."

If a story told in journalistic circles be well founded, a somewhat similar incident occurred in London. One day a gentleman called at the office of a well-known newspaper and said to the editor, a famous man in his time: "Sir, it is announced in your paper that I am dead." "Well," replied the editor, "if it is in our paper it is correct." "It is not correct, for here I am alive," rejoined the other. "Well, it can't be helped," said the editor. "But I expect you to contradict it," said the gentleman. "No, I cannot do that," said the editor, "as we never contradict anything that appears in our paper. I will do the only thing I can do to bring you to life again. To-morrow I will put you in the list of births."

Sometimes the editor gets the better of these unpleasant intruders into his sanctum. A friend of ours was seated in his editorial chair in a Yorkshire town, quietly snipping paragraphs from contemporary journals, when in walked, unannounced, a big, ferocious-looking man with a heavy stick in his hand. "Is the editor in?" he asked. The menacing tone in which the question was put showed that he had not come to make a friendly call, to insert an advertisement, or to pay a subscription to the journal. "No, sir," replied the editor, with admirable presence of mind—"he has just gone out. Take a seat and read the paper; he will return in a minute." Down sat the indignant visitor, crossing his legs, with his club between them, and commenced reading a paper. In the meantime the editor quietly vanished downstairs, and at the landing he met another excited man, with a cudgel in his hand, who also asked if the editor was in. "Yes, sir," was the prompt response, "you will find him seated upstairs, reading a newspaper." The second visitor, on entering the room, commenced a violent assault upon the first, which was resisted with equal ferocity. The fight was continued till they both rolled to the foot of the stairs and had cudgelled each other to their hearts' content.

New Round Dances.

Three new round dances have just been approved and adopted by the Normal Association of Masters of Dancing of the United States and Canada, which recently met in New York. They are the Military Dip Waltz, the Olympia Schottische, and the Antler's Gavotte. The Military Dip Waltz is said to be the simplest and most graceful of the three. It has been predicted that this dance will sweep the country, and may take the place of the two-step in the matter of popularity. The movements are thus described: Take a position facing your partner, as if for waltzing. The left foot of both lady and gentleman should be in the fourth position, front; that is, about the length of one step in front of the right foot. At the beginning of the strain the gentleman dips forward upon his left and the lady backward upon her right; then both reverse the movement. The gentleman next makes a quick change, stepping forward on the left and then on the right. The balance is repeated in this position, the two dip movements having occupied just four measures in all. From this point glide into the waltz, waltzing four measures; then repeat the balance movement again, and so on ad libitum. The dance is simple, easy, and fascinating. The Olympia Schottische is designed for the more agile and spirited dancers. It is begun in the open position assumed for any schottische, the gentleman holding the lady's left hand with his right, the two facing one another. The lady starts with the right foot, the gentleman with the left. Dip backward with a graceful bend of knee, then bring the rear foot forward and rise on the toes. Repeat the movement with the other foot; glide four times to the right, repeat both movements, face forward and hop on left foot, kicking right with toe touching the floor; then hop on right, kicking left. Next assume the closed position and take four glides, a half turn, finishing with four more glides in the same direction. The Antler's Gavotte is made up entirely of familiar steps. This is begun in the closed position. March two measures, two-step four, take three glides to the left, finishing on the right foot, and waltz to the close of the strain. This is a new combination of the two old favorites, two-step and waltz, with the march step for variety.

A Valuable Clue.

"Please, sergeant," exclaimed a lady, as she rushed into the police station, half out of breath. Then she hesitated.

"What is it, ma'am?"

"I don't like to tell you."

"Proceed. Have you been robbed, or ——?"

"Robbed, sir; cruelly robbed. Last night someone stole a lot of clothes from off my line."

"Just give me a list of the articles stolen."

"I couldn't do that, for they took two pairs of ——"

"What?"

"Oh, no; I really couldn't say; but, Mr. Policeman, if you see anybody wearing them, arrest them."

With this brief explanation she departed, and now she is telling all the neighbors that the police force of this country are too stupid to detect crime, even when they get a clue at first hand.

Verestchagin, the artist who is painting a large picture of the Battle of San Juan Hill, with President Roosevelt as the central figure, was very much depressed over New York's sky-line, when he visited the metropolis fifteen years ago. He said that the occasional skyscraper was a painful blot on the landscape; that it made the sky-line one terrible thing to behold. The other day, after long contemplation of it and the scores of big buildings which lead down the Island of Manhattan, he is said to have turned to a friend and remarked: "Really" (a pause), "it begins to be grand."

Coming to Peterboro

Two railway men are to be transferred from Havelock to Peterborough, Mr. Wm. Nichol and Mr. W. S. Dodds. The former has sold his property in Havelock and will remove his family to town. He will have charge of the yard engine at the C.P.R. station. Mr. W. S. Dodds, who was C.P.R. agent at Havelock, is succeeded by Mr. Anderson, formerly of Pontypool.

When Buying Mining Stock Buy the Best

AN INVESTMENT IN THE

Pitkin Gold Belt Mining and Reduction Company

Which is Safe and Sure of Quick Returns, may Bring an Enormous Return at any Moment. It has the Possibilities of Rivaling the Great Mines of the Past

This Company has a mile on a true fissure vein, in the center of the Gunniston Gold Belt, Colorado, which is the "Mother" lode or dike, which has produced 55 per cent. more gold than the total output of the Cripple Creek district.

This Mine is no Prospect. Nor is it Waiting on Your Subscription to Buy Machinery or for Development.

After a careful examination by experts, Joseph M. Bradley, M. E., and Mr. George Arlett, A. I. M. E., Amalgamated Copper Company's expert in Chihuahua, Mexico, they advised the purchase of the property. The property had shallow development upon it, showing two ore shoots from which smelting ore had been shipped to the Buena Vista Smelter.

The Company purchased and paid for the latest improved machinery and has put a shaft down 250 feet and intend to carry it down 1000 feet. On the 150 foot level 200 feet of development has been made and an ore shoot has been encountered and blocked out for 67 feet, carrying values in gold from 2 to 9 ounces or $40 to $180 per ton. The cost of mining, hauling, freight and smelters charges will be between $12 and $15 per ton.

Ed. McCarthy & Co., bankers, guarantee a shipping mine of smelting ore running from 2 to 6 ounces in gold, or $40 to $120 per ton, by January 1st, 1903, or all funds will be returned to subscribers upon presentation of receipt issued by said bank.

Also to prospective purchasers of $500 worth of stock we are offering a free trip to Colorado and return. You investigate first and purchase afterward. Could you expect anything fairer than this?

The capital stock of this company is $1,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares of stock at $1 each, full paid and non-assessable. A portion of the treasury stock is now offered at

25 CENTS PER SHARE—PAR VALUE $1.00

In one payment, or 20 per cent. down and the balance in four equal monthly payments, for necessary expenditures and improvements on a shipping mine.

KERN COUNTY (SUNSET DISTRICT) OIL COMPANIES PAID

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS IN AUGUST ALONE

MORGAN IN THE OIL INDUSTRY--NEW YORK FINANCIER AT THE HEAD OF A $20,000,000 COMPANY TO EXPLOIT CALIFORNIA FIELDS

Bakersfield, Cal., Sept. 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan is about to identify himself with the oil business in California. On October 12, or a few days later, surveyors will be put into the field, and will run lines to the ocean from Sunset, Coaling, McKittrick, Midway and Kern River fields to determine by which route it is most feasible to transport oil to tide water. The surveys will run over the coast range at a number of points, and also will go down the San Joaquin valley parallel with the line of the Standard.

A company having a capitalization of $5,000,000 has been organized for the construction of lines, pumping stations, storage tanks, and the like. Mr. Morgan and his associates have also formed a separate company, capitalized at $30,000,000, half of which will be invested in proven ground and the other half turned into a reserve fund.

It is stated that the Morgan syndicate will be prepared to handle 2,000,000 barrels the first year, and will increase that amount at the rate of 1,000,000 a year until the whole demand of the market is met.

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY own and control a large tract of absolutely oil proven asphalt land in the very heart of the best oil producing land of Kern County, California, the district where flowing wells are situated. We have a bed of Liquid Asphalt underlying a portion of our lands. Our property is situated right at Sunset Station. A new line of railway is surveyed and will be constructed in a very short time, putting us not only in touch with Eastern cities, but in touch with tide-water, This, in addition to the railroad facilities we now have. Remember that we own our land—it is paid for and entirely free from debt.

ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL CO.'S GIGANTIC TRACT

will be developed and should prove a formidable rival for the new company.

PROFESSOR DR. RUD J. SCHIMPER, Analytical and Expert Chemist, of St. Paul, makes the following statement relative to the composition, what can be produced and the estimated profits of the Sunset Crude Oil. A copy of the original certificate can be seen at the office of the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co., which is in substance as follows:

"This is to certify that the undersigned, Dr. Rudolph J. Schimper, Chemist expert, member of Parisian Academy, according to analysis made from the crude oil furnished me by the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company, I find the following valuable products and with each beg to submit my estimate of its value:

1. LIQUID RUBBER—2,000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 1,800 lbs. of liquid rubber, value of which is from 25c. per lb. and up. (Estimated value $450.00.)
2. SOLID RUBBER—2,000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls) will produce 1,700 lbs. of solid rubber, value of which is from 30c. upwards. (Estimated value $450.00.)
3. FUEL BRIQUETTES—2,000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 2,000 lbs. (1 ton) of fuel briquettes, which, according to government tests made, is equivalent to two tons of best anthracite coal. (Estimated value $22.00)
4. ASPHALTUM—2,000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce ½ ton of asphaltum, value $25 to $35 per ton. 26 gal. of lubricating oil, value 50c. per gal. and upward. 40 gal. illuminating oil, value 10c per gal. and up. 60 gal. of distilled oil, value 5c. per gal. and upward. (Estimated value $54.50.)
5. SOAP—2000 lbs. (1 ton) of crude oil and filling will produce over 2,000 lbs. of soap, value 3c. per lb. and upward. (Estimated value $60.00.)

In my opinion many other valuable products can be obtained from the oil of that famous field.

Respectfully, DR. R. J. SCHIMPER, Chemist Expert."

THIS goes to show the immense profits that will accrue from our products when refined. We expect to commence Building Our Refinery in the very near future. The sale of the next allotment of stock will be made for that purpose. The largest flowing wells in California were brought in adjoining our property and their stock was taken off the market. We employ the best drillers who report rapid progress on our wells and we expect to bring in gushers equal, if not to excel any in the Sunset field. Our General Manager, Superintendent and Drillers, all are experienced oil men. The officers of our company are all thorough, competent and efficient men who have always made a success of their undertaking in life and who will see that the welfare of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company is furthered, portected and promoted to the most advantageous extent possible.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS SHOULD BE PAID STOCKHOLDERS.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS should be paid to the stockholders of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company when their property is fully developed, their refinery equipped and in full operation. ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS was paid by Kern County Oil Companies during the month of August alone.

SIX MILLION BARRELS is the consuming capacity of the Southern Pacific Railway engines, which are now equipped for burning oil. Outside of this consider other railway lines, smelters, factories, steamships, stationery engines, which are all heavy consumers of fuel oil and last but not least, hotels and private dwellings are falling in line with the procession in the use of fuel oil.

A GOOD REASON WHY YOU Should Invest in the stock of St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company. More fortunes have been made in oil than any other business. Consider the immense amount of money the Standard Oil Company has made for its fortunate stockholders, and the California oil companies have done better in proportion to their capitalization than the Standard Oil Company. Here is what $100 has accomplished for those who invested that amount in the following California companies in the beginning of their career:

Home Whittier $1,000 on an investment of $100.
Kern returned $2,200 on an investment of $100.
Peerless returned $1,800 on an investment of $100.
Dillon returned $2,500 on an investment of $100.
New York returned $30,000 on an investment of $100.
Union returned $150,000 on an investment of $100.
Home returned $50,000 on an investment of $100.

THERE is no reason in the world why the St. Paul and Sunset Company's oil holdings and property, when developed and handled, should not bring like returns

CONTRARY to the general supposition the earth is the repository of all mineral wealth. When it is known and demonstrated beyond a question of a doubt where its wealth reposes and you put your money up to take it out, your money is invested. Hence you are an investor, not a speculator. A proven oil producing property does not draw its profits from the people but creates new wealth. It is therefore an investment.

Wonderful Increase in Value of Oil Stocks.

The time will come in the near future when stock in St. Paul and Sunset Oil Co., should bring prices equal to the last.

WE CLAIM NOTHING WE CANNOT PROVE TO BE TRUE

BRIEFLY, OUR PROPOSITION IS THIS: THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY owns its immense tract of proven Oil Land—without a penny of incumbrance. The property is located in the most wonderful and richest oil producing section in the world, in the famous Sunset District of Kern County, California. Other Oil Companies in Kern county have paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in dividends—and today their stock cannot be bought at any price. These companies in many instances have less property, and in some cases are only lessors, not owning refinery, tanks, lines, etc.

A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THIS STOCK WILL BE SOLD AT 35c. PER SHARE, PAR VALUE $1.00

BUY NOW. THIS STOCK WILL BE ADVANCED TO 50c WITHIN THE NEXT 30 DAYS

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY will erect their own refinery, etc. are now owners of the property they are developing, employ the best drillers in the [illegible] State of California. The manager is an old and experienced oil man who has been connected with large California companies. The officers are all successful and reliable business men, who are investors—the same as every other stockholder. And the company, with plenty of ready capital, proposes to make the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co. a leader in the field and to develop their property to the fullest extent that money and brains will permit.

The first orders received will be the first ones to be filled. In case we are unable to fill your orders at 35c. your money will be refunded. Send Orders and Remittances to

STOCK MARKETS

Intimations the Worst Over

New York, Nov. 14—Wednesday's market displayed marked strength after a weak opening. Apparently made as low prices as possible. Thursday witnessed still further strength, showing prices of from three to eight points higher for the average list than the low prices of the week, all of which was in direct conformity with these market letters. Should the market, as it probably will, enjoy a still further rally, it will be more than likely that it will be followed up by another set back, which will offer fresh opportunities for fresh purchases of stocks, consequently it will be likely advisable on the rally to dispose for the time being of such stocks as were purchased at lower figures, taking the chance of re-securing them at concessions. It looks as if one of the larger bull interests in the market had within a week past been compelled to do some tall liquidating. If this be correct it will prove immensely to the interest of the market, as it was more or less of a menace, one interest being so largely and heavily extended. The larger pools and combinations have added enormously to their stock holdings, and when the financial ship straightens up will be greatly interested in aiding any advance movement. One must expect more or less feverishness in the market after the recent turbulence; as well expect a man recovering from fever to go out and do as hitherto accustomed as to expect the market to have a long and immediate sustained advance; time, and not so much of it at that, will straighten matters out however.

Looking over the list, everything at present is low, though some things are probably better to buy than others. Any stocks upon the list if bought at present and held ought to afford a splendid profit-making opportunity. Personally, we prefer the standard shares to the lower-priced stocks. When the upward movement again starts, they will make the best record advances. The great crops garnered this year are yet ours for disposal and have to be hauled. The prices for them will be good. They are worth over five hundred millions more than the same crops were the previous year. This fact should not be lost sight of.

Summary—After a feverish and vacillating opening the rumor-mongers got to work and the bears attacked the market all along the line. Hardly any stock was overlooked. Prices fell rapidly, accelerated by stop orders and people sold indiscriminately. Values cut no figure whatsoever. Declines cut into many margins compelling sales. The field for the bargain-hunter and investor is a large and magnificent one at present. Stocks are now selling well below their intrinsic values. How much lower prices may be recorded, no man can positively determine. The western element, recently bullish upon the stock market, appears to be the objective point of the bear campaign in the market. Money closed 6 per cent. Sales 1,333,500.

Oil Strike in Kent County

(Press Despatch)

Chatham, Nov. 12—There is as yet little new in the oil situation, which is the one topic of conversation. Accounts of the Raleigh well's capacity have not been one whit exaggerated. Oil men are swarming here, some coming even from California and great expectations are entertained as to future explorations. A company which has fourteen wells at Northwood, six miles from here, on the line of the Grand Trunk, hold leases for lands adjacent to the gusher, and will begin to bore at once in their territory. The gusher is situated on the apex or crown of a sudden elevation or dome in the rock formation, and oil experts say this is a sure sign of permanency and the reason for the unusual pressure manifested.

Mining Investment Without Precedent

A SMALL SUM INVESTED NOW SHOULD PROVIDE COMFORTABLE INCOME FOR MANY YEARS

The LARDEAU Mines, Capitalized at Only $100,000 00, Should Produce $270,000.00 Net Revenue Per Year—These Figures are Based on the Reports of Well-Known Mining Engineers—Present Price of the Stock Only 10 Cents a Share, but Subscriptions Will Have to be Made Promptly, as the Price Will Soon Advance to Very Much Higher Figures.

We do not hesitate to say that in our judgment stock in the LARDEAU MINES LIMITED, offers a most magnificent opportunity for investment.

There is every reason to believe that the LARDEAU MINES will pay a profit of 270 per cent. PER YEAR, within a short time, and will continue to yield such profits for more than a lifetime.

These are stupendous figures, but we believe them to be absolutely conservative. Our reasons are based on these facts:

PROOF OF NO STOCK JOBBINC

In the first place the capitalization is only $100,000. This low capitalization shows upon the face of it that the company is honestly organized—that there is no suspicion of stock-jobbing, which has too often ruined many otherwise honest companies.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY

The property is located in the celebrated Lardeau mining division of West Kootenay, British Columbia. The property owned by this company consists of three full claims, embracing an extent of 156 acres—mineral claims in British Columbia are 1,500x1,500 feet—equal to 51 acres in each extent. Three strong parallel ore veins run through the property from end to end, a distance of of 4,500 feet. If placed end to end this would give us 12,500 feet, equal to a continuous ore body over two and a half miles in length. The values are in gold, silver, copper and lead, and run from $25.00 to $77.00 per ton of 2,000 pounds. These results show indications of permanent values of the most convincing kind.

GROSS VALUE OF SHIPMENTS..

The gross value of shipments of ore aggregating 6,151,601 pounds from twelve mines in the Lardeau, all situated near the property owned by this company, was $461,410.81, equal to a return per ton of over $146.00. The property owned by this company shows up equally as well as any of these more fully developed mines, and will, we are convinced, shortly rank among the best in the Lardeau division.

READ THESE FIGURES CAREFULLY

In a very conservative statement issued by the officers of the company, appears the following:

"In order to show why we are confident we are right, we will estimate our ore values at $50.00 per ton, a little over one-third of the average ore values of the entire Lardeau mining division. We will also base our calculations on a daily output of 30 tons—a small amount compared with the extent of our property and the size of its ore bodies. We will allow $10.00 per ton for mining, transportation (a few miles only) and smelting charges. The profits after making a reasonable reduction for incidentals and surplus, work out as follows:

30 tons at $50.00 per ton...		$1,500
Less $10.00 per ton mining, transportation, and reduction charges		300
Net daily income......		1,200
Say for 300 days per year...... ...		300
Total net yearly income...		360,000
Deduct for incidental expenses, $3 per ton...	45,000
Deduct for company's surplus account $3 per ton.	45,000	90,000
Total yearly net earnings......		$270,000

which sum is equal to 270 per cent. per annum on our capital stock of $100,000.

"This estimate is made on the basis of a small output compared to the extent of our property and the splendid facilities it affords for economical mining and on the operation of the mine for 300 days per year only, so that anyone can see at a glance that we are not overestimating in any particular, especially when the output of mines similiarly situated, and with ore bodies of less extent than ours, ship hundreds of tons each day. There is no good reason why our property, when fully developed—which will be within six months to a year—should not ship several hundreds of tons of ore per year, but we are basing our calculations on the immediate future in presenting the above estimate.

"We are now within seventy to eighty feet of the main ore veins, and assays show values as high as $77.00 per ton. The average returns from twelve mines in our district, according to Government records, which are always conservative, run as high as $146.40 a ton in gold, silver, copper and lead.

HONEST, LEGITIMATE MANAGEMENT

We know the men connected with the management of the LARDEAU MINES, and have known them for years. We know that they never were and never will be connected with any but honest and legitimately conducted enterprises.

REPORT OF MINING ENGINEER.

The property has been thoroughly examined by well known mining engineers and their reports have borne out every statement that has been made by the company. Mr. H. O. McClymont, one of the last engineers to make a report says in conclusion:

The average assays are most encouraging, considering the great width and continuancy of the leads across the country with such great width and prominence of the surface, and judging from other properties in the near vicinity, some of which are on the same level and have developed very rich ore bodies The LARDEAU MINES are as good as any, if not the best, in the vicinity, and I verily believe with a nominal expenditure, they should be made dividend-paying in a short time, and I would strongly recommend extensive developments towards that end. Signed, H. O. McClymont, Mining Engineer."

SMALL AMOUNT OF MONEY NEEDED.

As Mr. McClymont says in his report, only a small sum of money is needed to complete the development work and put these mines on a dividend paying basis.

We want to raise about $10,000 from the sale of shares, this money to be used to complete the work just specified.

A very short time will be required to raise this amount of money for this magnificent property, and then the sale of stock will be discontinued.

READ THIS CAREFULLY.

The present price of the stock is 10 cents per share.

The price will be advanced to 15 cents per share very soon, and then 20 cents per share.

The company reserves the right to withdraw the stock from the market without notice.

TWO YEARS AGO—AND NOW.

We believe that there are 90 chances in 100 of the LARDEAU MINES proving a BONANZA. One property in the vicinity of the Lardeau was recently sold for $600,000 cash, and stock in addition. Two years ago it was not nearly as good a prospect as the Lardeau is today.

The LARDEAU MINES, LIMITED, is a small, close corporation and the profits will consequently be large to each stockholder.

Those who are fortunate enough to buy stock at the low price of 10 cents can calculate on an annual income of $135.00 from an investment of $100.00 in other words, you would get your principal back and $35.00 besides every year.

YOU CAN PAY IN INSTALMENTS.

Write us for further particulars.

We will allow you to purchase a block of stock and pay for in in monthly instalments. Before your stock is paid for you will see it double in value—perhaps more.

We urge prompt action, because of the approaching increase of 15 cents per share, which may occur any day. The safest thing to do is to send us $10, which will reserve the stock you desire at 10 cents per share. Then you can investigate the matter carefully and fully and if you are not completely satisfied we will return your money.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

A Bazaar

The Faithful Workers' Mission Band of St. Paul's church intend holding a bazaar on Nov. 28th, in the school room. Refreshments will be served during the afternoon and evening.

A Clever Hen

Mr. James Dolan has a hen that has been working overtime during the present year, and has just brought out a third batch of chickens, having hatched them under the verandah. Mr. Dolan says that his hen is of Irish descent, and believes in raising large families.

Died from His Injuries

Mr. W. J. McCallum received a letter yesterday from Cordova mines stating that John Henderson, who met with an accident there on Monday, died on Thursday. A sister of deceased was formerly employed in Mr. McCallum's restaurant here. No particulars are to hand further than stated above.

An Open Switch

The yard engine of the C.P.R. ran off the track near Hunter street bridge yesterday. It is thought that some young lads had opened the swith thoughtlessly. The switch is on the small trestle near Hunter street, and had the engine not been running light and therefore slowly it would have pitched off into the Dawson property, and a bad smash up would have resulted. If such should have occurred it would have resulted in the severe punishment of the young culprits. Better not meddle with railway property, boys.

SCHOOL TEACHERS LEARN

Just Like Other People

Bad food and overwork wrecks many a life, but the right food makes sure and complete happiness, for one must be happy if perfectly well.

"Grape-Nuts saved my life, and changed me from a nervous, sick, despondent woman to a healthy, strong and cheerful one," writes Mrs. Alice Riegel of Pontiac, Ills. "I had not been well for several years, and I thought, as did my friends, that 'my days were numbered.' My ill health was caused from drinking coffee, eating improper food and overwork in the school room; I had become very weak, tired and nervous and nothing I ate agreed with me. Medicine made me more nervous and impaired my digestive organs.

It was with difficulty that a neighbor induced me to try Grape-Nuts and I liked it from the first with thick cream and sugar. I lived on it exclusively with Postum Food Coffee until my digestion was so much improved I could eat other foods. My friends soon noticed the improvement in my looks, and I am now healthy, strong and happy. I attribute the change in my health solely to the change of diet.

Husband and I both like Grape-Nuts and Postum I think they are the most healthful and strengthening of all foods and drinks and suitable for the weak as well as for the strong.

A Close Call

Messrs. Smith and Stanton, of town, were in Lindsay on Thursday. On their return journey both jumped off the train while in motion at Omemee, and Joe Smith had a very narrow escape from being crippled for life. He struck the bank and was thrown down in such a shape that both his feet lay on the track. A wheel of one of the cars brushed Smith's feet from the track, and he miraculously escaped injury.

Shot 24 Deer

The Westlake and Brooke party of hunters, who have been popping their rifles at the deer in the neighborhood of Buckhorn for the past two weeks, returned to town last evening. The Westlake party shot eleven deer, while the Brooks party went them two better, killing thirteen deer. It is asserted that the Brooks party used something stronger than Brook water to draw the deer within range, and thus gained an advantage over the Westlake party of hunters.

As Popular as Ever

. Bengough, the great cartoonist, appeared in the opera house last night, under the auspices of the Charlotte street Methodist church. He was greeted with a full house, and his excellent portrayal of local characters were highly appreciated. Others may imitate Bengough and make some happy hits at times, but in his line he has no equal as a cartoonist and entertainer.

Promoted

We congratulate Mr. Charles Stringer, town, on his promotion to the position of district manager of the Bell Telephone Company. Mr. Stringer has been local manager here for some time past, and is deservedly popular with Peterborough patrons of the 'phone. Mr. Noecker, who has been assistant manager here, has gone to British Columbia. Mr. Stringer's successor in Peterborough, we understand, will be a Mr. Boon, from Orangeville.

Free to Our Subscribers

Subscribers to the Daily and also to the Weekly Times who will pay up arrears and also pay a year in advance, will be presented with a magnificent picture of the Coronation of Their Majesties, King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra—(size 22x28, printed in 14 colors). They are splendid prints, and will serve as momentos of that great historical event. The picture is now to be seen at the Times Bookstore.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—The second payment from subscribers to the new rink is now due.

—Temperance sermons will be preached in the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches on Sunday, Nov. 26th.

—The union barber shops have decided to close at 8 p.m. each evening, except Saturday, after Dec. 1st.

—A man was charged at the police court yesterday with pocket picking. He was remanded until to-day.

—Mr. Chris Graham mourns the loss of a splendid terrier pup. Poison was administered to the pup by some unknown parties without even a doctor's permit —The Lakefield cheese factory has closed for the season. 2,200 cheese, weighing a total of 196,000, were manufactured during the year, and as a result about $20,000 found its way into the pockets of the patrons.

—Messrs. R. H. Kells and J. D. Pentland, two of the members of the Snowden hunting party, returned home from the Parry Sound district yesterday. The other members of the party are expected to return with the deer on Monday.

—The death occurred on November 10 at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, of Anne Elizabeth Haviland, widow of the late Hon. Thos. Heath Haviland, ex-Lieut.-Governor of Prince Edward Island. The maiden name of the deceased who was in her 88th year, was Grubbe. She was an aunt of Mr. R. W. Grubbe, town

THE DRUGLESS CURE

Scientific Massage seeks to restore normal conditions, where there is functional derangement, by means of magnetic aura, created by friction. It does not seek to supplant medicines, but to be an auxiliary; but is often a specific where medicines fail to assimilate. In most forms of nervous disease, rheumatism, neuralgia, imperfect circulation or indigestion, paralysis, uterine and urinary complaints, it is in most cases an immediate relief. More than three hundred cures have been certified in the Ottawa Valley by Dr. Titus and his pupils in the past eight months. Diseases diagnosed without cost, orders by mail or 'phone to see parties at residence given prompt attention.

DEATHS

GRUBBE—At Charlottetown, P.E.I., Anne Elizabeth Grubbe, in her 88th year, widow of the late Hon. Heath Haviland, ex-Lieut.-Governor of Prince Edward Island.

Deceased was an aunt of Mr. R. W. Grubbe, late of the local staff of Toronto Bank.

Merry Sons of England

Notwithstanding the counter attraction at the opera house, the Sons of England had a delightful concert at their hall on Hunter street last night. The members with their wives and families and many outsiders were present, and the gathering was thoroughly representative of Old Merry England's home circles. The program provided was an excellent one, and as the majority present were either English or of English descent, the good things provided for the supper previous to the concert were not allowed to spoil —The Marmora Herald, in referring to the program at a concert at Cordova, says: Miss DeReghem, of Peterborough, is a cultured singer and touched a tender responsive chord in the listeners. The banjo and guitar duets by Miss Dobbin and Mr. Henderson were good and the recitations by Miss White, of Peterborough, caused a good deal of amusement. Master Reggie Deacon was also appreciated in several high class selections. This was the foreign element in the programme.

THE FIRSTBORN.

Why is it that the firstborn child is so often the healthiest of a family of children? The reason seems to suggest itself. As child follows child the mother has less and less vitality; often not enough for herself and none, therefore, for her child.

Expectant mothers who use Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription find that it keeps them in vigorous health. They eat well, sleep well and are not nervous. When baby comes its advent is practically painless, and the mother is made happy by the birth of a healthy child. If you would be a healthy mother of healthy children use "Favorite Prescription."

"I will be very glad to say a few words for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. P. B. Douglas, of Mansonville, Brome Co., Quebec. "During the first four months, when I looked forward to becoming a mother, I suffered very much from nausea and vomiting, and I felt so terribly sick I could scarcely eat or drink anything. I hated all kinds of food. At this time I wrote to Dr. Pierce, and he told me to get his 'Favorite Prescription' and a bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I got a bottle of each, and when I had taken them a few days, I felt much better, and when I had taken hardly three parts of each bottle I felt well and could eat as well as any one, and could do my work without any trouble (I could not do anything before). I feel very thankful to Dr. Pierce for his medicine, and I tell all who tell me they are sick, to get these medicines, or write to Dr. Pierce."

Those who suffer from chronic diseases are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A BEET SUGAR FACTORY

The Manufacture of Sugar from Beets a A Great Success

Mr. William Fair, who has been in Hamilton for some days, returned to town last week. While in the west Mr. Fair had a chat with Mr. Miller, the engineer of the new Deering Company's factory, who has devoted many years to the manufacture of sugar beets. Mr. Miller is an expert in this line, having been chief engineer with the Holland Sugar Company, of Holland, Michigan, and superintendent of several other factories in different parts of the United States.

Mr. Miller thinks that a factory in Peterborough would be a great success, especially as our land is so suitable for growing beets. It is not unlikely that he may be induced to visit the town and look over the ground personally with a view to advising the local company in the erection of its buildings, etc.

SISTERS OF CHARITY

RELY ON PE-RU-NA TO FIGHT

CATARRH WHEREVER LOCATED IN THE SYSTEM.

MISS BEATRIX CALLAM.

Interesting Letters from Catholic Institutions.

THE SISTERS GOOD WORK.

In every country of the civilized world the Sisters of Charity are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs. With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease, these wise and prudent sisters have found Peruna a never-failing safeguard.

A letter recently received by Dr. Hartman from Sister Beatrix B. Callam, 410 W. Thirtieth street, New York, reads as follows:

"I cannot say too much in praise of Peruna. Eight bottles of it cured me of catarrh of the lungs of four years' standing, and I would not have been without it for anything. It helped several Sisters of coughs and colds and I have yet to find one case of catarrh that it does not cure."—Sister Beatrix.

From a Catholic institution in Central Ohio comes the following recommend from the Sister Superior.

"Some years ago a friend of our institution recommended to us Dr. Hartman's Peruna as an excellent remedy for the influenza of which we then had several cases which threatened to be of a serious character.

"We began to use it and experienced such wonderful results that since then Peruna has become our favorite medicine for influenza, catarrh, cold, cough and bronchitis."

Another recommend from a Catholic institution of one of the Central States written by the Sister Superior reads as follows:

"A number of years ago our attention was called to Dr. Hartman's Peruna, and since then we have used it with wonderful results for grip, coughs, colds and catarrhal diseases of the head and stomach.

"For grip and winter catarrh especially it has been of great service to the inmates of this institution.

SISTERS OF CHARITY

All Over the United States Use Pe-ru-na for Catarrh.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in the Southwest reads as follows:

A Prominent Mother Superior Says:

"I can testify from experience to the efficiency of Peruna as one of the very best medicines, and it gives me pleasure to add my praise to that of thousands who have used it. For years I suffered with catarrh of the stomach, all remedies proving valueless for relief. Last spring I went to Colorado, hoping to be benefited by a change of climate and while there a friend advised me to try Peruna. After using two bottles I found myself very much improved. The remains of my old disease being now so slight, I consider myself cured, yet for a while I intend to continue the use of Peruna. I am now treating another patient with your medicine. She has been sick with malaria and troubled with leucorrhea. I have not a doubt that a cure will be speedily effected."

These are samples of letters received by Dr. Hartman from the various orders of Catholic Sisters throughout the United States.

The names and addresses to these letters have been withheld from respect to the Sisters but will be furnished upon request.

One-half of the diseases which afflict mankind are due to some catarrhal derangement of the mucous membrane lining some organ or passage of the body.

A remedy that would act immediately upon the congested mucous membrane restoring it to its normal state, would consequently cure all these diseases. Catarrh is catarrh wherever located, whether it be in the head, throat, lungs, stomach, kidneys, or pelvic organs. A remedy that will cure it in one location will cure it in all locations.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

THE GREAT AMERICAN INVASION OF CANADA

The Wonderful Influx of American Farmers Into the Canadian Northwest.

What an American Newspaper says About the Immigrating—Great Future for Canada.

Ottawa, Nov. 15—According to the official returns dealing with the subject of immigration it appears that during the fiscal year which ended on June 30 last, no less than 22,000 residents of the United States abandoned their native or adopted country, and with bag and baggage, and with about $2,000,000 marched across the border into Canada, to take up their abode and become permanent settlers there. A later official report announced the fact that this immigration is increasing at the rate of 12,000 ofr the last four months, and on the authority of the various agents it is reasonably estimated that in the course of the next year this number will at least be doubled, says the New York Times.

The majority of these migrators are agriculturalists from the north western states. Many of them are citizens of the United States by birth, excellent farmers of good and thrifty habits — others are grown up members of these and other families, young married couples, and a sprinkling of tradespeople. To these may be added a large number of farm and other laborers, and domestic servants, and in the trail of all follows a motley crowd of nomadic foreigners, mostly recent arrivals in America, including Swedes, Finns, Austrians, Poles, some Italians and Germans, and fewer Irish and Hungarians.

CANADA'S NORTHWEST.

The vast tracts of very productive grain growing, cattle raising, butter and cheese making lands comprised within the Northwest Territories of Canada have not long since been really discovered, and it is only within recent years that the Dominion and Provincial Governments in conjunction with local public companies and their respective agents have been enabled to publish the fact broadcast that there are such numberless unoccupied holdings obtainable in that district for merely nominal sums. The various agents located in the west especially have been most active lately in publishing and distributing the many alluring advantages existing for the agriculturist in the newly discovered expanse, and as the farmers from the United States are not altogether unacquainted with the neighboring land, and climatic conditions, these agents experience little difficulty in convincing them of the exceptional prospects and opportunities for the expeditious accumulation of a fortune This is amply evidenced by the present extraordinary migration. Moreover they know that, with a little difference in the nature of the climate, both countries are pretty much the same, and are only divided by an imaginary national line — the inhabitants on both sides are to all intents and purposes, one people, most speaking the same language — accustomed to the same habits and mode of life and enjoying virtually similar political freedom.

HOW CANADIANS VIEW IT.

The great majority of Canadians are unquestionably very favorably disposed toward the new-comers. They admire their energy, perseverance, and assurance, their good nature and liberality. This admiration is ostensibly exhibited by the average Canadian's proneness to imitate his neighbor in manner, speech and dress.

For many obvious reasons the Canadians would be more pleased to have a greater influx of British immigrants, and no effort has been spared or is being spared to induce a larger importation of new settlers from the old country. But unfortunately agriculture in Britain is on the wane, and the ancient British tiller of the soil is a man of the past. The old-fashioned farmer of the old country who was wont to stay at home personally and assiduously to farm his own little homestead, and be satisfied with a plain and frugal living and modest attire, has given way to the would-be "gentleman farmer."

What Canada wants is a hardy tiller of the soil, who can live and lead a simple, rural life, economically and modestly, and one who can adopt himself to the climatic conditions of the country as well as put up with the many inconveniences and necessary hardships connected with the development of virgin land. One also who will bring up and train his child to be a "chip of the old block."

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE EXODUS.

The affect of this great human transportation of United States citizens across the border has a more far-reaching significance than appears on the surface. The majority of the Canadian population at present is to be found in the eastern provinces, and they together practically govern the Dominion for the nonce. Ontario as yet counts for little, and the western states so far count for less. The result of a large and continuous immigration of United States citizens into the Northwest Territories of Canada must very materially affect the political balance of power in the Dominion within the next few years—in what way remains to be seen. Meanwhile there is no doubt that it must inevitably create a more cordial international relationship.

THREE SHOTS FIRED AT BELGIAN KING

Attempt on His Majesty's Life as He was Going to the Cathedral

Brussels, Nov. 15—Three shots were fired at the King of the Belgians this morning as his Majesty was proceeding to the Cathedral to attend a Te Deum in memory of the late Queen Marie Henriette. No one was hurt.

The man who fired the shots is an Italian. He stood in front of the Bank of Brussels on the Rue Royal. The other cartridges in his revolver proved to be blank, so it is presumed that those fired were equally harmless. The man was immediately arrested and the police had some difficulty in rescuing him from the hands of the crowd. He gave the name of Robini.

The Royal cortege consisted of several carriages, besides that of the King, containing the Count and Countess of Flanders, Prince and Princess Albert of Flanders, the Princess Clementine and aide de camp and ladies of honor.

STATEMENT OF MR. MITCHELL

To the Commission Sent Out by President Roosevelt

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 15.—The commission appointed by President Roosevelt to arbitrate the differences between the anthracite mine workers and their employers began the hearing of the miners' side of the case to-day. When the commission opened its session to-day the only evidence before it was the preliminary statement of Mr. Mitchell, in which he said:

"Of the 147,000 men and boys employed in the anthracite coal fields, 64,072 or 43 per cent., are employed on contract, or piece work; the remaining 82,-000, or 57 per cent., are employed by the hour, day, week or month. Of the 64,072 contract men, 37,804 are miners and 26,268 are miners' laborers.

DANGEROUS WORK.

"The work of a miner and a miners' laborer is extremely hazardous; in fact, it is more dangerous than employment in any other important industry in the world. The number of persons killed and injured is greater than in any other industry. Each day the anthracite coal mines are in operation 1 6-10 persons lose their lives, and three times as many are maimed, and yet these men receive less wages annually than are received by men performing precisely similar work in other fields, under more favorable and less hazardous conditions.

"The number of years a man can retain his health and strength in this occupation is limited. If he escapes death or injury by falls of rock or coal, he cannot escape attacks of miners' asthma. There is scarcely a mine worker who has not contracted this malady. The miners are compelled to work in powder smoke, in foul air, many of them in water, and their work is difficult and exhausting. Reputable insurance companies will not issue policies to this class of workmen. The risks are so great that the premiums would be prohibitive to men whose earnings are so low. The entire 20 per cent. which they demand as an increase in their wages would not suffice to carry an insurance of one thousand dollars.

"It seems but fair and just that wages paid these classes of workmen should be as high, if not higher, than wages paid to skilled artisans in other industries. It is certainly not unjust to ask that these miners should receive as high wages as are paid to miners in the bituminous coalfields, in the silver and gold mines, or in the iron ore and copper mines, all of which work is less hazardous, freer from liability to disease, requiring less experience and less skill, and is better paid than labor in the anthracite coalfields."

AN EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

In supporting the demand for the reduction of the hours of day laborers, Mr. Mitchell showed that it amounted practically to a demand for 20 per cent. increase of compensation for 83,000 men or 57 per cent. of all mine employes. He said further that the eight-hour day is the standard working day in the mining industry. Eight hours constitute a day's work in the coal mines of Great Britain; in all the silver, gold, and copper mines, and in the bituminous coal mines in the different States of this country.

FAIR SYSTEM OF WEIGHING.

Defending the third demand, that coal shall be weighed, and paid for by weight and that 2,240 pounds shall constitute a ton, Mr. Mitchell declared that the present method of measuring the coal produced by the miners in the Lackawanna, Wyoming and Lehigh regions has been the source of more discontent than any other of the many injustices imposed upon the miners, and there can be no contentment among these workers until an honest system has been adopted. Paying for coal by the car or by a ton weighing from 2,740 to 3,150 pounds is a flagrant injustice, he declared.

Mr. Mitchell continued: "The anthracite companies, not satisfied with an extra legal ton of from 2,740 to 3,150 pounds, have a system of docking, through which they appropriate additional part of the miners' earnings. A miner is docked all the way from 500 to 1,000 pounds upon a car, as a penalty for loading impurities, for which he has already been penalized to the extent of from 700 to 900 pounds in excess of impure weight. In other words, he is punished twice for the same offence."

SETTLE DISPUTES.

Mr. Mitchell then took up the fourth demand of the miners, for a trade agreement, with the necessary machinery for the adjustment of local grievances. He outlined the history and policy of the United Mine Workers of America, and explained that by its constitution the anthracite and bituminous mine workers had some rule for the local government of local affairs.

"The only manner," he said, "in which the national organization is permitted to interfere is that before a strike is inaugurated by the district organization the approval of the president of the National Union must be obtained; but the president of the national organization has no authority to inaugurate a strike. Thus the coal mine operators are afforded a greater measure of protection against a strike than they would have under a separate and independent organization."

THE UNION'S RESPONSIBILITY.

As to the responsibility of the mine workers' organization Mr. Mitchell said: "At the present time the United Mine Workers of America has contracts with the operators of fourteen States and district, fixing the amount the miners shall receive per ton, the amount the various classes of labor shall receive per day, the number of hours which shall constitute a day's work and the methods and machinery for the adjustment of local grievances by joint conference with the mine owners. These are mutual contracts, which are advantageous to both miner and operator, and protect the public against the effects of strikes or lockouts. The reports of the United States Government on strikes in the mining industry show that the number and duration of strikes has been materially reduced each year since the system of joint conference and mutual agreement has been introduced.

"The trade agreement has proved effective in restraining workmen from engaging in local or general strikes. There have been no strikes of any magnitude in any of the coal mining States in which trade agreements exist. We seek to establish the same method of adjusting wage differences in the anthracite field."

PLEA FOR CHILDREN.

Mr. Mitchell concludes with a plea for the children. He said: "Our little boys should not be forced into the mines and breakers so early in life; our little girls should not be compelled to work in the mills and factories at an age when they should be in school. These children are the future citizens of our nation; their parents should be enabled to earn wages sufficiently high to give them at least a common school education, so as to equip them better for the grave responsibilities which will ultimately devolve upon them."

We all know what nomination meetings amount to. As a general rule they are poorly attended, and it is only after the duly elected mayor and aldermen have been in control of civic affairs for some months that we hear the kicks coming. For this reason we believe the free and independent taxpayers appreciate the efforts of The Times in giving them a chance to privately express their opinions as to who shall be the man to govern our civic affairs for the year 1903. The positions should seek the men, and not the men the positions. Every man chosen should be the people's choice and not the nominee or choice of any "clique." There are no great issues yet in view in the coming municipal contest, and all that appears to be necessary is to choose men of administrative ability; economical men; men who will guard the corporation interests as carefully as if the shillings and dollars were coming out of their own pockets, and at the same time, be always ready to consider and weigh carefully every proposition for the town's welfare and advancement.

It is for the people to choose such men, and The Times invites all electors to record their opinions through this journal as to the men whom they believe will faithfully and well manage the affairs of this town next year. We would also like your letters on the subject.

REVENGE OF UNION MINERS

Gates of Non-Union Men Painted White as a Brand for All to see.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Nov. 15—The union mine workers in the town of Lattimer, have distinguished themselves from the men who worked during the strike by painting the gates in front of the non-union men's houses white. As none of the fences and few of the houses of Lattimer are painted, the distinguishing mark cannot be avoided. Attempts to paint it out only make matters worse.

MANY KILLED IN GUATEMALA

Volcanic Eruption Wiped Out Villages and Destroyed Coffee Plantations.

San Francisco, Nov. 15—News received today to the Pacific mail steamer Newport confirms the report received last Sunday of much damage done in Guatemala, on the morning of Oct. 25 as the result of a violent eruption of the volcano of Santa Maria in Quezaltenango district, on the seaward slope of a small range of mountains seperating Quezaltenango from the port of Champerico.

Details are being suppressed by the Government, but it is said that many lives were lost as the result of the fall of ashes; thousands of horses, cattle and other animals were killed and rich coffee plantations ruined. The loss of the new crop of coffee will amount to 15,000 tons.

Americans in Champerico said the towns of Palmar, San Felipe, Colombia and Coatepec had been destroyed with probably great loss of life.

The ashes thrown from the volcano still lay over the plantations to a depth of six or seven feet, and the houses had been crushed by the weight of mud and stones.

Falling ashes and floating pumice stone were encountered by the Newport at sea 130 miles away from the volcano.

PLAIN MAN FOR HUSBAND

Matrimonially Speaking This is Heyday of His Popularity

London, Nov. 15—As the result of examining a very extensive collection of portraits of the newly-married obtained from the illustrated papers, the present writer has come to the conclusion that the plain man is just now in the heyday of his popularity, matrimonially speaking.

It would seem that while the handsome man is charming to dally with, some one whose features are homely indeed even ugly, is regarded as the wiser matrimonial venture.

The wives of the modern Adonis appear to have discovered, in fact, that by her own act she created a problem that brings to her many hours of uneasiness, if not of actual pain.

Her husband lives upon the approbation of others. Her own worship of him may for a while suffice to satisfy him; but later on he will assuredly heed that of the outside world. And the outside world is only too pleased to grant him all the admiration he requires. Teas, dinner parties, picnics, skating meetings demand his presence constantly, but make no point of his being there at all, a fact she quickly discerns, and proportionately resents. Should she absent herself from such gaities, she imagines her husband making himself too agreeable to this pretty woman or that, and should she become a hanger-on of his popularity she is all the while seething with hatred for her equivocal position.

Much of the vanity of the handsome man arises from the indiscreet adoration showered upon him in childhood. As he grows up he is made much of outside the family circle because it is pleasant to have in a room full of guests as many handsome men as possible. And the sequel? Is it not obvious? When he fell in love, it was not altogether because his choice was fair and sweet, but because, she, too, paid him the tribute of admiration.

WANTS GOOD MEN

Now, it is all very well to put a man on a pedestal and wreathe him with bays before marriage; but what a woman wants after marriage is a good and serviceable article in the way of a husband.

It is excessively annoying to a woman always to have to play second fiddle pianissimo when the beauty question is uppermost. Breathes there the wife in any household who dislikes some little passing mention made from time to time about her good looks and charming individuality? But the wife of an Adonis obtains little of this sweet incense.

Sweep away this picture and contemplate the companion one of the plain husband. His object is to make life a bed of roses for his wife and family. Unselfishly the plain man toils.

The plain husband "puts up" with things. Did ever a handsome one brook the domestic trials he cheerfully endures? Somehow the handsome man is expected to regard calamities from quite a different standpoint. Nay, more, the ugly, good humored head of a household is expected to be the handy man of the family. If a chimney smokes, his plain features must be begrimed in at attempt to get at the root of the mischief; if a pipe leaks, his red and uncultured paws are quite good enough to probe the defect to its very depths. What handsome curled darling could possibly be expected to risk his good looks by performing such nasty tasks as these?

AMERICAN CAR SHORTAGE WORSE THAN CANADIAN

Present Famine in Rolling Stock to be Discussed

Montreal, Nov. 15—Mr. W. H. Rosevear, general car accountant of the Grand Trunk Railway System, has gone to New York to attend a meeting of the car service officials of the Eastern trunk lines. The Canadian Pacific would have been represented had it not been for the press of business and the number of officials out on special service.

The principal business to be discussed at the meeting will be the present car famine, which is daily becoming worse all over the continent. The Canadian roads do not appear to be so helplessly congested as some of their neighbors to the south.

Taking the Canadian Pacific as an example, today they are only short 2,000 cars, while at this time, last year, the number they lacked went up to over double this figure.

"We could very well do with 2,000 more cars," said a Canadian Pacific car service official today, "but we would also at the same time require additional motive power to handle them. It is not only a shortage of cars, all the roads are suffering from, they are equally short of locomotives, and it is for this reason that so many orders for locomotives are being placed in Scotland.

SITUATION OF G.T.R.

The Grand Trunk people say that while the shortage is not as acute as last year, they could do with five thousand additional cars. The Intercolonial is said to be worse off than any Canadian road; it has always been short of freight rolling stock, and this year is unable to furnish cars to exchanging systems. Taken as a whole, the situation, it is claimed, is 50 per cent. easier than it was a year ago in Canada, thirty-three per cent. of which is represented by new stock The Canada Atlantic is reported to be about normal in its car supply.

The Canadian Pacific is turning out about 25 cars a day and when the new shops are completed, this number will be triplicated. Another material reason for the delay in returning cars has been the lack of local labor to handle the freight, and on account of the industrial boom, the want of terminal and siding facilities.

It is understood that the present tour of inspection of Mr. C. M. Hays, general manager of the Grand Trunk, and the executive, is for the purpose of ascertaining what improvements are necessary in Toronto, Georgian Bay, and midland division terminals, in order to secure the more rapid handling of freight.

WHY PAUL KRUGER FLED FROM SOUTH AFRICA

Ex-President Says His Age Prevented Him from Keeping the Field

Next Governor of Australia Duke of Somerset or Lord Windsor—Huge Sums of English Money Spent in France

London, Nov. 15—The Times publishes further extracts from ex-President Kruger's memoirs, dealing with the Sand River convention, the War of Independence of 1880-81, and Mr. Kruger's four Presidencies. Referring to his flight from Pretoria after the relief of Mafeking, when Great Britain's troops began to stream into the South African republic. The ex-President says:—

"It became daily clearer that in my old age I should have to leave wife, home and all that was dear to me in order to seek refuge in the ast ofthe republic, and there commence the struggle anew. The thought of departure lay heavy on my heart, the more so as my wife was so old and weak that I could not think of taking her. On my last day in Pretoria, May 21, 1900, I received an American lad, Jimmy Smith, bringing an address in which thousands of Philadelphia school boys sent a message of sympathy to a leader of people engaged in defending their independence. I was obliged to desert Pretoria or allow myself to be taken prisoner. Age prevented me from riding; it was therefore impossible for me to accompany the commandos further." Mr. Kruger then describes his "long pilgrimmage" to Europe, via Lorenzo Marquez, and his reception in France.

CHRISTIAN WORK IN SOUTH AFRICA.

London, Nov. 15—The Scottish Presbyters of Cape Town, says a correspondent in that city, have passed a resolution, assuring their brethren of the Dutch Reformed Church of their sympathy. While regretting the temporary estrangement, due to the war, they hope it will be possible to co-operate in Christian work in the future.

ENGLISH MONEY SPENT IN FRANCE

London, Nov. 15—Jean Finot, editor of Revue des Revues, publishes an article quoted by a Paris correspondent on British-French relations. M. Finot points out that the amount of English purchases in France is constantly growing, showing an increase of $116,000,000 in the last five years. England last year took 30 per cent. of all the French exports. M. Finot adds:—The money left in our country is commonly estimated at $250,000,000, making $800,000,000 as the formidable total yearly paid to France by England.

MANY REFORMS ARE SUGGESTED

London, Nov. 15—Baron Sonnino's scheme for reforms in the southern provinces, says a Rome correspondent, seems to have induced the Government to formulate a social programme which Premier Zanardelli has been compiling for several months. The programme includes a reduction of the cost of salt, partial abolition of the land tax on small holdings, etc., and exemption from income tax for grazing farms and workmen's wages, together with a divorce and affiliation bill. The cost of the programme, which will probably be $7,-500,000, is to be covered by a special fund formed out of budget surpluses.

MAD MULLAH SEEKS AN ALLIANCE.

London, Nov. 15—With reference to Somaliland, a Rome correspondent says that more than one proposal for an alliance has been received by Italy from the Mad Mullah and his agents. However, says the correspondent, there is reason to believe that these proposals have been treated in a manner consistent with a straightforward understanding between Italy and Great Britain. It may be confidentially asserted, the correspondent adds, that there is every disposition to afford to Great Britain such moral assistance as is compatible with the interests, which Italy is justified in considering.

RITCHIE'S HEAD CRUSHED

Through Inch Planking—Marvelous Escape of Two Men

Orillia, Nov. 15— Few persons have gone through such a terrible experience as befell Mr. Frank McPherson and Mr. Wm. Ritchie. They were engaged in loading machinery on the hoist in the implement establishment of Chas. McPherson & Son, and had got about a ton weight of disc harrows ready to be lowered into the cellar, when the wheel which operates the elevator gave way, and the whole affair fell with a crash. The lower hoist, which was the one Messrs. McPherson and Ritchie were loading from a dray, was about three feet shorter than the upper hoist, and anyone working at the side of the former would be standing upon the latter, consequently when the wheel which operated both hoists gave way, the upper one fell on the two men, who were under it. When the falling hoist struck Mr. Ritchie, his head went through the inch planking of the upper hoist, as though it had been pasteboard, and he was left standing amidst the wreck. Mr. McPherson was not so fortunate. He was struck on the shoulders by a two-inch plank which formed one of the cross-pieces of the upper hoist, and was borne to the ground with his face jammed against his boots, and the weight of a ton of machinery bearing upon him. Mr. Ritchie ran down stairs under the impression that he would be able to lift the hoist there, but found the apparatus broken. He then raised the alarm, and a crowd of men gathered, who, after strenuous exertions, succeeded in raising the hoist sufficiently to remove the unfortunate young man who was pinned beneath it; his face crushed between his legs, and his knee thrust into his ribs, but the rescuers were relieved, albeit somewhat surprised, to find that he was still living. He was got out, taken home, and medical aid summoned as soon as possible. He may recover.

A SENSIBLE VIEW

The annexation proposition in reference to other British possessions in this hemisphere is now, and will likely remain for years, quiescent. If the complete union of the English speaking portions of the Northern continent is ever realized, it will be accomplished without bloodshed and under an agreement satisfactory to the three great parties to the bargain. No permanent union other than a mutually voluntary one is ever possible between this country and Canada, and those who maintain otherwise are either hopelessly ignorant of public sentiment on the other side of the line or shamelessly demagogic in catering to certain elements on this.—Brooklyn Eagle.

It is refreshing, says the Ottawa Citizen, to read in an American paper such commonsense views on the annexation question. If the advocates of annexation only realized the fact, they are doing everything that is possible to prevent the possibility of the realization of their object by the course they pursue in misrepresenting Canada and Canadian sentiment. The ill-considered booming of annexation is one of the greatest obstacles to harmonious intercourse between Canadians and Americans. No self-respecting Canadian or body of Canadians likes to make any move in the direction of cultivating pleasant relations between the two peoples from the very fact that their action is likely to be misconstrued and misrepresented by the blatant organs of annexation on the other side who seize on every possible incident, in and out of season, to parade as evidence of the existance of annexation sentiment in Canada. Instead of doing the cause they advocate any good, they are the strongest factor in making it an impossibility. Perhaps, for that reason, they are not an unmixed evil, but Canadians as a people have a kindly feeling towards their cousins across the line and would cultivate intercourse with them more were it not for the apprehension that it would be misunderstood and misrepresented.

THE YOUNG MEN OF CANADA

Sir Wilfrid Laurier gave good advice to the young men at the Laval banquet. He asked them to study the political questions of the day—questions which vitally affected the whole country. He deplored the indifference which existed in France, and indifference which made it possible for a small minority to rule the country. He asked for an ardent interest in this splendid young country, just on the way to glorious nationhood; he asked that the young men of the country, without respect to politics, should, while not neglecting those studies by which they hoped to mount to eminence, or at least to respectability, make it their business to understand the motives and genius of the political parties, the subjects which affected large masses of the people, and with which the prosperity of the country was bound up. This is the great misfortune of this country, that for the most part our young men are indifferent to the questions which affect vital interests in which they have, if they could only realize it, the deepest concern. We have certain small noisy groups in every centre which constitute themselves leaders and which seek, at election times, to dominate the situation. As a matter of fact, the best element of the population hang back from participation in political matters, and the result is that it is easy for the professional politician to work his will. But let the bright young men of the country take an interest in public questions, let them band themselves together, let them debate living subjects of interest and not themes as dead as Julius Caesar, which is too frequently the case, and it will be a step, and a decisive step towards a reform in our political state. That is to say, if you have in every centre large bodies of the ardent young men of the country taking a lively interest in the questions of the day, then insensibly but surely public men would take a higher moral stand, public righteousness would not be sneered at as an impossibility, and you would have a sane, high tone which would be of incalculable service to this country.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

In Ontario it is a toss up where the prohibitionists or the wine clerks come under the head of spirit-wrestlers.

The name of Tarte was cheered at the banquet given to Prefontaine. Which indicates that Tarte is popular with all classes in Quebec, even in the camp of his reputed political foe.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE DEFENDED

To the Editor of the Times:

In reference to the recent report in your paper, re the White Plains, N. Y., case, where little Esther Quimby passed away while under Christian Science treatment, allow me to make the following statement, after having thoroughly investigated the circumstances.

The child's parents and Mr. Lathrop, the Christian Scientist in charge of the case, broke no law, as the child was kept home from school as soon as she felt in the least unwell, and the health officer notified, that he might take what action he saw fit if the disease proved to be contagious. In spite of the agitation raised by the enemies of Christian Science, no contagion whatever has resulted from this case, though it has been shown that there were several cases of diphtheria in White Plains before the Quimby child was taken ill. This same child had previously been raised from invalidism to health and strength through Christian Science. It is a noteworthy fact that Mr. Lathrop, while under arrest, and out on bail, continued to treat the remaining members of the family, who had contracted the disease; and that while the health's officer's sworn testimony was that he found the usual signs of diphtheria on Oct. 22, he lifted the quarantine on Oct. 27th, as no traces of the disease were left. Thus every vestige of diphtheria was removed through Christian Science alone, and without any drugs or disinfectants, in less than 5 days. Does this show that this science is a danger to the public health?

While the coroner is denouncing Christian Scientists for losing one case, it would be interesting to hear his explanation of the loss, under medical treatment, of the 12,329 cases of diphtheria and croup in Greater New York alone during 1901.

After reviewing this case, the editor of the Albany "Press Knickerbocker" says:

"Already public opinion has undergone such a change that the attempt to persecute these believers in Christian Science will probably fail through.

"That the present outcry against Christian Scientists is due to narrow-mindedness is plainly evident. In her statement to the coroner Mrs. Quimby said that she had lost four children before she had accepted Christian Science; that she had been cured of valvular heart trouble by a Faith practitioner; that she had withdrawn her daughter from school as soon as she learned that her child was ill with diphtheria; that her two remaining children had recovered after being treated by Mr. Lathrop. Under the circumstances we should say that the Christian Science attendant was more successful than the medical practitioners who lost the four Quimby children before the parents accepted their present faith.

"The attacks upon a Christian belief are in fact driving thousands of intelligent, influential people into the Church of Christ, Scientist. If there is anything false or harmful in the cult the public will soon turn from it. But Christian Science appears to be above the methods of charlatans. The constant accessions which it is receiving annually and the substantial churches which are being erected in all parts of the country, bear witness to the hold it has taken upon many sound minds."

Commenting on the same case in a lengthy article in the Montreal Star, the editor says:

"If therefore the state today, in conducting such a prosecution as the one referred to, cannot take its stand on any particular system of medicine, and affirm that treatment under that system would certainly have saved life, neither can it safely take the ground that the measures resorted to by the Christian Scientists were absolutely in their nature destitute of any curative power......The Christian Scientists of today may be condemned, but we do not think the condemnation will long hold good. The principle of liberty must prevail in the end."

Such statements coming from such influential sources and uttered by men who are not Christian Scientists indicate the attitude of the more thoughtful classes in every community. Christian Scientists are quite willing to await the issue of this case without fear as to the result knowing that such persecution will cease when their faith is better understood.

Thanking you for your courtesy in this matter, I am

Yours respectfully,
G. R. MUNRO.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers
Fortune's Spor, Miss Nobody,
Her Royal Highness Lady
Mary of the Dark
House, etc.

Dick could not speak. His lips fell apart, his eyes stared.

"When I went out this afternoon I left on this desk a roll of bank-notes which I intended to devote to a certain purpose," Macaire went on. "There were two hundred and thirty pounds exactly. I had not been gone an hour when I remembered the money, and where I had put it. I should have thought it was safe, as I knew you would be writing letters at the desk, had I not heard while I was out a thing which gave me a shock and opened my eyes. You told me that you had taken my moonstone to a jeweler's, but a friend of mine who knew what it was like saw it at the Casino in the hands of a Frenchwoman, who was using it for luck. Knowing that I valued the thing, he asked the woman where she got it, and was informed that she had bought it last night of a young Englishman who wanted money for the game. Now, Gray, what have you to say to that?"

"I—I—" stammered Dick, like a schoolboy arraigned by the master, "I meant to tell you. It was done in a moment of impulse."

"A moment of impulse!" sneered Macaire. "And it was in a moment of impulse that you took fifty pounds from the roll of money on my desk, relying on my carelessness, or meaning perhaps to put the theft on a servant."

"Who—who dared to say that?"

"No one has said so. But you should have thought of your mother and sister."

"I must have been mad. For Heaven's sake, have mercy."

"None of that conventional cant, if you please. But you speak of your mother and sister. On one condition, and one only, will I spare you the punishment you deserve."

Dick's eyes, strained and bloodshot in his agony, grew bright.

"Tell me what it is and I'll do it—I'll do anything."

"It's not for you to do. I'll give you time to write home and get an answer by telegraph. If Winifred Gray cares enough for her brother to save him, she can."

"You want her to intercede for me?"

"I want her to buy you off."

Dick grew pale. "You mean——"

"I mean this. Two weeks from to-day I intend to be in London. I give a dinner on that night at nine o'clock to friends at my house. If she telegraphs you that she consents to come to that dinner you can go to England with me a free man. No one but ourselves need know what has happened. If she refuses you go to jail, and I stay on only long enough to see you through the court, and make sure you get the sentence you merit. Then I go and leave you to think over your ingratitude in prison."

"Oh, if that is all," cried Dick, "she would do that, and more, for me, I know—for mother's sake, if not mine. But it is so strange that you should wish——"

"That's my affair and hers," broke in Macaire. "Write now; tell her what you have done, and what I mean to do. Tell her I will only wait to act until she wires her answer. Whether you are disgraced for life, as you richly deserve to be, or whether you are spared, depends entirely upon her decision. Sit down now and write. Make this clear to her. And when you have written your letter I will read it."

Dick half fell into the chair at the desk to which Macaire pointed, and taking up a pen with fingers that shook almost too much to hold it, he began to write. As he wrote, bowing his face over his task, a tear or two fell on the letter raising round blisters on the thick creamy paper. He had always had the gift of writing, and now, after the first effort of beginning, he became eloquent, impassioned, in his appeal. He painted a terrible picture of his future as it would be if Winifred failed him, and he strove to show what a small thing, after all, was exacted of her by the eccentric whim of Lionel Macaire.

When he had signed himself her repentant and distracted brother, loving her, hoping alone in her, while on the verge of madness, he gave the letter to Macaire, who read it slowly.

"That will do," the latter pronounced at last. "She will get this the day after to-morrow. The same day you ought to receive her telegram. Meantime, I advise you to have an illness and keep to your room."

"You will allow me to do that?" Dick stammered.

"Till the wire comes; then we shall see. But I warn you, there is no use thinking of giving me the slip. The 'invalid' will be watched too carefully for that. And an attempt would only make matters worse for you in the end."

"There will be no such attempt," said Dick. "I promise."

Macaire sneered at him. "As though I'd take your word after what's happened! I shall have more than your promise to depend on. I'll post this letter. Now go to your kennel, like the whipped dog you are."

All Dick's blood seemed tingling in his face. His impulse was to strike and avenge this last insult; but his hand fell even as it clenched for lifting. The awful look in Macaire's marred face cowed him as if, indeed, he had been a whipped dog.

Turning without another word, he went to his room, Macaire following as far as the first threshold to watch him down the passage.

In quietness and darkness, with his door locked, he walked to the window that looked out upon the garish brightness of the rock-set town, blazing like a triple necklace of jewels against the blue velvet and gauze of sea and sky. If he chose—and dared—he might throw himself headlong out, and all would be ended. But no, he would not do that. He did not wish to die, leaving such a legacy of shame to his mother, for whom he longed now with a boy's homesick longing. She loved him dearly still, in spite of all, and there was nothing she could not forgive. That was the way with mothers. And Winifred would rescue him—Winifred, who had been partly right about Macaire, after all.

As he stood gazing miserably out upon the crowds of light-hearted people, whose merriment mocked him, there came a quick knock at the door. Dick went to it and listened for a few seconds, expecting he scarcely knew what; then in a low voice he demanded who was there.

"It's I—von Zellheim," came the answer; and with a hopeful leap of the heart Dick unlocked the door.

"Thank Heaven you're here!" he exclaimed when Hope Newcome was with him and the key turned again.

It was dark in the room, but Dick turned on the light, and Newcome uttered an ejaculation at sight of the younger man's face.

"Why, what's the matter?" he asked.

"Haven't you heard anything from Macaire?"

25 per cent each 30 days thereafter.

One share of common, par value $100.00, given with each share of preferred.

The whole of the instalments remaining unpaid at any time may be prepaid in full. A discount of one per cent will be allowed upon the par of each share if prepaid at time of allotment.

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company.

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are:—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey:—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4.05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5.23
	100.00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons of ore above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works.

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows:—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4.00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows:—

	ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902, to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2.70
July 1st, 1903, " " 1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904, " " 1905	1.65	1.65
July 1st, 1905, " " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906, " " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows:—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6⅔ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000.00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000.00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to ... $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is ... $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is ... $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

STOCK MARKETS

An Authority on Steel Situation

New York, Nov. 15—The New York Sun an evening or so ago in speaking of the affairs of the United States Steel Corporation, remarked as follows:— Concerning the prophecies made so freely a few weeks ago that the beginning of the end of the great prosperity in the steel trade was at hand, it is rather amusing to read in despatches from the great steel centres that the United States Steel Corporation has decided to ignore all orders for material coming from brokers and speculators, because of the tremendous demand at this time. The orders on the books of the Corporation cannot be supplied for months; they are coming in constantly, and all previous records have been broken. The action of the Steel Corporation is to prevent any possible corner of the available supply. Those who need material will be supplied, but orders will be scrutinized carefully. Any mills that make it a point to hold back material will have to reckon with the United States Steel Corporation. Staple prices that will insure a steady demand is the policy that will be insisted upon at all times. This state of affairs does not foreshadow any let up in the phenomenal business of the Company. It shows them to be going ahead at their customary gait, in fact breaking all past records. The stocks have been most determinedly attacked, owing to the fact that the public were heavy holders of them. Those who were hurt in the balance of the market were compelled to liquidate much steel for additional protection of their accounts. Considering the viciousness of the attacks upon the property and the many malicious rumours put in circulation, the stock has held remarkably well. The Evening Sun states that, while it cannot be confirmed, the Stock Exchange authorities have, or will, take action to find out just who has been circulating rumours that are absolutely unfounded. There is a feeling in Wall Street that, though honest rumours are a good thing, the circulation of malicious rumours has gone too far. The bears have not had such a revel in the share markets for a very long time. However, the old adage, "All's fair in love and war," may be prostituted. Many people are strongly of the idea that some of the modern Ananias' of Wall Street have been overzealous.

Summary—The market opened this morning ,at from parity with last night's close quotations to one and one-half per cent. higher, then displayed more or less hesitation, receding from 1/2 per cent. to a point, after which it gathered more strength advancing smartly. Before 11.30 quotations generally exceeded the advance prices of the opening. Shorts covered freely while excellent buying was developed in the leading issues. Stocks are remarkably cheap at present. Reserves showed an increase of about $800,000, while loans decreased $6,000,000. Loans would have decreased materially had yesterday's liquidation sales been deliverable then instead of Monday as is the case. Loans have decreased more materially than shown in the statement. Prices shaded somewhat after publication of the bank statement. Even if lowest prices have not been made, which we very much doubt, prices should advance 5 to 10 points from today's quotations before receding materially. Monday's letter—Those Rock Island issues. Money closed 4 per cent. Sales 620,300.

Oil Strike in Kent County

(Press Despatch)

Chatham, Nov. 12—There is as yet little new in the oil situation, which is the one topic of conversation. Accounts of the Raleigh well's capacity have not been one whit exaggerated. Oil men are swarming here, some coming even from California and great expectations are entertained as to future explorations. A company which has fourteen wells at Northwood, six miles from here, on the line of the Grand Trunk, hold leases for lands adjacent to the gusher, and will begin to bore at once in their territory. The gusher is situated on the apex or crown of a sudden elevation or dome in the rock formation, and oil experts say this is a sure sign of permanency and the reason for the unusual pressure manifested.

Mining Investment Without Precedent

A SMALL SUM INVESTED NOW SHOULD PROVIDE COMFORTABLE INCOME FOR MANY YEARS

The LARDEAU Mines, Capitalized at Only $100,000.00, Should Produce $270,000.00 Net Revenue Per Year—These Figures are Based on the Reports of Well-Known Mining Engineers—Present Price of the Stock Only 10 Cents a Share, but Subscriptions Will Have to be Made Promptly, as the Price Will Soon Advance to Very Much Higher Figures.

We do not hesitate to say that in our judgment stock in the LARDEAU MINES LIMITED, offers a most magnificent opportunity for investment.

There is every reason to believe that the LARDEAU MINES will pay a profit of 270 per cent. PER YEAR, within a short time, and will continue to yield such profits for more than a lifetime.

These are stupendous figures, but we believe them to be absolutely conservative. Our reasons are based on these facts:

PROOF OF NO STOCK JOBBING

In the first place the capitalization is only $100,000. This low capitalization shows upon the face of it that the company is honestly organized—that there is no suspicion of stock-jobbing, which has too often ruined many otherwise honest companies.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY

The property is located in the celebrated Lardeau mining division of West Kootenay, British Columbia. The property owned by this company consists of three full claims, embracing an extent of 156 acres—mineral claims in British Columbia are 1,500x1,500 feet— equal to 52 acres in each extent. Three strong parallel ore veins run through the property from end to end, a distance of of 4,500 feet. If placed end to end this would give us 13,500 feet, equal to a continuous ore body over two and a half miles in length. The values are in gold, silver, copper and lead, and run from $35.00 to $77.00 per ton of 2,000 pounds. These results show indications of permanent values of the most convincing kind.

GROSS VALUE OF SHIPMENTS.

The gross value of shipments of ore aggregating 6,134,604 pounds from twelve mines in the Lardeau, all situated near the property owned by this company, was $464,410.81, equal to a return per ton of over $146.00. The property owned by this company shows up equally as well as any of these more fully developed mines, and will, we are convinced, shortly rank among the best in the Lardeau division.

READ THESE FIGURES CAREFULLY

In a very conservative statement issued by the officers of the company, appears the following:

"In order to show why we are confident we are right, we will estimate our ore values at $50.00 per ton, a little over one-third of the average ore values of the entire Lardeau mining division. We will also base our calculations on a daily output of 30 tons—a small amount compared with the extent of our property and the size of its ore bodies. We will allow $10.00 per ton for mining, transportation (a few miles only) and smelting charges. The profits after making a reasonable reduction for incidentals and surplus, work out as follows:

30 tons at $50.00 per ton……		$1,500
Less $10.00 per ton mining, transportation, and reduction charges ………		300
Net daily income……		1,200
Say for 300 days per year……		300
Total net yearly income……		360,000
Deduct for incidental expenses, $5 per ton……	$45,000
Deduct for company's surplus account $5 per ton.	45,000	90,000

which sum is equal to 270 per cent. per annum on our capital stock of $100,000.

"This estimate is made on the basis of a small output compared to the extent of our property and the splendid facilities it affords for economical mining and on the operation of the mine for 300 days per year only, so that anyone can see at a glance that we are not overestimating in any particular, especially when the output of mines similarly situated, and with ore bodies of less extent than ours, ship hundreds of tons each day. There is no good reason why our property, when fully developed — which will be within six months to a year—should not ship several hundreds of tons of ore per year, but we are basing our calculations on the immediate future in presenting the above estimate.

"We are now within seventy to eighty feet of the main ore veins, and assays show values as high as $71.00 per ton. The average returns from twelve mines in our district, according to Government records, which are always conservative, run as high as $146.40 a ton in gold, silver, copper and lead.

HONEST, LEGITIMATE MANAGEMENT.

We know the men connected with the management of the LARDEAU MINES and have known them for years. We know that they never were and never will be connected with any but honest and legitimately conducted enterprises.

REPORT OF MINING ENGINEER.

The property has been thoroughly examined by well known mining engineers and their reports have borne out every statement that has been made by the company. Mr. H. O. McClymont, one of the last engineers to make a report says in conclusion:

The average assays are most encouraging, considering the great width and continuancy of the leads across the country with such great width and prominence of the surface, and judging from other properties in the near vicinity, some of which are on the same level and have developed very rich ore bodies The LARDEAU MINES are as good as any, if not the best, in the vicinity, and I verily believe with a nominal expenditure, they should be made dividend-paying in a short time, and I would strongly recommend extensive developments towards that end. Signed, H. O. McClymont, Mining Engineer."

SMALL AMOUNT OF MONEY NEEDED.

As Mr. McClymont says in his report, only a small sum of money is needed to complete the development work and put these mines on a dividend paying basis.

We want to raise about $10,000 from the sale of shares, this money to be used to complete the work just specified.

A very short time will be required to raise this amount of money for this magnificent property, and then the sale of stock will be discontinued.

READ THIS CAREFULLY.

The present price of the stock is 10 cents per share.

The price will be advanced to 15 cents per share very soon, and then 20 cents per share.

The company reserves the right to withdraw the stock from the market without notice.

TWO YEARS AGO—AND NOW.

We believe that there are 90 chances in 100 of the LARDEAU MINES proving a BONANZA. One property in the vicinity of the Lardeau was recently sold for $600,000 cash, and stock in addition. Two years ago it was not nearly as good a prospect as the Lardeau is today.

The LARDEAU MINES, LIMITED, is a small, close corporation and the profits will consequently be large to each stockholder.

Those who are fortunate enough to buy stock at the low price of 10 cents can calculate on an annual income of $135.10 from an investment of $100.00 In other words, you would get your principal back and $35.00 besides every year.

YOU CAN PAY IN INSTALMENTS.

Write us for further particulars.

We will allow you to purchase a block of stock and pay for it in monthly instalments. Before your stock is paid for you will see it double in value—perhaps more.

We urge prompt action, because of the approaching increase of 15 cents per share, which may occur any day. The safest thing to do is to send us $10, which will reserve the stock you desire at 10 cents per share. Then you can investigate the matter carefully and fully and if you are not completely satisfied we will return your money.

WRITE TO-DAY, TO-MORROW MAY BE TOO LATE.

Some one who has not the fear of the law before him, and whose identity is strongly suspected, caused to be inserted in our personal columns on Tuesday last an item that was as false as it was malicious. It referred to a well known and esteemed citizen as having been engaged as manager for a lady psalmist. The penalty provided by law for an offense of this kind is very severe, and maybe invoked in this case.

Your Life and Your Health

Prof. Edson A. Titus, Ph.D., B.S., D.G.M., Phrenologist, Palmist, and Massagist, is located for a short time in Parlors at Hotel National, where he will read life from Head, Hand and Stars, diagnose disease, and treat Chronic Ailments by Scientific Massage.

Dr. Titus is Associate Dean of the International College of Scientific Massage, and desires one or more pupils to learn the principles and practice of Scientific Massage for this locality.

A Pointer to Barbers

Barbers talk too much. When a man gets into the chair for a shave or hair cut, etc., all kinds of questions are put to him, and if he gets out alive without telling his business, what church he belongs to, if he has anything bet on the latest sporting event, or pretend to know what Ross, Laurier or Tarte are going to do, he must be either deaf, dumb, or blind if he does not express an opinion that "Silence is not golden" in a barber shop, and it does not matter how many customers are waiting, the man who shaves must know all about your business.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—There will be a special meeting of the council of Ashburnham this evening.

—The "Never Learn" Club will give a dance in the Forester's Hall on Tuesday night.

—Mr. Charlie Stone, who returned from the hunt on Friday night had the misfortune to lose a valuable gun. It was lost out of the rig along the road somewhere.

Guns Not Stolen

In our issue of Wednesday last appeared the following:—A party of hunters returning to Haldimand township, had an annoying delay in town yesterday. They had been hunting in Harcourt township, and on the way home a valuable hound and eight guns were appropriated at Lindsay from the railroad company, in whose charge they were. The thief was caught at Lorneville Junction and the goods recovered." The Lindsay Post adds:—The Times is astray in charging theft. The guns and hound were shipped out on the Coboconk train, the baggage man thinking they belonged to a hunting party going north.

Mail Bag Robbed

The Times on Saturday received the following from the Post Office Inspector, Toronto, enclosing a letter which had been mailed by this office to our agent in London, England:—The enclosed was found in a mail made up and despatched by the Port Hope & Midland Mail Clerks for the Grand Trunk East on the night of the 5th inst., which was lost or stolen in transit between the Port Hope Post Office and Railway Station, and was not recovered until yesterday morning. An examination of the bag after being found revealed the fact that a number of ordinary letters had been mutilated, or otherwise tampered with, amongst which was the enclosure now sent you back.

THE DRUGLESS CURE

Scientific Massage seeks to restore normal conditions, where there is functional derangement, by means of magnetic aura, created by friction. It does not seek to supplant medicines, but to be an auxiliary; but is often a specific where medicines fail to assimilate. In most forms of nervous disease, rheumatism, neuralgia, imperfect circulation or indigestion, paralysis, uterine and urinary complaints, it is in most cases an immediate relief. More than three hundred cures have been certified in the Ottawa Valley by Dr. Titus and his pupils in the past eight months. Diseases diagnosed without cost, orders by mail or 'phone to see parties at residence given prompt attention.

Police Court

There was a large attendance at the Police Court Saturday forenoon. James Watson., a man who gave his home as Cannington, appeared with the decoration of a shanty over his eye, as the complainant against a certain young man, whom he charged with stealing his money. The evidence proved that Watson had been on a drunk and used very abusive language. In connection with the matter Patrick Cunnan was charged with selling liquor after hours and allowing gambling on his premises.

Both cases were dismissed and the Magistrate gave Watson some good advice which, if followed, will save him a good deal of money in the future.

Samuel Kennedy was charged with truancy, but his case was enlarged until today.

Saturday's Market

The market on Saturday was attended by a big crowd. In the hall fowl, eggs, butter &c., were in large supply, but outside on the square the offerings of roots, vegetables, etc. were not up to the previous Saturday, although the supply was equal to the demand. Prices ruled high and buyers were slow in making purchases. The following were the prevailing quotations:—Geese, 60 to 80c. each; turkeys, 75c. to $1.00 each; chickens, 40 to 60c. a pair; ducks, 75 to 90c. a pair; butter, 20c lb; eggs, 20c doz; pork, 8 to 9c; beef, 4 to 6c; potatoes, $1.00, to $1.15 bag; apples, 60c to 1.00 bag; onions, 30c peck; carrots, 10c peck; cabbages, 30 to 50c doz; celery, 5 and 10 per bunch; turnips, 35c bag; pumpkins, 10 to 15c each; tomatoes, ripe, 25c basket; spinach, 5c each; pears 30c peck; beets, 10c. peck; parsnips, 10c peck; honey, 10c lb; hay $8.50 to $10.00 per ton.

Wireless Telegraphy

The wonderful experiments in wireless telegraphy as demonstrated for the first time by exchanging signals from a railway station to a train running at a rate of sixty miles an hour, made on the Grand Trunk special train, October 12th, 1902, carrying the members of the American Association of General Passenger and Ticket Agents to their forty-seventh annual convention held at Portland, Maine, Oct. 14th and 15th, 1902, has prompted the Passenger Department of the Grand Trunk Railway System to issue a publication giving a description of the experiments, together with concise popular treatise on the principal of wireless telegraphy, dealing with the subject also from an historical point of view and including a chapter on the recent developments of this branch of physical science. This article is from Howard T. Barnes, D.Sc., F.R.S.S.C. of the Macdonald Physical Laboratory of McGill University, Montreal, and is most opportune in view of the great interest occasioned by the recent arrival at Glace Bay, Cape Breton., of Signor Marconi, on an Italian warship, with the object of perfecting his plans for wireless telegraphy across the Atlantic Ocean. In addition to the article on this subject, a description of the luxurious Grand Trunk special train on which the experiments were made, and a short resume of the trip from Chicago to Portland, Maine, is given in an interesting manner. Copies of this valuable publication have been mailed to the principal officials of the great railway systems of the world, and anyone desiring a copy can secure one by sending a two cent stamp to G. T. Bell, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Grand Trunk Railway System, Montreal.

A New Branch

All the chartered banks of Canada are extending their branches. New banking corporations are springing into existence all over Ontario, and the older organizations are getting a hustle on The consequence will be that in a few years almost every small centre in this province will have a chartered bank, and depositors will not have to travel many miles in order to deposit their surplus cash. The Bank of Toronto has lately opened branches at Thorndale, Creemore Elmvale and Millbrook, and on Saturday morning Mr. S. A. Smith, of the Peterborough branch of this bank received notice that he had been appointed manager of the Millbrook branch.

Mr. Smith is the oldest in service of the active staffs of the local banks. He came here from Quebec as accountant, in 1881, since when he has held this respectable position continuously, and has contributed by his energy and ability towards building up the business which the Bank of Toronto has secured in our community. While acquiring this good repute in his business capacity, Mr. Smith, in the social sphere, has secured a host of friends, who will be filled with regret at his sudden departure, while congratulating him on his promotion. He has been an active member and Past Master of Peterborough Lodge, A.F. & A.M., and a Past Z of Corinthian Royal Arch Chapter and has also held important office in the Grand Priory. He was an adept in various athletic sports.

Mr. A. St. A. Smith married a daughter of the late Henry Dennoe, a sister of our Mayor, and she also will be sadly missed by her many friends.

CHURCH NOTES

—Rev. J. W. Hannah gave an interesting address at the Y.W.C.A. hall yesterday afternoon on "Favored Men," which was much appreciated by those present.

—Rev. J. Bastow, M.A., pastor of Murray street church delivered a very excellent sermon yesterday morning on "The Spheres of Christian Service," and in the evening he gave a very clever exposition of "Joshua's Character and Influence," and urged young men, young women and all others to follow in Joshua's footsteps.

—At the evening service in George street Methodist church yesterday the pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., gave a very interesting discourse on "The King who sat Behind the Gates."

—Holy Communion was administered at All Saint's church on Sunday morning and the pastor, Rev. W. L. Armitage, discoursed on "Prisoners and Prison Reform." In the evening he gave an interesting address on "Our Duty in the Referendum Vote." A special collection was taken in behalf of the Prisoner's Aid Association.

—At the Charlotte Street Methodist church in the morning Rev. Mr. Secombe talked on "Anger" and in the evening, Rev. Mr. Joliffe choose for his subject, "An Increase of Faith."

—The usual services were held at the other churches which were well attended.

—The Salvation Army had a parade in the evening, and a service afterwards in their hall which was well attended, and one or two converts were made.

RIVER NOTES

—Our little fleet of steamers is hard at work, hauling grain to town, and will be so engaged until the close of navigation. The steamers Water Lily, North Star, and Rainbow were in port on Friday with a full complement, and left in the afternoon for the Lake to bring up Saturday passengers, with the exception of the Water Lily whose Saturday trips have been discontinued. The Star and Lily both had a large number aboard, the Water Lily making the trip from Robbin's Landing and arriving on time. Capt. Fred. Copperthwaite of the steamer Rainbow reports an unusually good season, both in passenger trade and excursions. His boat will be employed towing until the Lake freezes up.

—Mr. Chas. Munroe, of the H. P. Kennedy Co., has pulled out his trim little yacht the Water Lilley for the season and will have a fine, new engine installed during the winter months. Mr. Geo. Johnston, the genial engineer of the North Star, being in charge of the work.

—Our genial Lockmaster, Mr. Wm. Collins should have an unusually good report to make for the season of 1902.

—The new concrete wharf immediately below the locks has been completed and is a splendid improvement on the old wooden one, and is greatly appreciated by the steamboat men. The government is also replacing the old wharf between the lock's bridge and the lock with concrete, about half of which is already under way, and when completed will be a great improvement.

—The contractors for the two new dams are having a lot of trouble with the very high water prevailing, besides being put to extra expense, but notwithstanding are making good headway.

—The work of the Government dredge "Trent" in charge of Mr. Frank Farrin is progressing favorably.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature, either by phone or in writing.—(Ed. Times)

—Mr. W. T. Fleming, called on friends in town Saturday

—Mr. Louis Brooks is in Toronto for a few days.

—Mr. W. Vance of Millbrook, was in town on Saturday.

—Mr. C. A. Ghent, of Norwood, was in town Saturday.

—Messrs. E. Beauchamp, J. Storey and Richard Lightle, of Port Hope, were in town Saturday doing business.

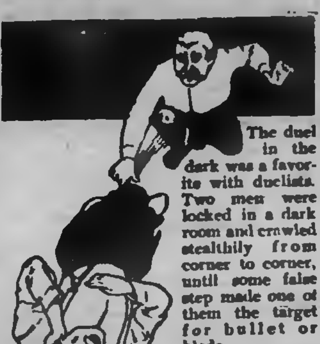
—Mr. Geo. Black, of Lindsay, was among the visitors to town on Saturday.

—Mrs. Powell and child, of Victoria, B.C., were registered at the Munro House on Saturday.

—Sergt. M. J. Murphy arrived home on Friday, after a very pleasant visit with friends in Hastings and vicinity.

—Miss Mary Overend has returned from an enjoyable visit with Orillia and Barrie friends.

—Mr. John Strickland, of Lakefield, has gone to Lakefield to assume the duties of teller in the Trader's Bank. Mr. Strickland will find the people of Reston a very sociable lot, and they will soon recognize Mr. Strickland's many social and business traits



The duel in the dark was a favorite with duelists. Two men were locked in a dark room and crawled stealthily from corner to corner, until some false step made one of them the target for bullet or blade.

Life is a duel in the dark with disease. One false step, one mistake, and the attack comes swift and sudden. The mistake which commonly opens the way for an attack by disease is neglect of the symptoms of stomach trouble. When eating is followed by undue fullness, belchings, sour or bitter risings, etc., disease is attacking the stomach.

The best way to frustrate such an attack is to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and makes the body strong and healthy.

"I was suffering very much with my head and stomach," writes Mrs. W. C. Gill, of Weldon, Shelby Co., Ala., "head was so dizzy when I would raise up in bed would fall right back. Could eat but very little, in fact scarcely anything, there seemed to be a heavy weight in my stomach so I could not rest; I had to belch very often and would vomit up nearly everything I ate. I was in a bad condition. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and five of his 'Favorite Prescription' and am now well and hearty. I feel like a new woman and give Dr. Pierce's medicines credit for it all. I had taken medicine from physicians without any benefit as I could see."

DOUKHOBORS AGAINST ALL FORMS OF GOVERNMENT

They Openly Proclaim Their Intention Not to Submit To the Laws of the Country

PECULIAR CONDUCT OF THESE QUEER PEOPLE

Their Arrival at Their Homes and Their Present Troubles—They Never Will Assimilate With Our People

Winnipeg, Nov. 17.—The Doukhobors have once more been settled in their homes after their recent pilgrimage, and are now not giving any trouble. A man who spent five months amongst them last summer, partaking of their food and making himself acquainted with their everyday life, says that they are a sect of recent birth, which broke off from the Greek church, and for this reason they have suffered the most bitter persecution, as is the case with all proselytes in Russia. Many of their religious meetings were broken up by the Cossacks, who would cut right and left with their hatchets, inflicting terrible injuries. Many were sent to Siberia because they refused to serve in the army. The English Quakers first took an interest in them because upon one occasion when a few Cossacks were coming to attack them, instead of attempting to repel them, they simply cooked a good meal and left it for the Cossacks, going away themselves. On another occasion force was tried upon them in order to compel them to abide by the conditions of the country, and they replied by putting up their hands and saying, "Kill if you desire."

In the Northwest they are settled in four different districts, at Good Spirit Lake, Swan River, White Sun River, and on the Assiniboia River near Indian Head.

A VILLAGE DESCRIBED.

A Doukhobor village or community contains from 100 to 300 people. Their houses are situated on a street about twenty yards from one another. The occupied territory of the community is fenced in, but there are no partitions between the land of each family, which consists of a garden of about ten acres, situated at the rear of the dwelling place.

The homes are plain wooden buildings, with a thick clay roof. They have simply one room, which serves as kitchen, parlor diningroom and bedroom. Screens are placed around the bed if any stranger is a guest of their house. A regular Russian over made of bricks is built in the interior of the house, and built in the interior of the horse, and is used for cooking and heating. They do not use chairs, but have long seats attached to the walls, which they make themselves. Their meals are very simple, only one cooking a day taking place. Their food consists of a kind of soup and vegetables, which are kept warm in the oven for the different meals. Only one dish is used by the family and each one has a spoon, no other utensil being employed to eat with. All meals are alike, there being no special meal on Sundays or feast days. They are very generous to strangers, supplying them with the best food, which consists of half cooked black bread, onions and radishes, and a hard board is provided to sleep upon at night.

The younger men for the most part work for English-speaking settlers during the summer time, returning to their villages during the winter months. The women and children do the cooking and sewing. All their sewing is done by hand, and they weave their own goods for the most part. The women are very fond of bright colors, particularly red, and this color is used even in their towels and aprons, samples of which they presented to Mr. Hellyer. The older men go into the fields and do the ploughing and general farming. The women yoke themselves as oxen on their own account, and Mr. Hellyer states that he has seen women shoving a waggon which was being pulled by a horse, in order to help the beast of burden. The most of them cannot conceive of using animals for work, and they assert that wild animals have been rendered ferocious by reason of the sins of the world.

NOT CHRIST'S TEACHINGS

They consider that our modern Christianity is contrary to Christ's teachings. They believe in simplicity of dress, and would not use factory made clothes, because they consider that people must slave to produce them. They believe that churches are unnecessary, and that the people should simply gather together in their own houses for religious worship. Music is considered an invention of the devil, and an organ would not be tolerated. The minister or missionary should go about like St. Paul; he should not receive a salary, and food and clothes should be provided for him.

The literal ordinance of baptism and the sacrament are not observed by the Doukhobors, they are simply practiced in the spirit. If the atonement of Christ is generally held among them, and the resurrection believed in.

In a general sense they do not believe in the Bible, as they abhor all books. Certain passages of Scripture which support their belief are considered inspired, and others are considered to be merely the products of man. Some say that Christ is the Son of God, and others say that he is a perfect man, and that they only follow him spiritually. Some of the people hold that he was imperfect in eating fish and meat, and others that as the Creator he had a right to do so. Some go further and claim that they are better than Christ, and members of the sect will claim that the Bible writers who speak of the eating of meat lie, stating that if God made the little lambs to be eaten then he must have been a devil. Many contend that unless a man is a Doukhobor, that he is a devil. Christ's second coming is eargerly waited for, their belief being that he will come bodily. Then there are some who believe that Christ has already come, and that we cannot see him by reason of our sins.

Poverty is rejoiced in, and wealth is not considered desirable, many rejoicing that they possess no money. Fasting as long as 40 days has been indulged in by some members of the sect. For their worship they gather together in private houses every day. The people in the house commence to sing, and as the others come in they greet one another with salutations. A psalm of a hymn is then sung and a set prayer for the day is recited. The men and women who are on opposite sides of the house then shake hands twice, and the men kiss one another, the women doing the same. After one person has kissed another he makes a deep curtesy and takes his position. They leave the house singing another psalm, and go to their own homes singing.

DOWN ON THE GOVERNMENT.

The Doukhobors assert that they do not believe in any form of Government, and will never submit to it. They regard Jesus as their only King, and do not consider King Edward VII. their ruler. Concerning the statement of "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's," many say that if nothing is rendered that Caesar will not exist. They claim that they are Anarchists in the true sense of the word, and that Anarchists should not kill.

Regarding municipal government, they hold it to be a ridiculous thing that a community should be ruled by one man or any set of men, and that a man should rule himself according to the spirit of God. They would not go into court for any consideration, if exasperated they would use their fists, which is considered a heathen custom, a hundred times sooner than go into court. They would not arrest a murderer, they would leave his punishment to God.

While not totally believing in education, they would not send their children to the public schools, lest they should be contaminated with others, and fall from their religion. They would not be unwilling to have schools of their own, taught by Doukhobors. At present the parents educate their own children.

Mr. Hellyer said in conclusion that he could not conceive what the future of such a people would be. They are possessed with such a determination that no law could coerce them, and still they were a most inoffensive people. It seemed a pity that they had come to Canada, as a country which was rich in fruits, and whose climate was warmer would have suited them better. He believed that the best thing to do at present was to send missionaries among them who spoke their own language, and to impress upon them the truths of the Bible which would enlighten their minds; he, however, recognized that this would be a very difficult task. He thought that they might exist on vegetables themselves, but that climate it was impossible to bring up children upon them. The present outlook was a gloomy one, indeed.

ITEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE AND LETTER

Emporia, Kas., Nov. 17—Judge Madden, in the District Court last night decided that a man had the right to bury his wife alive. The city asked for and was refused an injunction to prohibit a professor giving an exhibition of hypnotism by burying his wife for six days.

New York, Nov. 17 — Two election workers in the Ninth District are under arrest on a charge of election frauds which were exposed by six collegians, one a young millionaire, another a young physician, and the others medical students.

Disguised as tramps, they were accosted by election workers, who, after becoming acquainted, disposed of them in various rooms. On election day they say they were provided with slips bearing the names of men who had registered in good faith, but who had been called away. In this manner they say they voted many times apiece, and for each ballot alleged they received $2.

The exposure has caused a sensation.

Montreal, Nov. 17—Considerable discussion in all quarters has been caused by the announcement made by Hon. Raymond Prefontaine that he would favor the establishment of a school of navigation. It is understood that his plan is the subsidizing of the existing institutions of education, in order that they may add navigation experts and professors of kindred subjects to their staffs. Thus one of the Toronto universities would have a chair of navigation; McGill and Laval here would also found chairs, while some college in the Maritime Provinces, probably Dalhousie University at Halifax, would receive the students from that section of the country. These places would form the bases for the education of sailors, just as the military colleges train soldiers.

Ottawa, Nov. 15—It was suggested by Mr. Brodrick, Secretary of State for War, in his address at the Colonial Conference that the colonies should train 20,000 men, who would be liable to be called upon for service overseas in case of an Imperial emergency. He did not go into details, but Lieut.-Col. E. A. Althan, Assistant Quartermaster-General at Headquarters, has issued a memorandum which embodies the views of the militia advisers as to what should be the action of the colonies. This proposes the organization of the following troops for imperial service:

Austria—Two mounted bridages, one infantry brigade; approximate strength, 9,000.

New Zealand—One mounted brigade, two infantry batalions; approximate strength, 3,000.

Canada—One brigade division field artillery, one infantry brigade, approximate strength, 3,000.

Total, 15,500 men.

Col. Althan quotes from the report of the general officer commanding in Canada the statement that the city corps have no training in field duties, and that the rural corps will never be made fairly fit to take the field with the limited period of training they annually receive at present. In the event of war with the United States the safety of Canada, he says, must depend on the militia until reinforcements arrive from England, and consequently the best way in which Canada would co-operate in imperial defence would be by making her militia an efficient force.

CANADIANS GOOD FIGHTERS.

"'It is more important,'' he continues, "that the Canadian Ministry should be urgently pressed to take this reasonable precaution than that they should maintain contingents for general Imperial service. Nevertheless the services rendered by Canadians in South Africa, as well as the history of the last Anglo-American war show that the Canadians are excellent fighters, and would be a valuable addition to the imperial forces. It is reasonable to assume that Canada will desire to co-operate with Australia in any steps that may be taken for creating a permanent organization of colonial Imperial forces, and if such a desire be felt there are strong political reasons for encouraging it. Moreover, it is possible that, by the example of a Canadian Imperial force the militia in general might be worked up to a higher standard of efficiency. The strategical position of Canada makes it, however, unwise that any large contingent should be drawn from her defence force unless the strength of that force should in the future be increased. It is suggested, therefore, that if a Canadian Imperial force be organized it should be limited, for the present, to a brigade division of field artillery and a brigade of infantry."

Sports and Pastimes

RUGBY.

Mr. McPherson is attending the meeting of the O.R.F.U. Executive held in Toronto last night.

Swearing at the referee in Ottawa on Saturday had no effect. Mr. Lash was too deaf to hear any comment on his work.

The presidents of the rival clubs at Ottawa had a scrap in front of the grand stand while their players hammered each other on the field.

The Intercollegiate senior and intermediate championships resulted as expected, in favor of McGill and Queen's, respectively. The Montreal seniors were easily superior to the Kingston men.

The Rugby game between Hamilton Juniors II and Upper Canada College II on the Upper Canada campus Saturday afternoon was an exciting and hard-fought contest between two very evenly matched teams. Both teams worked hard, but neither scored a point during the two halves. It was decided to play five minutes each way, and about ten minutes later Evel succeeded in scoring a try for the Hamilton Juniors, which they were, however, unable to convert leaving the score 4 to 0 in favor of the dwellers in the shadow of the mountain.

The Toronto Star comments on the Burnside rules used in the game on Saturday between Varsity and the Argonauts as follows:

The Burnside rules were put to the test at Varsity Field on Saturday afternoon in the first of the annual games between Varsity and Argonauts for the city Rugby championship. This was the first occasion in which the snap-back system had been used in Canada in a senior game and the result was most gratifying to those who had been instrumental in having the exhibition brought off before a critical Toronto gathering.

Everybody votes the new rules an unqualified success:

BECAUSE of the continuous open play.

BECAUSE the ball was in view all the time.

BECAUSE there were no scrambling scrimmages.

BECAUSE speed, and not weight, gained the advantage.

BECAUSE there were countless opportunities for fine tackling.

BECAUSE the officials worked under rules they could enforce.

BECAUSE there was none of the tiresome throwing-in from the touch-line.

BECAUSE of the many beautiful runs by the players who carried the ball.

BECAUSE the play was always clean and the work of each individual player could be noted.

BECAUSE of the splendid long-distance punting and kicking and the brilliant returns.

BECAUSE the players were constantly on edge and compelled to play their hardest at all stages of the game.

BECAUSE there was continuous life and action on the field, and not a sprawling mass of humanity, obscuring the ball.

BECAUSE there was more open play than in all the senior games played in Toronto in the last three years put together.

BECAUSE of the utter futility of the mass plays, or "the juggernaut," as the Argonaut admirers termed their attempts at line-bucking.

BECAUSE the game, as a whole, was so much superior to the old style of play as to admit of no line of comparison whatever.

HOCKEY.

The Lornes of Mount Forest will have a team in the O.H.A. They have organized for the season.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Hockey Club will be held to-morrow evening in the Council Chamber.

Stouffville will have intermediate and junior teams in the O.H.A. Mr. W. J Stark has been elected president, Wm. Scott, secretary-treasurer and T. E. Trull manager.

It is a well-known fact that Brantford will figure somewhat prominently in hockey circles this year. It is rumored that the management of the team will be left to a great extent in the hands of the players.—Brantford Courier.

A MAGNIFICENT NEW CHURCH FOR THE POPE

Largest and Most Magnificent House of Worship in Whole World

A DREAM OF CATHOLICS IS AN AMERICAN POPE

And New York Clergy Want It in That City for Removal of the Holy See

New York, Nov. 18—Several Catholic clergymen in Greater New York are advocating the building in this city of the largest and most magnificent worship in the world. As yet the scheme is in embyro. Plans, however, have been drawn, and are to be placed on exhibition. There are priests prominent in the Catholic churches of this country who believe that within the next few years the sovereign pontiff will remove the Holy See from Rome to New York. The possibility of such a change is entered as an argument in favor of the building of a great church.

The plans for the church were drawn by the Reverend Father Bouillon, canon of the Catholic Cathedral at Ottawa, Ont. He has recently been a guest of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, in Brooklyn. He said:

"It remains to be seen whether or not this great church will be built. The first step is the display of the drawings to the public to learn the sentiment. Next it would be necessary to secure the consent of the archbishop. After that would come the raising of the money—probably $5,000,000. If by chance the Pope should decide within the next few years to leave Rome it would be a grand thing for the city of New York to be prepared to receive him in a church more magnificent even than Saint Peter's."

The style of architecture is to be modern Roman with all the substantial effect possible, but in the rise to the dome the light and airy appearance of Byzantine is secured. In shape the plans provide for a cruciform structure 650 feet long and 450 across the transepts. The height is 450 feet from the pavement to the tip of the cross surmounting the ball on the dome.

HEAVY LUMBER CUT

The Lumbermen Promise to Break the Record for this Winter

The greatest activity prevails in the lumber camps this season as the high prices of timber of all kinds is giving life to the industry. The Dickson Company have about the same force of men in the bush as they had last year. Mr. Alf. McDonald is putting in more men than ever before and so it goes.

Reports to the Crown Lands Department indicate that the present is the busiest season in the history of the Ontario lumber woods. An official who has just returned from the north says there are 10,000 men in the woods between Mattawa and Sault Ste Marie, 2,500 of whom are in the vicinity of Sudbury alone, while the limits east and west of that territory were equally crowded. Many limits on which no cutting has taken place for years are now yielding their portion, owing to the strong demand for lumber in connection with the building operations throughout Canada. All this is not being done without feeling the pinch of the scarcity of labor. In far Western Ontario it has been found necessary to import hundreds of French-Canadians from as far east as Gaspe. Wages are from $25 to $35 a month and board, and many who are mere lads are taken for $20 to $22 a month. One camp foreman, on catching sight of a new lot of workmen, asked if the public schools had received their vacation.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL

Special Meeting Last Night—Tenders for Snowplowing – Other Business

A special meeting of the Ashburnham Council was held last night for the purpose of opening the tenders for snowplowing for the coming winter. Councillor Johnson was the only absentee.

Tenders were received from Messrs. Revoy and Smith for the north end at $49.00 and $40.00 respectively, and from Albert Valois for the south end, at $48. The amounts paid for this work last year were for the north end $36.00 and for the south end $39.00.

It was moved by Councillor Adams, seconded by Councillor Sheridan that the tender of Albert Valois for the south end and W. Frith for the north end, for the season 1902-03 be accepted. Tenders to give security for the proper performance of the work.—Carried.

Councillor Pollock remarked that it was scarcely right to pay $9 more for the plowing for the south end than for the north end when there was more work for the latter, but as the tenders could not be altered the work was allowed to stand.

A communication was received from Mr. Geo. F. King, taking exception to the action of the council in renting his shop to Mr. Wheeler and giving him notice to remove at the termination of a month's time. Mr. King was present at the meeting and personally stated to the council that he expected to retain the shop for another year at least and had been greatly surprised to receive the notice of the council. Besides the difficulty in securing other quarters, it placed him in a most awkward position as he had now made preparations for a continuation in business there.

It was explained that the Council had received the information in good faith that Mr. King intended to remove. With this in view, the next business of the Council was to secure a new tenant, and as Mr. Wheeler agreed to lease the place for a long term, and to pay higher rent that the present occupant, his offer was accepted. The council could not see its way clear to alter its position in the matter, and the motion as passed at the last meeting was allowed to remain.

Mr. Moore spoke for some time before the council, objecting in strong terms to the latter's action in accepting Mr. Wheeler as a tenant for the store while the present occupant was willing to remain, and particularly to the low rents which were being accepted at the present time. In the latter question, of course, nothing could be done at present and the matter was allowed to drop.

A communication was received from Alfred J. Cameron regarding improvements to be made to the Beaver Creek ditch under the Drainage Act. A plan had been sent by the parties interested and the matter will be carefully looked into during the next two weeks and brought up before the next regular meeting of the council.

Mr. Boiler appeared before the council to ask for the completion of the drainage of his property to the creek. His request was granted and the work will be concluded at once.

A by-law exempting the Canadian Ultimator Company from taxes from the 1st of May to the 31st December, 1902, with the exception of school rates, was read a first time and passed.

Arrangements were made for the outlay of $75 in the improvements of the main roads, the money being a grant from the county for that purpose.

An order was drawn on the Treasurer for the account for insurance on the Village Hall received from Mr. W. H. Hill.

The Council adjourned to meet in regular session in two weeks time.

Sensational Affidavits Show That a Deadly Feud is now Raging

Over a Score of Men Fall Victims in One Year in Breathitt County—Terrible Condition of Affairs

Lexington, Ky, Nov. 17—Two of the most sensational affidavits ever filed in a Kentucky court [illegible] just been filed at Jackson, Bre[illegible] county.

That county is the scene of the Hargis-Cockrill feud and within its borders thirty men have been killed this year.

A number of the deaths are credited to one or another of the factions, while several men are exiles from the county because of their fear of assassination.

The affidavits are by attorney J. M. Marcum, and Moses Feltner, his client, accused of the killing of Jesse Fields. The purpose of the affidavits is to secure a continuance of the case of Feltner. They follow on the heels of sensational statements contained in a letter written to circuit Judge Redwin, of Breathitt, by John Patrick, an exile living in this city, in which he said he knew who killed James Cockrill, having been an eye-witness but declines to return to Jackson to testify unless the governor will send a company of militia to protect him and declares that persons who desire his death will kill him if he returns without the protection of troops.

In his affidavit Moses Feltner tells in detail of the alleged plot to kill Attorney J. B. Marcum.

In several he was to do the work, he says, and fearing to refuse, pretended to acquiesce, but warned Marcum each time so that the plans failed.

He says he fears to appear on the streets at Jackson; that such a state of lawlessness exists that there is no protection to any citizen, especially to any who are not in sympathy with the county judge and Sheriff.

He says he has been informed and believes it to be true that those officers have made efforts to have him assassinated. As for Marcum, he says that in last May he was invited to Judge Hargis' office where he met John Smith and John Abner, friends of Sheriff Ed Callaghan and County Judge James Hargis.

He relates that they told him, J. B. Marcum must be killed and he was the man to do it. He continues that he was afraid to refuse and by appointment he met Hargis, Callaghan, Abner and Smith that night.

A Shot in the Back.

He says the plan unfolded at the meeting was for him to go to Marcum's house, get him to come to his law office at night and after starting with him on the return trip at a place where a shotgun was to be concealed, he would shoot Marcum in the back.

He says Hargis gave him $35 to pay Marcum on account, and handed him a shot gun and shells loaded with with buck shot. He says he went to Marcum's house, warned him, and told "them" that Marcum would not come out after dark.

He says that the plan was for him John Smith, and Tom White to hide near Marcum's house and shoot him when he left it on a morning to go to a neighboring town.

Again he says he warned Marcum, and, though they lay in ambush, Marcum did not appear.

He says the next plan was for Tom White to shoot Marcum from Hargis' brother's store, but that Marcum carried his four-months-old baby in his arms and White would not fire.

Prisoners in Homes.

He says that suspicion finally fell upon him as warning Marcum, and, on getting a continuance of his case in court, he followed Marcum in flight. He says he has returned to Jackson but fears to leave his room; that his attorney, Marcum, is also a prisoner in his own house through fear of assassination. He asks for a continuance.

In his affidavit Attorney J. B. Marcum says that he fears to appear at the court house or on the streets of Jackson, near the court house; that he has been in his office but once since the 15th of July.

He says that he has been outspoken against the parties who are accused of assassinating or having assinated Dr. Cox and James Cockrill, upon the streets of Jackson, and that by reason thereof, and by reason of his attorneyship in certain other cases pending in this court, he has incurred the enmity of certain dangerous and lawless men, and is afraid they will carry out their threats to assassinate him which he believes they have made.

He says the sheriff and his deputies are in attendance at this term of the court, and this affiant is afraid to risk himself in their hands after receiving the information he has, all of which he believes to be true. He asks that the case of Felton and all others in which he is attorney will be continued.

Wounded Vanity was Motive

Rubino in Attacking King Leopold Wished to Prove Himself an Anarchist

London, Nov. 17—Wounded vanity, says a Rome correspondent, is considered to have been the chief motive for Rubino's attempt to kill the King of the Belgians. Rubino was denounced last May by the international anarchist press as a spy and expelled from the party. Evidently his attack on King Leopold was due to a desire to prove himself an anarchist without fear or reproach. The correspondent adds that Rubino has long been known to the police of various nations as a dangerous anarchist. He was watched by Italian agents in London until the end of last month. Then he disappeared, only reappearing when his criminal purpose was all but effected.

London, Nov. 17—Government negotiations with the leaders of the Agrarian majority in the Reichstag in regard to the tariff bill, have been resumed behind the scenes, says a Berlin correspondent; The correspondent says that in view of the German national custom of talking politics after dinner, it is very generally assumed that a private meeting of the more conciliatory of the Agrarian leaders with the Imperial Chancellor, Count Von Buelow, at the official residence of the President of the Reichstag, on Saturday evening was intended to promote prospects of an understanding. It is pointed out that the conservative and clerical agrian majority have now a greater interest in securing a compromise than has the Government. It would be easier for Count Von Buelow to renew existing commercial treaties or to negotiate on the basis of the old autonomous tariff for new ones, than to conduct negotiations with his hands bound by the minimum duties provided for in his own bill. Agrarians, on the other hand, will lose the benefits they might receive from the minimum duties if they persist in asking for more. Their great difficulty appears to be the humiliating spectacle they would present to their constituents and to the country at large if they suddenly yielded.

Paris, Nov. 17—M. Capus is bent upon justifying by his activity his nomination to the Presidency of the Society of Dramatic Authors. He is occupied with the greatest vigor in trying to carry out certain urgent reforms, such as enforcing authors' right in America and Russia. He has made up his mind to attack the great dramatic trust abroad. He is full of hope of success. All presidents of the society when elected are inspired by the same zeal. It is as inevitable as measles, but the reforms referred to above still await their solution. The French press has been very ready to recognize the genius of Tolstoi apropos of the production of the "Resurrection" at the Odeon Theatre. He is admitted to have much talent and skill. The "Resurrection" was a triumph over dramatic criticism. Pity, generosity, religion and suffering humanity have an irresistible power over spectators. For the first time critics declare themselves satisfied with the mounting of the piece at the Odeon, and M. Ginesty is not a victim of those delicate pleasantries, which have up to the present been tradition. All journals admit the excellent reception by public and the great success of Mme Dumeny and Mme. Bady in the principal roles.

London, Nov. 17—Affairs in Macedonia are steadily quieting down, says a Constantinople correspondent. The incidents recently reported from that region are without importance, although during the past few weeks representatives of the Macedonian Committee in Bulgaria have been busily gathering subscriptions for the spring campaign. The conviction prevails in diplomatic circles that the attempt will prove abortive in view of the fact that it will be discountenanced by all the powers, and will receive no support, moral or material, from Bulgaria.

SUCCESSFUL MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

Instances in the New World of successful operation of municipal ownership of public utilities are not sufficiently numerous — probably owing to attempts having been so few—that one can afford to pass over the recent report of the town of Santa Clara, Cal. The town has a population of 3,650 persons. While it will be noticed that the experiment is not exactly a huge one, perhaps it is harder to handle such things in small towns than in big cities. Its tax rate is only $3.50 on the thousand dollars. Last year the receipts from the taxes were a little less than $5,900 and those from licenses were $1,000 or about $6,900 in all. Yet the town expended $10,850 and has to its credit over $5,100 as a result of the last year. That is to say, the expenses and the balance are $7,-850 more than the receipts from taxes and licenses. This amount was earned by the public utilities of the town operated by the municipality. Under the old way of letting a few people enjoy these profits accruing from the great natural monopolies, the taxes would have been almost double what they are.

AMERICANS WATCHING DEVELOPMENTS

The Burlington Free Press has discovered a mare's nest. It fancies it perceives signs of restiveness on the part of Canadian public men because of the position which this country occupies as a dependency of Great Britain. Our esteemed contemporary attributes this restiveness to the want of success of the pan-Anglican Conference in London last summer as revealed by the recent partial disclosure of the proceedings. As practically nothing was accomplished at the meetings of the imperial and colonial ministers, and as there was evidently a pretty wide margin between the views held by the Colonial Secretary and the Premier of Canada, it is assumed by the Free Press that the relations between parent and daughter are becoming strained, and that the day when the daughter will set up housekeeping for herself is within measurable distance.

We have great respect for the opinion of the Free Press when it is treating of matters with which it is familiar; but in the present instance we fear it has got out of its depth. It is certainly counting without its host. If our contemporary had followed the trend of events in Canada for some little time anterior to Confederation, it would have discovered that there never was a period when there was not some new champion of independence and occasionally an advocate for annexation; but it would also have discovered that as the years rolled around, and as business and prosperity increased, the advocates for a change in our constitution have steadily grown weaker in numbers and influence. To-day the word annexation is scarcely ever heard even in a whisper; and as for so-called independence—that is severing the ties that binds Canada to Great Britain—that is only spoken of when some disappointed politician or newspaper is in a pet, and has no other balm to apply to his wounded feelings.

It would be folly for Canada to talk seriously about independence in the sense implied by the Burlington Free Press. As a matter of fact there is no more independent country on the face of the earth than Canada is to-day. We have all the benefits of complete independence while sharing very few of its burdens. We make our own laws, regulate our tariff, impose what duties we like, even against Great Britain. We can always get the assistance of the king's government to endorse a commercial tariff with a foreign state, as it is we take complete charge of the administration of the northern half of this great continent, at a nominal expense to us of $50,000 per annum to pay the salary of a Governor-General who rules but does not govern. It would cost us at least one hundred this sum if we attempted to set up shop for ourselves, to say nothing of the lamentably weak and perilous position we should occupy among the nations of the world. Leaving sentiment aside altogether, and as a mere business proposition, the independence of Canada, for many years to come, is not to be thought of for a moment.

The failure of the recent pan-Anglican Conference in London has no effect upon the situation whatever. Few people in Canada expected that it would amount to anything. So, therefore, few people are disappointed. On the whole we think that the Americans who are naturally "watching the developments with interest" will have to strain their eyes for a long time before they see the cat jump.

CANADA AND THE MOTHER COUNTRY

The consultation between the Colonial Premiers and the Colonial Secretary, generally known as the Coronation Conference, had certainly been long enough an Unknown Quantity when an official document issued last week made clear what the whole thing had amounted to. In Canadian circles at least there had been many waggings of the wise-heads and enquiries as to what had been done. With a restraint unusual in newspaper business, enquiries had not been pushed to a sensational issue. Now we know that practically nothing was accomplished, for Mr. Chamberlain, opposed as he was by his colleagues in the British Parliament, felt unable to give to Canada and the other colonies any preferences in cereals which are now dutiable in the Motherland. That this was refused churlishly or at the instigation of Mr. Chamberlain, nobody, in the opinion of the Toronto Saturday Night, can truthfully allege. That it was done in the face of preference given to British goods, which to the extent of 33 1-3 per cent. is offered by Canada, is nevertheless, in the opinion of our contemporary, a slap in the face of those colonial statesmen who believed they could lead up to a preferential tariff by giving concessions. It must be plain to us all that Great Britain neither desires nor is willing to reciprocate favors of this sort. This being the case, it is a matter of policy which should be gravely considered, should Great Britain receive favors which she is not prepared to recognize as being of sufficient value to demand perhaps unusual amenities in return. Notoriously Great Britain is slow to act and takes years to make up its political mind. It is not so in Canada, where we are quick to act, our conditions make long deliberations not only unnecessary, but impossible. Under the circumstances it would possibly be well for Canada to either withdraw the preferential tariff or, as we have before urged in these columns, make it dependent upon the landing of the preferred goods in Canadian ports on either Canadians or British bottoms.

That Premier Laurier and his colleagues did the best they could for us and got nothing in return, adds Saturday Night, not even the privilege of landing our cattle on British soil without being affected by the embargo placed on the cattle of other countries, it is evident that we have nothing to thank Great Britain for, except that she defends our commerce, and we should at once prepare to do our share in the raising of a defence fund and leave her come to a tariff understanding with the world on the basis she thinks wise, though we may think it frightfully dull, slow and foolish.

In this connection there is one fact which the Saturday Night fails to point out. It is that Sir Wilfrid Laurier spontaneously and of his own free will gave the preference tariff to England as a gift, as an acknowledgement of the many and great advantages Canada has received from the parent staff, in a magnificently eloquent, if not a strictly business-like speech, he declared that he should scorn to accept anything in return, adding that Canada wanted no preference in English markets. This was on the occasion of the late Queen's diamond jubilee when the classic head of Canada's premier was slightly turned by the multiplicity of honors conferred upon him in London; but since then Sir Wilfrid's ardor has cooled somewhat; party exigencies have compelled him to become more practical and to-day he asks for concessions that he spurned five years ago. If Mr. Chamberlain now refuses what he was previously disposed to grant, his decision is no doubt largely influenced by the action of the leader himself.

The Late Mrs Haviland

The Patriot, of Charlottetown, P.E.I., thus refers to the demise of Mrs. Haviland:

The Patriot regrets to learn of the death in this city to-day, of Annie Elizabeth Haviland, aged 84 years, relict of the late Hon. Thomas Heath Haviland. Deceased was the daughter of the late John Grubbe, Esq., of Buckinghamshire, England, a member of a distinguished English family. In 1841 Mr. Grubbe came to the Island with his wife and family. He purchased from the Braddocks, Holland Grove and Falconwood, and engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death in 1846. In 1847, his daughter, Annie Elizabeth, became the wife of Mr. Haviland. Her mother and two sisters returned to England in 1854. The late Hon. Mr. Haviland was Lieutenant-Governor from 1879 to 1884, and his wife as lady of Government House, filled her position with tact, grace and dignity, proving a charming hostess and a worthy partner of her esteemed husband, whose death in 1895 was sincerely regretted throughout this Province. The late Mrs. Haviland leaves to mourn two sons and two daughters. The sons are Eustace H., barrister-at-law, of this city, and Edward, of Montreal. The daughters are Mrs. James Peake and Miss Blanche Haviland.

R. W. Grubbe, Esq., late of the Bank of Toronto, Peterborough, is a nephew, and Eustace H. Grubbe, of the Bank of Montreal, Vancouver, and Harry H. Grubbe, of the Bank of Toronto, Toronto, are grand nephews of the deceased.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers Fortune's Spor Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc.

"No. I haven't seen him yet. I'm just from the train—straight from London. I asked for the number of your room, for I wanted a talk with you before I saw anybody else. You look rather queer. I hope you aren't ill, or have had bad news from home."

There was something so strong and dependable in the personality of this tall, dark young man in travelling dress, that Dick's miserable, homesick heart went out to him. The need of confession, the desperate longing for someone to stand his friend, broke down the barriers of shamed vanity which would have hedged round the secret of his guilt; he blurted out the story of his own folly, leaving nothing untold save only the condition that Macaire had made. Instinctively he knew what Newcome's feelings would be at having a girl like Winifred dragged in. He was afraid that Newcome might even try to prevent Winifred from accepting Macaire's terms.

"Macaire threatens to call in the police and charge me as a common thief," he said, "and all for sheer spite. He's got his money, and as for that wretched bauble, who would have dreamed, with all the jewelry which he throws about, that he cared a rap for it? But oh, von Zallheim, if there was any way of getting the thing again. You used to be friendly with Winnie. You'd take some trouble for her sake still, perhaps, though she's treated you so badly, if only to show that you don't bear malice. You're such a good-looking chap, and have such a way with you, that you can do anything with women. For Heaven's sake try to see this old hag who made a fool of me, and get the moonstone Sphinx's head——"

"What!" exclaimed Newcome, with a sudden start. "Macaire's jewel—that you sold—is it a blue moonstone carved into a Sphinx's head, with a gold screw underneath, engraved with the initials 'F.E.Z.'?"

"You've seen it, then?" cried Dick.

"No; but I'd give much to see it. Have I described it rightly?"

"It's exact. The screw with the initials in little letters at the top is in my pocket. The she-fiend didn't care for it."

"Let me look," said Newcome. "And I'll promise you to get that Sphinx's head if I move Heaven and earth to do it."

"Heaven bless you!" ejaculated Dick.

"I hope it will. But it's a selfish wish. I came to England to find the man who had that Sphinx's head. I came from England to Monte Carlo to see if Lionel Macaire was that man."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The Quest of the Moonstone.

Half an hour after knocking at the door of Dick Gray's room, Hope Newcome went out again. Dick had been instructed not to mention his arrival. Downstairs the name of the gentleman who had enquired for Mr. Richard Gray of Macaire's party was not known.

Those few words of Dick's—the allusion to the Sphinx's head—had sent flashes of lightning through Newcome's veins. The mission which had brought him through strange vicissitudes and over many thousands of miles had seemed no further advanced, though for months his whole life had been given to it. Then, one day, a man had begged of him in Park lane near Lionel Macaire's house, and Newcome had given the man half a sovereign because he was an American, speaking with a strong Western accent. And the beggar, who was grateful and loquacious, began telling him a queer, rambling story.

For very few ears would it have struck a keynote; the narrator himself knew not the value of his utterances, still less of his silence, or he would not have been begging in the street, because the person from whom he had expected a gift was absent. But Fate had ordained that his tongue should make music in the ear which could understand.

Newcome took the man to a restaurant and gave him a meal, much as Macaire had done with him nearly five months ago in Brighton. Indeed, the thought of that occasion was printed in strong black and white upon his mind. In the midst of the wild elation, for which he could have shouted aloud, there was loathing of the memory that he had broken bread with Macaire not once, but many times. He was living on money which came to him from Macaire, also; and if it had not been for the secret which had darkened his life since boyhood, this reflection would have half-maddened him—believing what he had begun to believe of the millionaire.

But with the knowledge of that secret before him, the money became far more than ever his own. It never had been Macaire's. He now had a right to it, every penny—and more, which he might, but did not mean to claim.

Without letting the loquacious beggar guess that he was a person of importance, Newcome offered to support his countryman until he could get work. The shabby American was to be paid a pound at the end of every week—this, of course, rendering it necessary that "Baron von Zallheim" should be kept in touch with him and in possession of his address.

When this matter was satisfactorily settled Newcome made certain enquiries about Macaire which he had never had the curiosity to make before. He ascertained, apparently in a casual way, when the millionaire had first become known as a millionaire, and traced back his career to a time before he had settled in England.

All this would have been nothing without the clue which a beggar in the street had supplied; and the clue itself was only a broken thread. To find the other end and match both together Newcome had traveled to Monte Carlo.

There again Fate had played into his hands through the ingenious plot of Macaire himself (for even the most astute of men make mistakes sometimes) and the folly of Dick Gray.

The clue was supplied—yet at the same time it was missing; and Newcome made up his mind that since the work he had to do must be done without bungling, what he had waited for so long he must wait for still. After all these years, what was a day—a week—a month?

From Dick he had the description of the woman who had bought the moonstone, but he was not as fortunate as Dick had been in his quest for her. He could not find her at the Casino.

He did not wish, as things had turned out, that Macaire should know of his presence in Monte Carlo; yet he haunted the gaming rooms for hours that night, running the risk that Macaire himself, or one of Macaire's friends, might stroll in and see him.

When it was close upon eleven o'clock, however, and Newcome had seen no one resembling the picture which Dick had graphically sketched for him, he paused

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are:—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey:—

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons of ore above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works.

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows:—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4.00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows:—

		ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902,	to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2.70
July 1st, 1903,	" " 1904	2.25	2.25

July 1st, 1905,	" " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906,	" " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows:—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6½ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000.00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000.00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

Influence of Names.

"We're going to name our newly arrived boy Reginald," remarked Phillips at the [illegible] the other evening.

"Do you want him to be that kind of person?" asked Jones, in a tone that he hoped would create discussion.

"What are you springing on us now?" asked several of the group, a little wearily.

"It is a great truth, my boy," continued Jones, aiming his remarks at Phillips, who looked a trifle worried about Jones' question. "The relation of name to character is an unexplored but most fertile region. Look up your fiction, and you will find that every great novelist has unconsciously obeyed the law. A man and his name gradually grow toward each other. He may fight his name for a long time, but by some long road at last he must bend to the significance of what he is called. I consider that parents have a sacred duty upon them in choosing out of all the names of history that name which they elect their child shall be. The name which he receives at baptism is the character part, up to which he must always live."

"Really, I don't [illegible]," interposed [illegible] of [illegible] with [illegible] drawl.

"Then look over your reading," went on Jones. "When Sheridan named a character Lady Sneerwell, it is obvious that his conception is of a [illegible] proud and cynical. Such a [illegible] of dubbing limits the character [illegible] to a [illegible] bold strokes. A frank [illegible] of love from her lips, a free-handed generosity, would not be tolerated. She must remain [illegible] and hard till the play ends. Bunyan was fond of [illegible] [illegible] for the [illegible] It survives [illegible] their '[illegible]' like.'

"But [illegible] of name [illegible] the big [illegible] novelist [illegible] certain name [illegible] connotation [illegible] a good [illegible] is pretty [illegible] woman [illegible] Ad[illegible] social [illegible] most of the vices [illegible] friends are forced to admit that he drinks, but his severest critics will concede his generosity. Such is Tom Jones. Tom Jones, [illegible] not cast in [illegible] mould, but yet is justified of his name. [illegible] [illegible] and a deservedly high reputation for chastity, and the implication of the name has been remembered. Joseph Andrews is [illegible] name for Fielding's hero. Jack is a [illegible] blade. Dorothy is sprightly, but warmhearted. Dick is merry and [illegible] heels.

"Authors [illegible] Scott [illegible] with hopeless love. Thackeray gives us an adventuress, heartless, brilliant, and detestable. A character of history often [illegible] Charlie is [illegible] for a [illegible] of [illegible] who is permitted to bear no other name.

"You see that the novelists, who have looked truth in the face, have always done their [illegible] in line with law. Is it any wonder, when once you realize the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] that savages, ignorant persons, and children have felt that one who knew [illegible] had power over them? Religion and chivalry have been in the right of [illegible] the act of naming [illegible] in a man's life. "Book Boosting" in France.

The art of book advertising is thought to have made some progress of late both in England and in this country, but they do these things if not better, at least more energetically in France. A Paris newspaper has begun the publication of a romance which has eight leading personages, and the most interesting guesses of the [illegible] of each is to have a four-seated [illegible] as a prize. Portraits of the characters in the novel are carried about the streets, with such questions as [illegible] Catharine: "[illegible] Catharine marry? If so, whom will she marry?" Again: "Lianne: Will he [illegible] Marquis be successful? [illegible]" Next comes: "Germaine: Will she deceive her husband?" Then [illegible] Will she marry or die before the end of the romance?" Lastly, "[illegible] how many men will she attract? [illegible] by her first love?" These [illegible] are followed by a [illegible] of general problems for solution: "Which of these five women will die by poison? Which of them will administer poison? To whom?" If these methods were to be generally followed by publishers' press agents the reign of the historical romance would take on new terrors.

A Victim.

"Where are you going this summer?"

"I'm going to a stretch of [illegible] sand, where I can be surrounded by the [illegible] of the beaches."

"By yourself?"

"No. Whole family, wife and children, servants, nurses, etc."

"Cottage?"

"Yes. Has eight rooms for sixteen people. Each room will hold comfortably about one-half of a human being."

"Cottage alone?"

"Oh, no. We shall be next to a lot of others. Each with an assortment of children."

"Nice people?"

"Well, they're people I wouldn't think of associating with on ordinary occasions, but of course—"

A Pointer to Barbers.

Barbers [illegible] When a man gets into the chair for a shave or hair cut, etc., all kinds of questions are put to him, and if he gets out alive without [illegible] [illegible] latest sporting event, or pretend to know what Hon. Laurier or Tarte are going to do, he must be either deaf, dumb [illegible] [illegible] that "silence is not golden" in a barber shop, and it does not matter how many [illegible] [illegible] man who shaves must know all about [illegible]

Running a Great Rapids.

"At the head of one of the great rapids a bowman, seeing that I seated well with a light-weight of this crew, invited me to take a paddle and help them through," writes Arthur Heming in the July "Scribner" in describing the Abitibi fur brigade. "While the brigade are shooting rapids light-weights are at a premium. Tossing in an extra set of paddles we stepped aboard, and with a gentle shove the current caught us and carried us out to mid-stream. Long before we sighted white water the roar of the cataract was humming in our ears. We two midmen sat upon dunnage sacks and braced our moccasined feet against the ribbing. Presently the bowman stood up and scanned the river. Dark, ominous water sped ahead for a hundred yards, then disappeared, leaving nothing but a great, surging mass of white that leaped high and dropped out of sight in the apparently forsaken river-bed. Then the steersman stood up, too, and Indian words passed between them. Every moment we were gaining impetus, and always heading for the highest crest of foam. Waiting for the word to paddle was [illegible] worse than waiting for the [illegible] At last [illegible] twenty-five yards from [illegible] water. With a [illegible] from the bowman, we drove our paddles home. The great canoe trembled a little at first as our work was somewhat ragged, but a moment later we settled into an even stroke and [illegible] buoyantly among the tossing billows. Now before us ran a strange, wild [illegible] of seething white [illegible] among gray-capped, dark granite boulders that blocked the way. High, rocky banks standing close together [illegible] the mighty river into a [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] above [illegible] barely [illegible] is dangerous work. We midmen paddle hard to keep the canoe ahead of the current. The steersmen in bow and stern ply and [illegible] their great [illegible] paddles. The bowman with eyes [illegible] watches the [illegible] and signs of hidden [illegible]. The roar of seething water drowns the bowman's orders. The [illegible] follow [illegible] his companion makes. Down [illegible] upon the very back of the [illegible] where the water forms a great [illegible] above the [illegible] With [illegible] the [illegible] then dip [illegible] and [illegible] more [illegible] than [illegible] the angry stream is waging battle with a hoary [illegible] With [illegible] river kisses and roars and lashes it. Yet it [illegible] only frowns destruction [illegible] How the bowman is working! See his paddle bend! With lightning movement he [illegible] his great paddle deep into the [illegible] under the left side of the bow, then with a mighty [illegible] he lifts her bow around. The great canoe swings as though upon a pivot; for I see the steersman doing exactly the very [illegible] at the [illegible] moment? W[illegible] But the next instant the paddles are working on the opposite sides, for the bowman sees signs of a water-covered rock not three yards from [illegible] [illegible] the paddle snaps like a rotten twig. Instantly he grabs for another, and a great [illegible] the length of the [illegible] bottom. The next moment he is working the new paddle. A little water is coming in, but she is running true. The rocks now grow fewer, but still there is another pitch ahead. Again the bow dips as we rush down the incline. Spray rises in clouds that drench us to the skin, as we plunge through the "great swell" and then shoot out among a multitude of tumbling billows that threaten to [illegible] us. The canoe rides [illegible] white [illegible] beneath us. At last we leave their wild arena, and entering calmer water, paddle away to the end of the portage trail."

Now is the Last Chance to Buy the St. Paul & Sunset Oil COMPANY'S STOCK AT 35 CENTS

California Oil Stocks Have Paid Millions in Dividends

KERN COUNTY (SUNSET DISTRICT) OIL COMPANIES PAID ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS IN AUGUST ALONE

MORGAN IN THE OIL INDUSTRY—NEW YORK FINANCIER AT THE HEAD OF A $20,000,000 COMPANY TO EXPLOIT CALIFORNIA FIELDS

Bakersfield, Cal., Sept. [illegible] [illegible] Morgan [illegible] will run lines to the coast from [illegible] coast range at a [illegible] [illegible] also will go down the San Joaquin valley [illegible] [illegible] $5,000,000 [illegible] [illegible] half [illegible] [illegible] parallel with the line of the Standard [illegible] A company, having a capital [illegible] formed a separate company, capitalized [illegible] It is stated that the Morgan syndicate will be prepared to [illegible] 2,000,000 barrels the first year, and will increase that amount at the rate of 1,000,000 a year until the whole demand of the market is met. On October 12, or a few days later, surveyors will be put into the field, and it is most feasible to transport oil to tide water. The surveys will run over the [illegible] stations, storage tanks, and the like. Mr. Morgan and his associates have also [illegible] turned into a reserve fund.

ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL CO.'S GIGANTIC TRACT

[illegible] will be developed and should prove a formidable rival to the new company.

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY own and control a large tract of absolutely oil-proven asphalt land in the very heart of the best oil producing field of Kern County, California, the district where flowing wells are situated. We have a bed of Liquid Asphalt underlying a portion of our lands. Our property is situated right at Sunset Station. A new line of railway is surveyed and will be constructed in a very short time, putting us not only in touch with Eastern cities, but in touch with tide water. This in addition to the railroad facilities we now have. Remember that we own our land—it is paid for and entirely free from debt.

PROFESSOR DR. [illegible] SCHIMPER, Analytical and Expert Chemist, of St. Paul, makes the following statement relative to the [illegible] which can be produced, and the estimated profit of the Sunset Crude Oil. A copy of the original certificate can be seen at the office of the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co., which is in substance as follows:

[illegible] Sunset Oil Company, I find the [illegible] 1,000 lbs. of this crude oil [illegible] of asphaltum, value $25 to $35 [illegible] of lubricating oil, value 50c. per gal. [illegible] gal. of distilled oil, value [illegible] (Estimated value $54.00.) [illegible] value $22.00 [illegible] [illegible] value $60.00.)

In my opinion many other valuable products can be obtained from the oil of that famous field.

Respectfully,

DR. F. J. SCHIMPER, Chemical Expert.

THE figures to show the immense profits that will accrue from our product when [illegible] We expect to commence building Our Refinery in the very near future. The sale of the next allotment of stock will be used for that purpose. The largest flowing wells in California were brought in adjoining our property and their stock was taken off the market. We employ the best drillers who report rapid progress on our wells and we are looking [illegible] equal, if not to excel any in the Sunset field. Our General Manager, Superintendent and Drillers, all are experienced oil men. The officers of our company are all thorough, competent and successful men who have always made a success of their undertaking in life and who will see that the welfare of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company is furthered, fostered and promoted to the most advantageous extent possible.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS SHOULD BE PAID STOCKHOLDERS

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS should be paid to the stockholders of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company when their property is fully developed, and [illegible] equipped and in full operation. ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS was paid by Kern County Oil Companies during the month of August alone.

SIX MILLION BARRELS is the consuming capacity of the Southern Pacific Railway engines, which are now equipped for burning oil. Outside of this consider other railway lines, [illegible] factories, [illegible] which all [illegible] of fuel oil and last but not least, hotels and dwellings are falling in line with the [illegible] of [illegible] fuel oil.

A GOOD REASON WHY YOU should invest in the stock of St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company. More fortunes have been made in oil than any other business. Consider the enormous amount of money the Standard Oil Company has made for the fortunate stockholders, but the California oil companies have done better in proportion to their capitalization than the Standard Oil Company. Here is what $100 has [illegible] those who invested that amount in the following California companies in the beginning of their career:

Home—Whittier $1,000 on an investment of $100.

Kern—returned $[illegible] on an investment of $100.

Peerless returned $[illegible] on an investment of $100.

Dillon returned $62,500 on an investment of $100.

New York returned $[illegible] on an investment of $100.

[illegible] returned $[illegible] on an investment of $100.

Home returned $[illegible] on an investment of $100.

THERE is no reason in the world why the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company's oil property when developed should not bring like returns.

CONTRARY to the general supposition the oil [illegible] history of all mining [illegible] When it is known and demonstrated beyond question of a doubt, where its wealth is placed and you put your money in to take it out, your money is invested. Hence you are an investor, not a speculator. A proven oil producing property does not draw its profits from the people, but creates new wealth. It is the soundest of all investments.

WE CLAIM NOTHING WE CANNOT PROVE TO BE TRUE

owns its immense tract of proven Oil Land without a penny of encumbrance. The property is located in the most wonderful and richest oil producing section in the world, in the famous Sunset District of Kern County, California. Other Oil Companies in Kern county have paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in dividends—and today their stock cannot be bought at any price. These companies in many instances have less property, and in some cases are only lessees, not owning refinery, tanks, lines, etc.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. [illegible]—Dr. Adolph Lorenz, of Vienna, who operated on Miss Lolita Armour, and who arrived in this city last Sunday evening, has already performed several successful bloodless surgical operations in the presence of a large number of [illegible] surgeons.

He treated free of charge yesterday a case of double club feet of a [illegible]-month-old baby, Ross Jackson, of [illegible] This infant's feet were so badly disarranged that they were bent inward and upward until the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the only possible walking surface the [illegible] of the feet.

Jack Dalton Says Alaskan [illegible]

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. [illegible]—Jack Dalton, the Klondike trail [illegible] has arrived from Dawson. He says he accompanied Lieut. [illegible] who was sent to find Russian boundary monuments in Alaska. He went over the very line of stone monuments spoken of by Dr. [illegible] as the boundary monuments. Dalton says they are not boundary monuments but stones placed to mark Indian graves.

A [illegible] known Vancouver citizen has complained to the authorities that the United States Government has erected a number of Houses of Refuge on the North shore of Portland Canal in territory in dispute between the United States and Canada. Great Britain [illegible] that the [illegible] Canal is the boundary, while the United States says the Portland Canal is the dividing line.

Saturday's Market

The market on Saturday was attended by a big crowd. In the hall fowl, eggs, butter, &c., were in large supply, but outside on the square the offerings of roots, vegetables, etc. were not up to the previous Saturday, although the supply was equal to the demand. Prices ruled high and buyers were slow in making purchases. The following were the prevailing quotations:—Geese, [illegible] turkeys, [illegible] to $1.[illegible] each; chickens, 40 to 60c. a pair; ducks, 75 to [illegible]c. a pair; butter, [illegible] lb.; eggs, [illegible] doz.; pork, 8 to 9c; beef, [illegible] to [illegible]c; potatoes, $1.[illegible] to $1.[illegible] bag; apples, [illegible] to $1.[illegible] bag; onions, 30c peck; carrots, 10c peck; cabbages, [illegible] to [illegible]c doz.; celery, [illegible] per bunch; turnips, [illegible] bag; pumpkins, [illegible] to 15c; [illegible] tomatoes, [illegible] basket; [illegible] each; pears [illegible] peck; beets, [illegible] peck; parsnips, [illegible] peck; honey, [illegible]; hay, $[illegible] to $[illegible] per ton.

STATEMENT OF MR. MITCHELL

To the Commission Sent Out by President Roosevelt

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 15.—The commission appointed by President Roosevelt to arbitrate the differences between the anthracite mine workers and their employers began the hearing of the miners' side of the case to-day. When the commission opened its session to-day the only evidence before it was the preliminary statement of Mr. Mitchell, in which he said:

"Of the 147,000 men and boys employed in the anthracite coal fields, 64,072 or 43 per cent., are employed on contract, or piece work; the remaining 83,000, or 57 per cent., are employed by the hour, day, week or month. Of the 64,072 contract men, 37,804 are miners and 26,268 are miners' laborers.

DANGEROUS WORK.

"The work of a miner and a miners' laborer is extremely hazardous; in fact, it is more dangerous than employment in any other important industry in the world. The number of persons killed and injured is greater than in any other industry. Each day the anthracite coal mines are in operation 2 6-10 persons lose their lives, and three times as many are maimed, and yet these men receive less wages annually than are received by men performing precisely similar work in other fields, under more favorable and less hazardous conditions.

"The number of years a man can retain his health and strength in this occupation is limited. If he escapes death or injury by falls of rock or coal, he cannot escape attacks of miners'asthma. There is scarcely a mine worker who has not contracted this malady. The miners are compelled to work in powder smoke, in foul air, many of them in water, and their work is difficult and exhausting. Reputable insurance companies will not issue policies to this class of workmen. The risks are so great that the premiums would be prohibitive to men whose earnings are so low. The entire 20 per cent. which they demand as an increase in their wages would not suffice to carry an insurance of one thousand dollars.

"It seems but fair and just that wages paid these classes of workmen should be as high, if not higher, than wages paid to skilled artisans in other industries. It is certainly not unjust to ask that these miners should receive as high wages as are paid to miners in the bituminous coalfields, in the silver and gold mines, or in the iron ore and copper mines, all of which work is less hazardous, freer from liability to disease, requiring less experience and less skill, and is better paid than labor in the anthracite coalfields."

AN EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

In supporting the demand for the reduction of the hours of day laborers, Mr. Mitchell showed that it amounted practically to a demand for 20 per cent. increase of compensation for 83,000 men or 57 per cent. of all mine employee. He said further that the eight-hour day is the standard working day in the mining industry. Eight hours constitute a day's work in the coal mines of Great Britain; in all the silver, gold, and copper mines, and in the bituminous coal mines in the different States of this country.

FAIR SYSTEM OF WEIGHING.

Defending the third demand, that coal shall be weighed, and paid for by weight and that 2,240 pounds shall constitute a ton, Mr. Mitchell declared that the present method of measuring the coal produced by the miners in the Lackawanna, Wyoming and Lehigh regions has been the source of more discontent than any other of the many injustices imposed upon the miners, and there can be no contentment among these workers until an honest system has been adopted. Paying for coal by the car or by a ton weighing from 2,740 to 3,150 pounds is a flagrant injustice, he declared.

Mr. Mitchell continued: "The anthracite companies, not satisfied with an extra legal ton of from 2,740 to 3,150 pounds, have a system of docking, through which they appropriate additional part of the miners' earnings. A miner is docked all the way from 500 to 1,000 pounds upon a car, as a penalty for loading impurities, for which he has already been penalized to the extent of from 700 to 900 pounds in excess of impure weight. In other words, he is punished twice for the same offence."

SETTLE DISPUTES.

Mr. Mitchell then took up the fourth demand of the miners, for a trade agreement, with the necessary machinery for the adjustment of local grievances. He outlined the history and policy of the United Mine Workers of America, and explained that by its constitution the anthracite and bituminous mine workers had some rule for the local government of local affairs.

"The only manner," he said, "in which the national organization is permitted to interfere is that before a strike is inaugurated by the district organization the approval of the president of the National Union must be obtained; but the president of the national organization has no authority to inaugurate a strike. Thus the coal mine operators are afforded a greater measure of protection against a strike than they would have under a separate and independent organization."

THE UNION'S RESPONSIBILITY.

As to the responsibility of the mine workers' organization Mr. Mitchell said: "At the present time the United Mine Workers of America has contracts with the operators of fourteen States and district, fixing the amount the miners shall receive per ton, the amount the various classes of labor shall receive per day, the number of hours which shall constitute a day's work and the methods and machinery for the adjustment of local grievances by joint conferences with the mine owners. These are mutual contracts, which are advantageous to both miner and operator, and protect the public against the effects of strikes or lockouts. The reports of the United States Government on strikes in the mining industry show that the number and duration of strikes has been materially reduced each year since the system of joint conference and mutual agreement has been introduced.

"The trade agreement has proved effective in restraining workmen from engaging in local or general strikes. There have been no strikes of any magnitude in any of the coal mining States in which trade agreements exist. We seek to establish the same method of adjusting wage differences in the anthracite field."

PLEA FOR CHILDREN.

Mr. Mitchell concluded with a plea for the children. He said: "Our little boys should not be forced into the mines and breakers so early in life; our little girls should not be compelled to work in the mills and factories at an age when they should be in school. These children are the future citizens of our nation; their parents should be enabled to earn wages sufficiently high to give them at least a common school education, so as to equip them better for the grave responsibilities which will ultimately devolve upon them."

Mainly About People.

Mr. Harry de Windt, in his book, "Finland As It Is," tells of a bon mot of Andree, the Arctic explorer. Just before his last voyage he was driven to distraction at a dinner-party by a talkative neighbor. "But how will you know, professor, when you have really crossed the North Pole?" was one of many silly questions. "Oh, that will be simple enough, madame," replied Andree, with his well-known dry humor. "A north wind will become a south one!"

It is related that when the Earl of Rochester, in the reign of Charles II., rose to make his maiden speech in the House of Lords, he said: "My lords, my lords, I rise this time for the first time—the very first time. My lords, I divide my speech into four branches." Here there was an embarrassing pause of some seconds. "My lords," the earl then ejaculated, "if ever I rise again in this House, you may cut me off, root and branches, and all forever."

The father of Earl Fitzwilliam, who died recently, was an excellent landlord. A London paper relates how once a farmer went to him with the complaint that the earl's fox-hunters had ruined a field of corn, or, as we should call it, wheat. The earl gave the man fifty pounds in payment for damage. After harvest-time the farmer returned the money, saying that the wheat had turned out well, after all. Earl Fitzwilliam drew a check for one hundred pounds and gave it to his tenant. "This is as things should be between man and man," said he. "When your eldest son comes of age, give him this, and tell him how and why you got it."

Wu Ting-fang, the Chinese Minister, told the ladies of the Washington Law College a story Saturday night that made them all laugh. "I was at a banquet a few nights ago," he said, "and I met the wife of one of the members of Congress. She sat near me at table. I tried to be entertaining. Finally she leaned over and said: 'Oh! Mr. Wu, we all think you are so brilliant. Isn't it a pity you are only Chinese?' "

The late Noah Davis, justice of the Supreme Court of New York, was one of the many judges and lawyers who make the court room the scene of some of our best wit and humor. Once a lawyer objected to a witness, but Judge Davis refused to sustain him. The lawyer cried, "But, Your Honor, I submit—" and here he broke off. "That's right," said the judge, quickly; "always submit. Crier, adjourn court!" In one case over which he presided there were fifty-five distinct offences, and four counts on each offence, two hundred and twenty in all. "Well," said Judge Davis, "there are more counts than in a German principality."

When Collis P. Huntington, the late president of the Southern Pacific Railway, was married for the second time, Henry Ward Beecher performed the marriage ceremony. Huntington's first wife had been dead less than one year, and he desired the second marriage to be kept secret until his return from Europe. He gave Mr. Beecher a marriage fee of $1,500. When Huntington returned, some months later, he went through a public ceremony, and Beecher again officiated. He gave Beecher another fee of $1,500. The great preacher had his humor aroused by this second fee. Turning to Huntington, he said: "Collis, I do wish you were a Mormon."

The butler in a Scotch family occupies a privileged and unique position. He sometimes assumes a freedom of speech which seems to American ears to border on impertinence; but to those who knew him his frank speech is only one of the many evidences of his interest in the family welfare. A young New York woman was the guest at a house where a butler of that sort reigns. She submitted to his patronage with much amusement; but one day there were unexpected and important guests for dinner, and a little while before the meal was served the butler waylaid the young American in the hall. "I'm fearin' there'll no be quite enough soup," he whispered, "so when it's offered, ye maun decline it, lass." "Decline soup, James?" she said, laughing. "Why, that would not be polite." "Weel, not precisely," said James, with a benignant smile, "but they'll a' make excuse for ye, thinkin' ye ken nae better."

Frith, the celebrated Royal Artist, once painted a portrait of himself, and in the course of years forgot all about it. But a friend entered his studio one morning and asserted that a capital picture of him was on view in a small shop in Great Portland street. "It's not a bit like what you are now," observed the friend, "but it may have resembled you some years ago. Go and look at it." Mr. Frith went, and found his own image after an estrangement of forty-five years. He determined to buy it, though he had not the faintest recollection of having painted it. "Ah, a portrait!" said Frith to the woman in charge of the shop, after he had pretended to examine several other works. "Whose likeness is that?" "That," said the lady, "is a portrait of the celebrated artist, Frith, painted by himself." "Why, he must be an elderly man," put in the artist. The woman remarked that he was young once. "Humph!" quoth the genial W. P. F.; "not much of a picture." To this the woman demurred, and asked £20 for the canvas. It was Frith's turn to appear surprised. "Well," replied the shopkeeper without moving a muscle, "it cost us nearly as much; we shall make a very small profit. You see, it is very valuable because the artist is diseased." "Deceased," exclaimed the astonished painter. "Dead, do you mean?" "Yes, sir; died of drink. My husband attended the funeral." Frith bought the picture, but did not revive for some time.

English.

A Washington lady who is so fond of her home that she stays in it sometimes all the year round, was assailed, says "Lippincott's Magazine," by a conventional friend in conventional language.

"I knew that you usually wintered here," she said, "but I was astonished to hear that you had summered here!"

"I have not only wintered here and summered here," replied the unfashionable one, "but I will astonish you still further when I tell you that I always fall here and have sometimes sprung here."

—The work of the Government dredge "Trent" in charge of Mr. Frank Farris is progressing favorably.

—The new concrete wharf immediately below the locks has been completed and is a splendid improvement on the old wooden one, and is greatly appreciated by the steamboat men. The government is also replacing the old wharf between the lock's bridge and the lock with concrete, about half of which is already under way, and when completed will be a great improvement.

PLAIN MAN FOR HUSBAND

Matrimonially Speaking This is Heyday of His Popularity

London, Nov. 15—As the result of examining a very extensive collection of portraits of the newly-married obtained from the illustrated papers, the present writer has come to the conclusion that the plain man is just now in the heyday of his popularity, matrimonially speaking.

It would seem that while the handsome man is charming to dally with, some one whose features are homely indeed even ugly, is regarded as the wiser matrimonial venture.

The wives of the modern Adonis appear to have discovered, in fact, that by her own act she created a problem that brings to her many hours of uneasiness, if not of actual pain.

Her husband lives upon the approbation of others. Her own worship of him may for a while suffice to satisfy him; but later on he will assuredly heed that of the outside world. And the outside world is only too pleased to grant him all the admiration he requires. Balls, dinner parties, picnics, skating meetings demand his presence constantly, but make no point of his being there at all, a fact she quickly discerns, and proportionately resents. Should she absent herself from such gaities, she imagines her husband making himself too agreeable to this pretty woman or that, and should she become a hanger-on of his popularity she is all the while seething with hatred for her equivocal position.

Much of the vanity of the handsome man arises from the indiscreet adoration showered upon him in childhood. As he grows up he is made much of outside the family circle because it is pleasant to have in a room full of guests as many handsome men as possible. And the sequel? Is it not obvious? When he fell in love, it was not altogether because his choice was fair and sweet, but because, she, too, paid him the tribute of admiration.

WANTS GOOD MEN

Now, it is all very well to put a man on a pedestal and wreathe him with bays before marriage; but what a woman wants after marriage is a good and serviceable article in the way of a husband.

It is excessively annoying to a woman always to have to play second fiddle pianissimo when the beauty question is uppermost. Breathes there the wife in any household who dislikes some little passing mention made from time to time about her good looks and charming individuality. But the wife of an Adonis obtains little of this sweet incense.

Sweep away this picture and contemplate the companion one of the plain husband. His object is to make life a bed of roses for his wife and family. Unselfishly the plain man toils.

The plain husband "puts up" with things. Did ever a handsome one brook the domestic trials he cheerfully endures? Somehow the handsome man is expected to regard calamities from quite a different standpoint. Nay, more, the ugly, good humored head of a household is expected to be the handy man of the family. If a chimney smokes, his plain features must be begrimed in at attempt to get at the root of the mischief; if a pipe leaks, his red and uncultured paws are quite good enough to probe the defect to its very depths. What handsome curled darling could possibly be expected to risk his good looks by performing such nasty tasks as these?

MANY KILLED IN GUATEMALA

Volcanic Eruption Wiped Out Villages and Destroyed Coffee Plantations.

San Francisco, Nov. 15—News received today to the Pacific mail steamer Newport confirms the report received last Sunday of much damage done in Guatemala, on the morning of Oct. 26 as the result of a violent eruption of the volcano of Santa Maria in Quezaltenango district, on the seaward slope of a small range of mountains separating Quezaltenango from the port of Champerico.

Details are being suppressed by the Government, but it is said that many lives were lost as the result of the fall of ashes; thousands of horses, cattle and other animals were killed and rich coffee plantations ruined. The loss of the new crop of coffee will amount to 15,000 tons.

Americans in Champerico said, the towns of Palmar, San Felipe, Colombia and Coatepec had been destroyed with probably great loss of life.

The ashes thrown from the volcano still lay over the plantations to a depth of six or seven feet, and the houses had been crushed by the weight of mud and stones.

Falling ashes and floating pumice stone were encountered by the Newport at sea 120 miles away from the volcano.

STOCK MARKETS

Those New Rock Island Securities

New York, Nov. 17.—This week has witnessed the listing upon the New York Stock Exchange of the Rock Island securities, comprising both a common and preferred stock, amounting to $47,497,000 preferred and $67,256,260 common. The preferred stock bears non-cumulative dividends of 4 per cent. until 1910, then 5 per cent. until 1917, and 6 per cent. thereafter. All earnings in excess go to the common stock. The company report that it is earning at present about seven per cent. upon the common shares. The company has now in operation about 7,000 miles of line and more than 1,000 miles under construction. The funded debt of the system amounts to $141,078,000, which is moderate taking into consideration the immense mileage of the Rock Island. On June 30th last the combined surplus of the Rock Island Company amounted to $20,500,259; the income account shows an additional $1,567,366 from July 1st to Aug. 31st; making the total surplus of the system on Sept. 1st last aggregate $22,066,625. The gross earnings for July and Aug. amounted to over seven and one half million dollars; this indicates gross earnings of over $45,000,000 annually. Operating expenses for July and August amounted to $4,110,643, leaving net earnings for the 2 months of $3,411,766. Few people appreciate the comparatively rapid growth of the Rock Island system. Its mileage and earning power has advanced with leaps and bounds and when normal conditions are resumed in the share markets the Rock Island issues will prove attractive speculatively at going prices. The common would appear to be specially good considering its earning capacity and the price at which it is selling. It is well worthy of investigating in our opinion and will soon become a favorite with the speculative public. The history of the Rock Island system in the past two years illustrates the wondrous strides of the middle western roads, their phenomenal growth and additional importance. Money invested in them is bound in the natural course of events to increase rapidly. There can be no possibility of its doing otherwise.

Summary—To-day's market behaved splendidly, making further excellent advances. Manhattan was the leader, rising fully five points from Saturday's close, closely followed by the general list. C. F. I. jumped three points, sugar two points, M. R. 2 1-2 points, B. R. T. Reading and L. N. 2 points more, and the entire market was strong. Minor reactions were numerous. There was a dearth of stocks offering and an entire absence of liquidation. Some of the leading financial writers who recently deplored any advance in prices with loans so voluminously extended yesterday declared the situation cleared. We again lean strongly to the bull side, recommending immediate purchases, well fortified margins. Money closed 4 per cent. Sales 718,900.

When Buying Mining Stock Buy the Best

AN INVESTMENT IN THE

Pitkin Gold Belt Mining and Reduction Company

Which is Safe and Sure of Quick Returns, may Bring an Enormous Return at any Moment. It has the Possibilities of Rivaling the Great Mines of the Past.

This Company has a mile on a true fissure vein, in the center of the Gunniston Gold Belt, Colorado, which is the "Mother" lode or dike, which has produced 55 per cent. more gold than the total output of the Cripple Creek district.

This Mine is no Prospect. Nor is it Waiting on Your Subscription to Buy Machinery or for Development.

After a careful examination by experts, Joseph M. Bradley, M. E., and Mr. George Arlett, A. I. M. E., Amalgamated Copper Company's expert in Chihuahua, Mexico, they advised the purchase of the property. The property had shallow development upon it, showing two ore shoots from which smelting ore had been shipped to the Buena Vista Smelter.

The Company purchased and paid for the latest improved machinery and has put a shaft down 250 feet and intend to carry it down 1000 feet. On the 150 foot level 200 feet of development has been made and an ore shoot has been encountered and blocked out for 57 feet, carrying values in gold from 2 to 6 ounces or $40 to $120 per ton. The cost of mining, hauling, freight and smelters charges will be between $12 and $15 per ton.

Ed. McCarthy & Co., bankers, guarantee a shipping mine of smelting ore running from 2 to 6 ounces in gold, or $40 to $120 per ton, by January 1st, 1903, or all funds will be returned to subscribers upon presentation of receipt issued by said bank.

Also to prospective purchasers of $500 worth of stock we are offering a free trip to Colorado and return. You investigate first and purchase afterward. Could you expect anything fairer than this?

The capital stock of this company is $1,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares of stock at $1 each, full paid and non-assessable. A portion of the treasury stock is now offered at

Mining Investment Without Precedent

A SMALL SUM INVESTED NOW SHOULD PROVIDE COMFORTABLE INCOME FOR MANY YEARS

The LARDEAU Mines, Capitalized at Only $100,000.00, Should Produce $270,000.00 Net Revenue Per Year—These Figures are Based on the Reports of Well-Known Mining Engineers—Present Price of the Stock Only 10 Cents a Share, but Subscriptions Will Have to be Made Promptly, as the Price Will Soon Advance to Very Much Higher Figures.

We do not hesitate to say that in our judgment stock in the LARDEAU MINES LIMITED, offers a most magnificent opportunity for investment.

There is every reason to believe that the LARDEAU MINES will pay a profit of 270 per cent. PER YEAR, within a short time, and will continue to yield such profits for more than a lifetime.

These are stupendous figures, but we believe them to be absolutely conservative. Our reasons are based on these facts:

PROOF OF NO STOCK JOBBING

In the first place the capitalization is only $100,000. This low capitalization shows upon the face of it that the company is honestly organized—that there is no suspicion of stock-jobbing, which has too often ruined many otherwise honest companies.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY

The property is located in the celebrated Lardeau mining division of West Kootenay, British Columbia. The property owned by this company consists of three full claims, embracing an extent of 154 acres—mineral claims in British Columbia are 1,500x1,500 feet—equal to 51 acres in each extent. Three strong parallel ore veins run through the property from end to end, a distance of of 4,500 feet. If placed end to end this would give us 13,500 feet, equal to a continuous ore body over two and a half miles in length. The values are in gold, silver, copper and lead, and run from $26.00 to $77.00 per ton of 2,000 pounds. These results show indications of permanent values of the most convincing kind.

GROSS VALUE OF SHIPMENTS.

The gross value of shipments of ore aggregating 6,181,604 pounds from twelve mines in the Lardeau, all situated near the property owned by this company, was $451,410.81, equal to a return per ton of over $146.00. The property owned by this company shows up equally as well as any of these more fully developed mines, and will, we are convinced, shortly rank among the best in the Lardeau division.

READ THESE FIGURES CAREFULLY

In a very conservative statement issued by the officers of the company, appears the following:

"In order to show why we are confident we are right, we will estimate our ore values at $50.00 per ton, a little over one-third of the average ore values of the entire Lardeau mining division. We will also base our calculations on a daily output of 30 tons—a small amount compared with the extent of our property and the size of its ore bodies. We will allow $10.00 per ton for mining, transportation (a few miles only) and smelting charges. The profits after making a reasonable reduction for incidentals and surplus, work out as follows:

30 tons at $50.00 per ton...	$1,500
Less $10.00 per ton mining, transportation, and reduction charges	300
Net daily income......	1,200
Say for 300 days per year...... ...	300
Total net yearly income...	360,000
Deduct for incidental expenses, $5 per ton... ......$45,000
Deduct for company's surplus account $5 per ton. 45,000	90,000

which sum is equal to 270 per cent. per annum on our capital stock of $100,000.

"This estimate is made on the basis of a small output compared to the extent of our property and the splendid facilities it affords for economical mining and on the operation of the mine for 300 days per year only, so that anyone can see at a glance that we are not overestimating in any particular, especially when the output of mines similarly situated, and with ore bodies of less extent than ours, ship hundreds of tons each day. There is no good reason why our property, when fully developed—which will be within six months to a year—should not ship several hundreds of tons of ore per year, but we are basing our calculations on the immediate future in preparing the above estimate.

"We are now within seventy to eighty feet of the main ore veins, and assays show values as high as $77.00 per ton. The average returns from twelve mines in our district, according to Government records, which are always conservative, run as high as $146.40 a ton in gold, silver, copper and lead.

HONEST, LEGITIMATE MANAGEMENT

We know the men connected with the management of the LARDEAU MINES, and have known them for years. We know that they never were and never will be connected with any but honest and legitimately conducted enterprises.

REPORT OF MINING ENGINEER.

The property has been thoroughly examined by well known mining engineers and their reports have borne out every statement that has been made by the company. Mr. H. O. McClymont, one of the last engineers to make a report says in conclusion:

"The average assays are most encouraging, considering the great width and continuancy of the leads across the country with such great width and prominence of the surface, and judging from other properties in the near vicinity, some of which are on the same level and have developed very rich ore bodies. The LARDEAU MINES are as good as any, if not the best, in the vicinity, and I verily believe with a nominal expenditure, they should be made dividend-paying in a short time, and I would strongly recommend extensive developments towards that end. Signed, H. O. McClymont, Mining Engineer."

SMALL AMOUNT OF MONEY NEEDED.

As Mr. McClymont says in his report, only a small sum of money is needed to complete the development work and put these mines on a dividend paying basis.

We want to raise about $10,000 from the sale of shares, this money to be used to complete the work just specified.

A very short time will be required to raise this amount of money for this magnificent property, and then the sale of stock will be discontinued.

READ THIS CAREFULLY.

The present price of the stock is 10 cents per share.

The price will be advanced to 15 cents per share very soon, and then 20 cents per share.

The company reserves the right to withdraw the stock from the market without notice.

TWO YEARS AGO—AND NOW.

We believe that there are 99 chances in 100 of the LARDEAU MINES proving a BONANZA. One property in the vicinity of the Lardeau was recently sold for $600,000 cash, and stock in addition. Two years ago it was not nearly as good a prospect as the Lardeau is today.

The LARDEAU MINES, LIMITED, is a small, close corporation and the profits will consequently be large to each stockholder.

Those who are fortunate enough to buy stock at the low price of 10 cents can calculate on an annual income of $135.00 from an investment of $100.00. In other words, you would get your principal back and $35.00 besides every year.

YOU CAN PAY IN INSTALMENTS.

Write us for further particulars.

We will allow you to purchase a block of stock and pay for it in monthly instalments. Before your stock is paid for you will see it double in value—perhaps more.

We urge prompt action, because of the approaching increase of 15 cents per share, which may occur any day. The safest thing to do is to send us $10, which will reserve the stock you desire at 10 cents per share. Then you can investigate the matter carefully and fully and if you are not completely satisfied we will return your money.

WRITE TO-DAY, TO-MORROW MAY BE TOO LATE.

The power of Scientific Massage to cure Chronic Ailments is being demonstrated daily by Dr. Titus at Hotel National. If you are ill, it costs nothing to see him.

Pocket Book Lost

Between Hunter Street Bridge and Stewart street, Ashburnham, a pocket book, containing a small sum of money and a railway ticket to Port Hope. Finder will be rewarded by leaving at the Times Bookstore.

Reserve This Date

The Rev. Dr. Cleaver, of Jarvis street church, Toronto, will deliver a lecture under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of St. Paul's Church on Thursday, Dec. 11. This will indeed be well worth hearing.

Provincial Appointments

The following Provincial appointments have been made:—J. B. T. Caron, of Ottawa, W. C. Brown, of Tilsonburg, R. J. Stewart, of Kincardine, to be notaries public; S. Finerty of Brudenell, to be Division Court Bailiff for Renfrew County, to succeed J. L. O'Grady, resigned.

An Old Relic

Mr. R. V. Winch, of Vancouver, B.C., a nephew of our esteemed fellow-citizen, Mr. Harry Winch, recently purchased from Mr. J. F. Hamilton, proprietor of Cobourg's "curio" shop, an old relic in the shape of a spinning wheel, over 100 years old. The wheel has been in Cobourg for over 75 years, where Mr. Winch spent his boyhood days.

Sorting Fish

The Globe says the Fisheries Department have authorized one or two parties in the vicinity of Rice Lake to fish with nets for suckers and mud cats. This is with a view of clearing the waters of these objectionable fish, so that bass and maskinonge may increase. Care is being taken that any of the latter fish which may be taken are returned to the water.

The Agonizing Pains of Rheumatism

Swollen, aching joints, muscles are stiff and sore, every movement accompanied by pain. The most potent remedy is Polson's Nerviline, which has five times the pain-subduing power of any other preparation. Apply Nerviline copiously, rub it on well and then bind in a hot flannel bandage. This will cure the worst cases in a short time. Try Nerviline for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica or Lumbago—it's all right and only costs a quarter.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills cure Constipation.

Died in the Hospital

Samuel Meade, a resident of Ashburnham, passed away at the Nicholls Hospital yesterday morning. Deceased had been a resident of Peterborough for seventeen years, and was a carpenter by trade. His wife died some fifteen years ago, and only one daughter, 11 years of age, remains to mourn his death. The funeral takes place today at 10 a.m., from the residence of Mr. M. T. Butcher, 679, Stewart street, to the Dobraygeon cemetery.

Farmers' Institute

The West Peterborough Farmers' Institute will meet in the Council Chamber, Peterborough, on Monday, Dec. 1st. Addresses will be delivered by Messrs. B. M. Elliott, D. Drummond, Myrtle; J. H. Smith, Longbank; Rev. Father McColl and D. Hughes-Charles. Addresses will be delivered in the evening of the same day by the same gentlemen in the Town Hall, North Monoghan. The meeting at Lakefield will be held on the afternoon of Tuesday, Dec. 2nd, and will be addressed by Messrs. Elliott, Drummond, Smith and Hughes-Charles. A meeting will also take place in the evening at Lakefield.

Two More Deer

Mr R. Parker returned yesterday morning from a two weeks' hunt in the neighborhood of Stoney Lake. As an evidence of his prowess with the rifle, he brought home two fine deer, both of which he claims to have shot within five hours. He wounded others previously but was unable to capture them.

A Valuable Property

Cobourg Post:—"Rev. Mr. Sager is in luck, he being a stockholder in a mining company about to operate in Marmora, County of Peterborough, where a valuable mineral has been discovered in abundance that is valued at $400 a ton. The mineral is used in the manufacture of steel and is indispensible. The company owning the property is the International Mining Company, of Buffalo, of which Mr. Sager is a large stockholder."

The Ross Memorial Hospital

The Times is in receipt of cards for the opening of the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, which will take place on Thursday, 20th instant. At 1.30 o'clock the committe and physicians of the county will meet Mr. and Mrs. James Ross and the visitors, accompanying them to the Hospital, where the control of the Hospital will be formerly handled over to the Board of Governors by Mr. Ross. At 2 o'clock the public proceedings will begin in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, when a meeting of citizens will be held, and to which all the citizens of the town and county are most heartily invited. Mr. J. D. Flavelle will take the chair and Rev. C. H. Marsh will pronounce the Invocation. An address from the County of Victoria will be presented to Mr. Ross by the Warden. Following the reply to the address a number of brief speeches will be delivered.

Paine's Celery Compound

CURES RHEUMATISM

The Only Medicine That Prevents a Return of the Terrible Disease

Rheumatism, which does its terrible work in the muscles, joints and tissues, is caused by uric acid which gathers in the blood. To get rid of this poisonous acid which produces the irritations, pains, agonies, inflammations and swellings peculiar to rheumatism, Paine's Celery Compound should be used without delay. No other medicine gives such prompt, cheering and happy results. It is the only medicine that prevents a return of the dreaded disease. Paine's Celery Compound braces the nerves, the blood is cleared of all irritating poisons, tissue and muscle are built up and the digestive organs perfectly toned. Do not treat with indifference the slightest symptoms; early use of Paine's Celery Compound will prevent weeks and months of suffering. Mr. G. J. McDonald, Cornwall, Ont., writes as follows:

For three years I suffered terribly from rheumatism It seemed to me that I was forced to endure all the agonies and pains that a mortal could possibly experience from disease. While suffering, I tried many advertised medicines also doctors' prescriptions, but never found a cure until I procured a supply of Paine's Celery Compound. It worked like a charm, and seemed to strike at the very root of my trouble. I am now cured; all pains are banished, and in every respect I am a new man."

NORMAN STEWART INJURED

Caught in a Revolving Belt and Badly Burned

Mr. Norman Stewart, who has been taking a course in practical engineering in the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company's machine shops, had a rather unpleasant experience Saturday afternoon. He was caught in one of the belts and before he was rescued received some very bad bruises about the body and arms. He has gone home to Buckingham, Quebec, to have his wounds attended to. It will be several weeks before he will be able to resume work.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature, either by phone or in writing—[Ed. Times]

—Mr. Fred. McGrath was in Ottawa on Saturday.

—Mr. R. Davidson, of Lakefield, was in town Saturday.

—Miss. M. Eastwood, of Buckhorn, was calling on friends in town yesterday.

—Mr. R. McWhinnie has returned home from Toronto after attending the funeral of his brother.

—Mr. John Montgomery has returned from his deer hunting expedition in the vicinity of Parry Sound.

—Miss Annie McLaughlin, who for the past month has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. A. Garlick, Water street, returned to her home at Sturgeon Bay yesterday.

—Mr. H. Le Brun is on a visit to Kingston, Montreal, Toronto and New York, looking through the wholesale houses of these cities for bargains.

—Toronto Globe—Judge McDougall is recovering satisfacotrily from his recent illness, but intends taking a holiday from Wednesday till Monday. He expects to visit his daughter at Peterborough.

—Mr. John Fletcher, who has been ranching in Alberta, N.W.T., for the past six months, returned to town last week. He is well pleased with Alberta, and after winding up some business affairs intends to return to the Northwest for the winter.

—The fire at Mr. Wm. Faint's Woollen Mills, Ashburnham, on Saturday evening was extinguished before any damage was done.

MADE A TURN OVER

Any One Can Do It

A principal in a public school in Ohio had a food experience that will be familiar to many school teachers.

"The hard work of the school room was so wearing that I was completely worn out and could barely walk home at night and at other times I was so nervous that it was with difficulty I ate or slept. I attributed my failing health to improper food, and felt that it would be necessary to quit my profession or get some food that would sustain my nerves.

Fortunately enough at this juncture I discovered Grape-Nuts and am very grateful that I did. After using the food for a month I felt decidedly better and like a new man resurrected from the grave. The sluggish feeling, headache and nervous spells have all left me and I feel young and active.

I can better concentrate my mind upon my work, because my nerves have been strengthened and my health and energy has returned and I take interest in my work which before seemed a burden.

I use Grape-Nuts every-day because it is the best food for my system, has restored my health and I am correspondingly grateful." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS

The Minister of Railways and Canals to Visit Peterboro' To-day

Hon. A. G. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals, will arrive in town this morning accompanied by the deputy Minister, Mr. Shriever. They are on a tour of inspection and will give special attention to the Trent Valley Canal and other public works in this section of country. There was some talk of a public reception and banquet to the distinguished visitors, but as the time of their stay in town is uncertain nothing in all probability, can be arranged along that line. However the Mayor and Council will no doubt meet the Minister and Deputy at the station, and extend to them an informal municipal greeting.

Lost His Toes

On Saturday a young lad named Howard Anderson was amusing himself hanging on freight cars on the G.T.R. near the Cordage Works, when he slipped. The result was that a wheel of one of the cars passed over one of his feet, making it necessary to have a portion of his foot amputated. Dr. Halliday dressed the injured member, and the young fellow is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

Free to Our Subscribers

Subscribers to the Daily and also to the Weekly Times who will pay up arrears and also pay a year in advance, will be presented with a magnificent picture of the Coronation of Their Majesties, King Edward VII, and Queen Alexandra—(size 22x32, printed in 14 colors). They are splendid prints, and will serve as momentos of that great historical event. The picture is now to be seen at The Times Bookstore. tf

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—The street crossings are in a disgraceful condition.

—The G.T.R. is using Nova Scotia coal on the Midland division.

—Xmas number of the Delineator, now on sale at Times Bookstore

—Merchants are preparing for the approaching Christmas trade.

—The county council will meet in special session to-morrow afternoon.

—The young lad charged with truancy will not come up for trial until Saturday next.

—While Postman Cameron's boots do not bear the union label, it is a well known fact that they carry many stamps —The Chief of Police did a very wise thing on Saturday when he ejected the boys from the police court. It is no place for boys.

—The Marks' Brothers company passed through Monday morning on their way to Port Hope. They report good business at Lindsay last week.

—In our issue of yesterday we stated that the Water Lily had discontinued her Saturday trips. It should have read the Rainbow.

—Dull weather and bad roads is affecting business very materially. Farmers were heard to remark on Saturday that only those who were obliged to, ventured out last week.

Mr. George Butcher, received a bad scorching at the power house yesterday. He grasped a lever to turn on the power and not only got a bad shock, but had his hands and face badly burned —Toronto News:—Hon. Jim Stratton says it is not true that the Government supplies the lunatics with ping-pong outfits. He says the patients bring them with them.

—Election of members to the county Council, in addition to Reeves and Councillors in villages and townships will make things lively at the beginning of the year.

—Hunters of rabbits are now having some sport in the swamps of this locality. They are said to be numerous this year, and quite a number have been shot within the past two weeks.

—A young man contributed $2 and costs, amounting to $6.50, at the police court. Yesterday morning for being drunk and pugnacious on Saturday evening.

—All the merchants are receiving new goods for the Christmas trade. They should use The Times' advertising columns to reach the public ear and make quick sales.

—The liquor men are not fidgety as to the result of the vote on the referendum. They are sure it will be defeated. But they must not forget that there is nothing so uncertain as a dead sure thing.

Turning Down the Doctors

The marvelous cures of Catarrhozone are being much talked about. Thousands are daily recognizing the exceptional merit of this simple inhaler treatment, and instead of running to the doctor with their winter ills they protect themselves by Catarrhozone; it kills colds in the head in ten minutes, quickly relieves Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Lung Troubles, and cures even though all other remedies have failed. Catarrhozone is very pleasant, safe and convenient to use, its best recommendation is its enormous sale; try it to-day. Price $1.00, small size 25c., at Druggists.

WEATHER NOTES

Tuesday —Fresh variable winds; unsettled and showery.

A moderate depression is situated to the southward of the lower lakes, and a marked depression covers the Northwest Territories. The weather is becoming showery in the lake region, and much milder in the Northwest. The outlook is generally unsettled and comparatively mild.

Toil and the Designer of Things

A gray mist scudded in front of the patch of blue sky that all afternoon had been peering between the tall buildings into the studio window, and carried away most of the light with it.

The Boy was glad of this, for his faith in himself was about gone. He gathered up his brushes, throwing a few curses at the weather as he did so in a bravado sort of fashion. He was determined not to be a fool this time and seek unsatisfactory sympathy from people who could not understand. Instead, he would go down to the "Vesuvio" and allow its liquid flame to consume his mood.

"Better be drunk than foolish," he said to the Girl as he started for the door. "I'm tired of this breathless pursuit of the Ideal. After all, if I did overtake her, I don't suppose she'd be worth while. This torture of self-denial, of looking forever over the roof in vain desire for the things that may never be, while the hot blood of youth in your veins commands you to drink deep of the things that are, is insanity. To the devil with work and the dreams of doing."

"It is discouraging, isn't it?" said the Girl. "I felt that way myself until you spoke. I looked at your work this afternoon and envied you."

"Envied me? Don't laugh at a fellow because you've happened to find the way to success. Suppose you do manage to paint good canvases and win plaudits. Ten million people have had the same little reward for the same mighty struggle. Already the wear and worry is showing on you. In ten years youth will be gone from you and all you'll have for it will be the memory of heart's blood painted into canvas for trivial 'mention,' and tragic realization of your limitations. The wise man is he who refuses to do what he is able to do; our ability always seems so much greater to us until we put it to the test. Never give yourself a chance. That's the only way to escape heart-break."

The Girl was fragile in the gray light. She stood at the window looking into the twilight that fell in hopelessness among the crowding walls of unsightly buildings. The Boy took a step toward the door. Then the Girl turned.

"I wish you would not talk like that," she said. "It hurts. Have I ever said I expected to do great things? You know I haven't. I was mean to-day and half envied you for your gift. But I don't want to envy anybody. I try not to think of future or fame, for it is thinking of self-glory that brings pain and disappointment. I try to do my work as best I can because it is my work and because I must do it. I know it is delightful to win success. We can't help feeling that our effort has won approval. But I don't work for success. I put my heart into my pictures because I have to, and if by so doing I can soften, if only for an instant, some other heart; bring a look of wistfulness into a careless eye; waken a longing in a dreamless soul, I have the greatest of rewards. Work for work's sake demands no sacrifice. On the contrary, it leads our feet into the ways where perfect happiness may be gathered.

"I know how weak I am and how discouraged I grow even yet. But discouragement never lingers long. All I need do is remind myself that I am not an isolated toiler wearing out my own destiny in unsympathetic solitude, but one of many who are working to carry to completion the wonderful plan of the great Designer of things beautiful.

"There are no failures. Your discouragement helps me to catch the shadows my portion of the picture needs to-day; my rebellion shows you the glorious light of patience and sympathy your brush must depict."

"It's easy to talk hopefully when you're already in the sunlight of success," replied the Boy as he grasped the door-knob. "I'm tired of the shadows and am determined to get out of them. I'll enjoy myself in idleness for a while. I'll be on hand to help hang the Picture Beautiful when it is finished. I'm done with brushes."

The Girl laid her hand lightly on the Boy's shoulder. "What great work you are going to do," she said. "Some of the wonderful touches in the picture have been reserved for you. You are not 'tired of the pursuit of the Ideal.' You are only impatient that your hand has not yet the wonderful skill your soul demands of it. Be patient; there's not only Time but Eternity for our work."

They stepped into the corridor and paused in silence. From a room opposite some divine melody drifted to them. The Boy was glad of the darkness, for his eyes were wet. He grasped the Girl's hand.

"I thank you," he said. "I guess I was only impatient."—Leavenworth MacNab.

Their Steering-Gear.

A professor of a profound subject at Harvard University has a small son who is very observant and inquisitive, and a hired man who has all the Irish wit and good humor.

The other day Albert, the small boy, was playing with a cat in the stable while Larry cleaned the harness.

"Say, Larry," he asked, "why do cats always stand on their feet?"

"They shteer themselves wid their tail."

"Well, how do rabbits steer themselves? They haven't long tails; only a stub."

"Wid their ears. That's phwat they have their long ears for."

"Well, how does a bulldog steer himself? He doesn't have long ears or a long tail."

"Wid his bark."

The boy looked doubtful and was silent. Presently he ran in to his father's study, and in a few minutes came back to the stable.

"Larry!"

"Yis?"

"That's true what you told me about bulldogs. I asked papa, and he read something to mamma out of a book about 'barks that steer against the wind.'"

Fate.

Once there were two beautiful white eggs laid side by side in a nice new nest. A great big man gathered them up with his rough hands and sold them to a grocer. And one little egg was a good little egg, and went into an angel cake, but the other little egg was a very, very bad little egg, and got mashed on an actress.

When a woman is nervous her imagination gives fantastic and threatening shapes to the most familiar objects. By day she starts in fear at every sudden or unfamiliar sound. By night the furniture of her room takes on affrighting forms of ghost or goblin. You can't reason with the nerves. Neither logic nor love can quiet them. They must be nourished and then the outcry of the nerves will cease as naturally as a hungry child ceases to cry when fed.

For nervous women there is no better tonic and nervine than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures the diseases which produce nervousness in women, irregularity, debilitating drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite, and induces refreshing sleep.

"When I began taking your medicine I was not able to stand on my feet ten minutes at a time," writes Mrs. Hattie Borradaile, of 113 Spring Street, Nashville, Tenn. "Had falling of uterus, and kidney and liver disease, and was so weak and nervous I could not keep still. Would take nervous spells and almost die at times. I had several different doctors attending, but they could not do me any good. The last one I had said I would never get up again. Told him that I was taking your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and he said, 'Might just as well take that much water each day.' But I thought I would give the medicine a fair trial. Before I had finished the first two bottles I was able to get outside the house and walk around the yard. I kept on taking the medicines and they cured me."

OPERATORS AND MITCHELL FAR FROM AGREEING

The Feeling of Hatred Beetween the Strike Leaders and Operators Increasing

The Commission Not Relieving the Situation in This Respect—What Will The End Be?

New York, Nov. 18.—The Times' special says that the operators and President Mitchell are no nearer an agreement as to facts than they are as to principles. From the very outset they have disagreed upon every proposition. If Mitchell said the miners were underpaid the operators said no. If Mitchell said unionism is best for men and operators, the operators said it was the worst thing that could happen. And so on through the whole list.

The Reading's reply to Mitchell's statement has been forwarded to the arbitration commission by President Baer. It meets Mitchell's assertions with denials. The other roads have likewise put in their answers, all of the same tenor.

The demand for twenty per cent, increase in wages on piece work, is denounced as "arbitrary, unreasonale and unjust."

The company denies that the present rate of wages is lower than is paid in other occupations in the same locality and controlled by like conditions.

Mr. Baer denies that the earnings of the anthracite workers are less than average earnings for other occupations requiring skill and training and also the charge that the earnings are insufficient because of the dangerous character of work in the anthracite mines.

The company pronounces as unjust and inequitable the demand for a reduction of twenty per cent. in hours of labor without a reduction of earnings for time employees, and this demand is pronounced impracticable. Mr. Baer complains that since the entrance of the United Mine Workers organization into the anthracite fields, business conditions there have been intolerable; that the output of the mines has decreased; that discipline has been destroyed; that strikes have been of almost daily occurrence; that men have worked when and as they pleased, and the cost of mining has been greatly increased.

The issue is sharply drawn, but the arbitrators by a full hearing and ample testimony can reach a conclusion as to facts. It is significant, however, that the coal companies are united in their refusal to concede the recognition of the union.

LYNCH LAW HORRORS CONTINUE TO INCREASE

Governor Sayers of Texas Seeks a New and Original Remedy

New Orleans, Nov. 18.—Gov. Sayers of Texas has determined to try to break up lynch law in his State. He proposes to strike, not at the lynchers, but at the officers, especially the Judges and Sheriffs within whose jurisdiction lynchings occur.

He will according make in his next message to the Legislature strong recommendations for the passage of a law holding accountable any Judge or District Attorney who through neglect, incompetence or sympathy with the mob allows a prisoner to be taken from the officers of the law and lynched.

As a rule recent lynchings have occurred because Judges and Sheriffs hesitate to call for assistance until too late for fear of offending the mob. All the lynchings have been due to this delay and the Government proposes to put an end to it by making the Sheriff responsible.

He does not intend that Sheriffs shall do as was done recently in Waller county, where dependence was placed on the vague and indefinite promise of the citizens to "support the law," a promise which was not kept. At the last minute and when it was impossible to accomplish any good—for the prisoners were then in the hands of the mob—a rush telegraphic order was sent to Austin for the militia.

Gov. Sayers' sentiments on this subject were aroused by the recent Hempstead and Nacogdoches affairs. While the prisoners were legally hanged at Nacogdoches the manner in which the execution occurred only brought discredit to the law.

At Hempstead the lynching was of the most aggravated kind. The prisoners were on trial when the mob, not liking the manner in which the trial was proceeding invaded the court room, carried the prisoners off, and lynched one of them near the court house.

The last two lynchings and the fact that there has been an increase in the number of lynchings since he became Governor have determined Gov. Sayers to take steps to stop mob violence. The Governor has done all in his power, under the law, to protect prisoners. He has called out the militia and State Rangers whenever he was advised that it was necessary to do so. In one case his orders were disobeyed and the prisoner was practically handed over to the mob by the officers.

An investigation made by the Attorney-General's office shows that there is no excuse for these lynchings on the ground that murderers or other criminals escape through the law. During the year, twenty-three prisoners have been tried for capital offences and condemned to death; and in only two cases have there been commutations. In the last twenty months there have been eighty-five prisoners condemned to death or life imprisonment in Texas.

Gov. Sayers will therefore join Gov. Longino of Mississippi and other Southern Governors in endeavoring to suppress lynchings. It is a far more difficult task than it may seem, and the anti-lyching Governors have accomplished far less than was expected, although they have worked earnestly in this cause.

No one could have been more earnest in his efforts to break up lynching in Mississippi than Gov. Longino. He has discussed it in every message to the Legislature. He himself has gone to the county seat when a lynching was expected. He has ordered out troops whenever necessary and has upheld and supported the Judges in their opposition to mobs.

He did all in his power to secure action by the Grand Juries against lynchers andhas worked in every possible way to stop the disgrace. Yet he has at best saved four of five lives, while that horrible addition to lynching—burning at the stake—previously unknown in Mississippi, has finally invaded the State and was the feature of the recent Corinth lynching.

Those who oppose lynching call attention to the fact that it is progressive, going through an evolution of horrors. When the mob first began this work in Mississippi the lynching was done by a small body of men, well organized, masked and on horseback, who rode to the jail in the middle of the night and compelled the Sheriff to surrender the prisoner. He was taken to the nearest tree and hanged.

The next change, a needlessly brutal one, was after hanging the negro to have every member of the mob fire a rifle or pistol at the body. This practice has been kept up since, with the result that the bodies of lynched negroes to-day—at least these who have not been burned— are scarcely distinguishable as those of human beings.

Later all masks and disguises were discarded and the mob performed its work in the open light of day in the very streets of the town, and generally in front of the court house, with no attempt at concealment or secrecy.

Finally has come the burning at the stake, when the lynching is made a spectacle in which a large part of the population joins. Invitations are sent out and even excursions are given for those who wish to witness these executions.

At Corinth the only question was whether the victim should be burned or hanged. The more conservative citizens pleaded for "a plain hanging" and were regarded as milksops for so doing.

No one seemed to plead law and order for the trial and legal execution of the criminal. The mob even took possession of the telegraph station, refused to allow the Sheriff to telegraph to the Governor for troops, and refused to allow any word of the lynching to go out until the work was completed. It armed itself to resist any troops that might be sent to the scene to maintain the law.

It has been found that when burning at the stake is once introduced as an incident to lynching, it is generally kept up. The evil influence of the Corinth burning was well shown in the very next lynching in Mississippi, at Darling, on All Saints Day, Nov. 1, when the negro victim was burned at the stake.

It will be seen, therefore, that lynchings are going through an evolution which makes them worse. The increased boldness of the lynchers was well shown in the Hempstead affair, where, for the first time, a prisoner under trial was taken from the court house and lynched.

Gov. Sayers is probably well aware of the fact that he is tackling a difficult problem which may prove too much for the other Southern Governors.

PETERBORO' TO PLAY LONDON SATURDAY

Torontos Default to London, Argos Not in the Running

Toronto News:—The final game of the Ontario Rugby Union will be played next Saturday in Peterboro. The London Club has been ordered to go by the Union Executive Committee, which met last night at the Rossin House, with President A. W. Ballantyne in the chair. The other members present were Geo. S. Gibbons, S. Thompson, A. W. McPherson, George Ballard, and Secretary Frank D. Woodworth.

The intermediate tangle took a long while to settle and then the settlement was not satisfactory to all the clubs. It was decided to open up the London-Toronto protest again, and start from the professionalizing of Bert. Morrison, of the Torontos. It was agreed that the Argonauts were not entitled to another chance, and after considerable argument, Torontos were ordered to play at London next Saturday, the London team giving Toronto a $50 guarantee. The final game then between the winners of the Toronto-London game will be played at Peterboro' on November 29th, Peterboro giving a guarantee of $50.

Manager Frank Coffee of the Toronto intermediate team on receiving word of the decision stated to President Ballantyne that his team would default to London next Saturday. He announced that this was official notice. He claimed his players could not get away. Then it was decided to notify the London Club that unless they heard to the contrary by this evening they were to play the final in Peterboro, on Saturday, Nov. 22nd.

The Wellesleys of Toronto, were ordered to play a sudden death game at Kingston with the Limestones, in the semi-finals of the junior series, on November 22, the Kingston club to guarantee $50 towards the Toronto team's expenses.

Hamilton III. team was ordered to play a semi-final game at Galt next Saturday in the junior series.

The finals will be arranged by the Executive.

HOCKEY.

The Total Abstinence Society of St. Peter's Church have organized a hockey club with the following officers: Hon. President, Rev. Dr. O'Brien; President, Wm. Crowley; 1st Vice Ed Hickey; 2nd Vice, D. J. Devine; Secretary, T. J. Begley; Treasurer, L. Potvin; Manager, L. J. Picard; Executive Committee, Messrs. W. Crowley, L. J. Picard, R. J. Begley, D. J. Devine, and the captain—when elected. A club will be placed in the Trent Valley League and the meeting adjourned to meet again this Wednesday evening to name the patrons and patronesses of the club and make all other necessary arrangements for the success of the organization.

A meeting of the Hockey Club is called for to-night. A large attendance of those interested in the game is requested.

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner yesterday received the following letter from Mr. Culverwell:—

"Sorry can't attend annual meeting; busy here booming Peterborough. Will be there this winter to cheer the boys to victory. It's up to the fellows with the grand new rink to keep playing championship form. Nothing else permitted. Lift her up."—J. Alex. Culverwell.

Charlie Colman, who for years played hockey and lacrosse in Port Hope, and who last summer figured on the Winnipeg Lacrosse Team, will be given a chance to catch a place on the forward line of the Vics. Gingras, Cadham and Scanlan will be the other three forwards and there are several candidates for the fourth position, among which is Colman.

One Common Cause of Headache

Perhaps the most general cause of headache and pain across the eyes is nasal catarrh. The simplest cure is to inhale the medicated air of Catarrhozone which traverses every air cell and air passage of the throat, lungs and nose. It kills myriads of germs at every breath, clears away mucous discharges, preserves and heals the membrane. Catarrhozone is just a splendid remedy for headache, and its action is certain and unfailing in diseases of the Throat and Lungs. Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Catarrh. A trial will convince the most sceptical that Catarrhozone is all right. Large size, $1.00; trial size 25c. Druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

HON. A. G. BLAIR ON TOUR OF INSPECTION

OF THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL—VISITS CEREAL WORKS

Received by Mayor Denne and Members of the Town Council—Tarte's Retirement from the Public Works Department will Not Interfere with the Continuation of the Dredging of the River

Yesterday morning's Times contained the announcement that the Hon. A. G. Blair, Ministers of Railways and Canals would make an official visit to the town and inspect the Government works here. No attempt was made to get up a public demonstration, as the notice of the intended visit was too short, and the Honorable Minister is out on business and prefers to observe things as they really are instead of having any great display over his comings or goings.

Hon. Mr. Blair was accompanied by the Deputy Minister, Mr. Collingwood Schreiber, and his private secretary, Mr. Payne. They arrived about 9 a.m. in their own special car "Ottawa," and were met by His Worship, Mayor Denne, and escorted to the Cereal Company Buildings. Messrs. Stewart and Kearns of the Company received the Minister, and his associates very cordially and they were shown through the mammoth buildings and every information afforded them regarding the magnitude of the Company's works.

The dredging in the Otonabee River and the new dam came in for inspection, and the party was taken in charge by Mr. R. B. Rogers, Superintending Engineer of the Trent Valley Canal, as Mayor Denne had to take his leave to attend to other official business.

The party, which comprised the following, then visited the lift lock:—

Hon. A. G. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals, Mr. Collingwood Schrieber, Deputy Minister; Mr. Payne, Private Secretary to the Minister; Hon. J. R. Stratton, Mr. R. B. Rogers, Superintending Engineer, T.V.C.; J. A. Corry, E. G. Laverdure, A. A. Taillon, Manager La Banque Nationale, Ottawa; A. O. Matton, of the Lake Lachine Milling Company. Ald. J. J. Turner, T. M. Hamel, Engineer for Messrs. Corry and Laverdure and Mr. George E. Elliott.

After the Minister had spent some time in viewing the work at the lock, he proceeded to Lakefield along the route of the canal, accompanied by Mr. Schrieber, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Payne.

They returned from Lakefield on the 4.30 and proceeded to the upper section of the canal.

Talking to Mr. Blair Mayor Denne informed him that the people of this section were a little doubtful regarding the continuance of the dredging of the river, owing to the retirement of Mr. Tarte as Minister of Public Works. Hon. Mr. Blair only laughed at the idea, and assured the Mayor the work commenced would be completed without any unnecessary delay.

UNREST IN AFGHANISTAN

Brothers of the Ameer are Plotting Against Him

London, Nov. 18—A despatch to the Daily Express from Calcutta says that there is considerable unrest in Afghanistan, which is increasing. The brothers of the Ameer are intriguing at Delhi. The military manouvres are likely to be postponed for these reasons, and an army corps will be held in readiness to move to the frontier in case of necessity.

The arrival of Gen. Lord. Kitchener, who will assume supreme command of the troops in India, is awaited with some impatience.

SAME LIST AS LAST YEAR

Who May Vote on Referendum on December Fourth

As there is doubt in some quarters as to who will be entitled to vote on the referendum on the liquor bill in December 4, it may be stated that the same voters' lists will be used that were used in the Provincial general election in May last. The clause in the act covering this point is as follows:—

"The persons entitled to vote upon the said question shall be all persons whose names shall appear on the voters lists used or which would have been used had a poll been held at the next general election of members to serve in the Legislative Assembly, held after the passing of this act, as entitled to vote and who were entitled to vote at the said election, and who shall have been from the date of the said general election and until the day of voting on the said question residents of and domiciled in the Province of Ontario, and whose names are duly entered in the poll books to be used for the purpose of the voting under this act."

The question which will appear on the ballot paper will be simply this:—

"Are you in favor of bringing into force the liquor act, 1902."

ITEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE AND LETTER

London, Nov. 18—The Dutch reformed Church, says a Cape Town correspondent is going to hold a court of inquiry into the conduct of Rev. Mr. Viok of Piquetberg during the war. Mr. Viok's offence was staunch loyalty to Great Britain.

London, Nov. 18—In an editorial article today on the Wall Street situation The Times says that some of the most devoted believers in the invincibility of American industrial and commercial genius have begun to feel misgivings and are admitting the need for liquidation of weak accounts for a rise, while professing satisfaction that the process is going on in order that the market may become so healthy. The Times says that the dream so long indulged in of a further great rise in prices has been displaced in many minds by the more modest vision of steady markets, in which to secure part of the profits still shown in many cases. Cautious people are not inclined to resume active operations thinking that the United States has locked up too great proportion of capital in temporary unrealizable securities, creating a position which time alone, accompanied by a further reduction in market values, can bring about a really healthy state of things.

London, Nov. 18—The frequent acts of piracy between Hong Kong and Canton are causing much uneasiness, says a Hong Kong correspondent. Last Wednesday the constable of the British consulate was wounded while travelling in a junk to Hong Kong, and has since died from his injuries. It is desirable the correspondent declares, for the British, by establishing a rigorous patrol of the Delta to restore security and prevent the French from assuming control of that region.

London, Nov. 18—Judging from appearances, says a Rome correspondent, the Italian Cabinet has a long lease of life. There are some dissensions, but they exist only for a moment, and are not likely to come to a head. The correspondent says the Cabinet resembles a tripod, of which Premier Zanardelli, Foreign Minister Prinetti and Minister Giolitti are mutually dependent supports. Those comparing Italy's situation today with her position ten, or even five years ago, cannot but rejoice, says the correspondent, at the remarkable improvement not attributable to any one man or Ministry, but to the sobriety and industry of the nation itself. Ministers must work less to innovote than to consolidate and strengthen. The correspondent adds that King Victor Emmanuel's example is in every respect salutory. The King has not attempted to stagger humanity; but has been content to live life more simple and laborious than many of his subjects.

London, Nov. 18—Referring to the fact that M. Clemenceau, French Senator, and Yves Guyot, have contributed articles to the Vienna press on the struggle in Austria-Hungary, a correspondent says that the clericals of Austria have got such a hold of local government machinery that they are able to push their views almost as effectively as if they held direct political power, and by agitation in some parts of the country they have nearly converted undenominational State schools into sectarian Catholic establishments. Only those teachers taking their cue from the priesthood the correspondent adds, can hope for promotion; those acting in accordance with the real spirit of the law are subject to petty persecution. At one time the clericals tried, though unsuccessfully to separate Christian and Jewish children in Vienna undenominational schools, and their efforts have been successful in the other direction.

Washington, Nov. 18—Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, who has been in feeble condition since her arrival here from Canada some weeks ago, has failed to gain strength. Last night she suffered a sinking spell, which caused the family the deepest concern. She rallied, however, after persistent treatment, and rested comfortably today.

Mrs Grant's increasing weakness, her physicians say, is accounted for by her age and the most natural attendant causes. She has lost her sight to such an extent that she is no longer able to read, but uses her pen occasionally. She is surrounded by several members of her family, among them her daughter, Mrs. Sartoris, and her granddaughter, Mrs. Frederick Roosevelt Scoval, a bride of a few weeks. No fears are felt of an immediate change in Mrs. Grant's condition, but great care is given to nourishing and caring for her.

Mahanoy City, Pa., Nov. 18—While President Mitchell is engaged in trying to make the strike commission believe that the United Mine Workers are law-abiding citizens the persecution of non-union men goes on in this district. Last evening when John Nolter, a non-union man, who is employed as a foreman at the Reading company's North Mahanoy colliery, came to this city to get shaved he was met by a crowd of union men.

When he went into a barber shop they followed him and informed the proprietor that if he shaved the "scab" he would be boycotted. Nolter went to five shops and in each case the barbers, fearing the threat of the union men, refused to shave him.

At the Gilberton colliery today a blacksmith refused to sharpen tools belonging to non-union men. He was discharged. The union has taken up his case and will demand that he be reinstated.

London, Nov. 18—The Mail's correspondent with the British Somaliland expedition reports on the authority of a captured spy that the Mad Mullah's losses in the recent battle were 150 riflemen killed and 300 wounded. His losses in spearmen were so numerous that it was impossible to count them.

PIGS WILL PURCHASE VOTES

Alleged Bribery by Liberals with Swine Flesh in Lennox

The affidavits in the matter of the application for the summonsing of four Liberal voters in Lennox for corrupt practices were filed today at Osgoode Hall. The application was refused by Justices Maclennan and Moss, and Mr. Bristol proposes to renew it at the trial, which opens at Napanee, on Tuesday, November 25.

There are four affidavits in the case three of them by Henry Milling and the other by C. M. Ruttan, and the Liberal voters charged are Homer Miles, Elias P. Smith, J. S. Hulett, and Byron Derbyshire.

Henry Milling makes affidavit that Homer Miles paid money for corrupt purposes, as follows—$5 to Samuel Maley $4 to Wm. Schermerhorn, $15 to Thomas Russel. That Elias P. Smith offered Samuel Maley $2, that he offered W. F. Scrimshaw $5, and after election paid $3 on account and that Elias P. Smith received from W. S. Herrington $10 and in consequence of this gift promised and endeavored to procure the election of M. S. Madole, and for that purpose procured Scrimshaw, Maley and others, to vote for him; that J. S. Hulett, a Napanee photographer, gave a pig to Thos. Smith, that he promised Samuel Davy, sr., and Benjamin Davy $21, which was ostensibly the price of three pigs, but that the purchase of the pigs was a corrupt agreement and included the condition that Sam Davy, jr., and Benjamin Davy should vote for M. S. Madole; that Hulett also gave Benjamin Davy and to Wm. Davy two pigs each, that he gave a pig each to Samuel Smith and to Wm. Perkerson for the same purpose.

Cullen M. Ruttan, of Napanee, in his affidavit says that Byron Derbyshire, of Ernestown gave $3 to Samson McConnell, $2.50 to Bill Emmons; that he offered $5 to Henry Evans and $5 to Samuel Babcock, and that he promised Calvin Emmons the cancellation of an account, that he paid $5 to Robert Cairns, and that he hired a vehicle from W. A. Baker to convey voters to he polls, all for the purpose of securing the election of M. S. Madole.

AMERICAN INVASION OF OUR GREAT WEST

Over Seventy Thousand Persons Have Come Into Canada This Year

From the United States—A Great Future for the Western Country—Farmers in South Dakota Selling Their Farms

Montreal, Que, Nov. 18.—The influx of settlers from the United Stated into the west of Canada has been the Official statistics show that the Official statistics show that the number up to the end of June was 22,000, but the movement has assumed larger proportions since, and the number who have come in is variously estimated at from 50,000 to 70,000. Official figures are not available, but it is certain that this is only the beginning of the American invasion.

In many cases those coming in now are delegations, representing a whole community, who have come to spy out the land and make selections for their neighbors. It is probable that several hundred thousand Americans will come in next spring. They are well provided with money and bring in train loads of stock and effects with them.

The invasion is for the most part welcomed by Canadians, who have no fear, but that the newcomers will become good British subjects. Many are expatriated Canadians, who many years ago went to the American prairies from Canada seeking for larger opportunities.

The American born settlers quickly realise that the Canadian Government is as free as their own and become nationalized. They admire the administration of justice here. Canadians regard these settlers as an element capable of assimilation and a setoff to the Doukhobors, etc., the government has 60 agents in the United States constantly beating up fresh invaders.

Sir William Van Horne, chairman of the Canadian Pacific Railway, says he regards the movement as permanent and not stimulated by speculation. These people, he says, are coming to remain as farmers, and not to speculate. People returning from the West say that every train is crowded with Americans, who have come to spy out the land or are moving in with their families.

Canadians regret that the English people are so slow, but look on the Americans as the next best thing.

There are several reasons why the American invasion of Canada is welcomed there. In England the absence of a tariff allows the flooding of the markets with cheap American goods. In Canada the tariff is sufficiently high to prevent the newly fledged Canadian manufacturer from being swamped by his formidable rivals in the United States yet is not so high as to prevent all competition, and this has a stimulating effect upon Canadian industries.

The tariff, in fact, is very largely responsible for the American invasion because in the main the American manufacturer who sees an opening in Canada prefers to move his factory bodily across the border and set up his business there.

Of the thousands of men who crossed the Dominion border last year the majority were Canadians by birth. It is estimated that 2,000,000 Canadians are still in the United States. Chicago alone is said to hold 30,000.

But since their own country has begun to boom and since more and more land has been opened up and fresh enterprises are starting almost every day, the sons of Canada are returning.

This is especially the case with those who are agriculturalists.

Now that the railway lines of Canada are extending in all directions and the good lands of the great Northwest are becoming accessible, both the American farmer and the Canadian farmer in the United States are selling out their farms in Iowa and North and South Dakota and are taking up better and cheaper land in the great Northwest.

The Russian method of colonizing Siberia is not likely to be followed in Canada, though it has proved highly successful.

Emigration is direct and controlled by the government, which first sends pioneers to Siberia to select suitable lands for their relatives and friends, whom they afterward conduct into the country. The passage money is about one shilling per 100 miles, and food, seed and implements are sold by the government to the peasants at cost price, payments being spread over a period.

GREAT BEDS OF COAL IN NORTHERN CANADA

Immense Beds of Bituminous Coal Many Explorers Have Sampled

It Can be Mined and Exported at Reasonable Rates—We are Independent of the United States

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—"There is a belt of bituminous coal in the Canadian Arctic. The surface indications crop up from 63 to 165 degrees west longitude, and from 62 to 81 north, running in a northeasterly direction, similar to the coal area in Cape Breton. The drift is about 2,000 miles long, commencing from Kotzebue Sound on the mainland of Alaska and appearing next at Corwin coal mine and Thetis coal mine, from where the gold mines at Cape Nome, Alaska, receive their coal supplies."

So says Capt. Bernier, the next and best fitted aspirant for the North Pole. Take a map of North America and look at the archipelago north and west of Hudson's Bay. Here is the old Franklin stamping ground, and in the mazes of these islands he lost the Northwest passage. The coal dip runs from the mainland northeast through these islands.

HE BURNED THE COAL.

At Mercy Bay, 500 miles north of Great Slave Lake, in the Northwest Territories, McClure, the Arctic explorer, wintered in 1852, '53, and '54, and burnt Canadian coal at his winter quarters.

Other explorers have reported it at five other places on this same northwest trend through the islands. Melville Island, Bryan, Martin Island, and Bathurst Island are all known to contain coal. On Grinnell Land carbon only has been reported, but on North Cornwall, 75 miles due north, coal crops out again, though here evidently of a different lay. Following the direction of this drift, however, we find that Sir Geo. Nori's ship, the Discovery, found coal on Lady Franklin Bay, Grout Land, in 1875-6, which was afterwards noted in the same neighborhood by Major Greely, 1881-83. From Garnt Land it crosses to Greenland, where Peary's new report, soon to be issued, possibly traces its continuation.

American whalers every year, fitting out at San Francisco, on the Pacific and New Bedford on the Atlantic, fish in the Canadian Artic, north and east of the mouth of the Mackenzie. Their crews burn coal from the same vein. New Bedford and Gloucester fishermen catch Canadian halibut in the Hudson's Bay and burn Canadian coal. New Bedford whalers winter in Fox Channel, loading up with Canadian whale blubber, and — burning Canadian coal.

PLENTY FOR CANADA.

We dwell here at the head of the lakes in the basin of the St. Lawrence, and all around us lies wealth we know nothing about. We grow weak and dependent upon another country for coal, a necessity of life, for half the year, while our own territors, east, west and north, holds coal in abundance. Already foreigners are claiming the Arctic Islands. Those to the north of Canada, though abutting directly on our main coast, are not, Captain Bernier says, on the official Dominion maps even. The first one with a flag that goes up there might claim the whole archipelago, as Sverdrup did with 1,500 miles of new coast, this year. It is time, it would seem, to look further north of us than the pulpwood of the Height of Land.

Coal can be mined in the Arctic as well as gold. It is as warm underground in Cape Nome as it is in Pennsylvania. Vessels navigate the northern sounds and fiords in search of whale and seal, and in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company. Coal could be transported in ships to Fort Churchill, in Hudson's Ba., at the mouth of the Nelson. A railway is already, though vaguely, projected to extend to Moose Factory, James' Bay, from North Bay on Lake Nipissing.

THE GOODLY APPLE IN DANGER

If prohibition should carry in Ontario apple culture may suffer a severe blow, as one of the most profitable uses of this fruit of being "turned into cider," and thence vinegar, may be attended with restrictions and obstacles that will make the process undesirable.

Of course cider has been all along included in the list of prohibited beverages. No one may keep a keg of it in his cellar if the prohibitory law goes into force. And if the effect of apple-eating upon the cattle of Westchester county, New York, recently, shall extend into this Province, the occupation of the orchardist would be gone should prohibition be the order of the day. The cows there, owing to the abundance of the crop and the numerous windfalls, have eaten apples until they have become inebriated and hilarious. The farmers are said to have had a lot of trouble due to the disorderly conduct of these usually meek and sober animals. The cows break from their pastures and devour the apples with such voracity that numerous cases of intoxication have resulted.

If this conduct continues on our borders, it will be impossible to withstand the clamor that will inevitably spring up that this fruit should be put under the ban.

THE LIQUOR ACT

Every elector should clearly understand the provisions of the Manitoba act if he desires to vote intelligently in the coming referendum. The prohibition of the manufacture and export of liquor is ultra vires of the Provincial Legislature, but the present act prohibits transactions in liquor within the province, except under druggists' licenses, wholesale and retail.

The expression druggists' wholesale license means a license authorizing a chemist or druggist, duly registered as such, to sell, in the warehouse or store defined in such license, alcohol, not exceeding in quantity ten gallons at any one time to any person for mechanical or scientific purposes, and to sell to any duly registered medical practitioner, and to any druggist holding a druggist's retail license, but to no other, liquor not exceeding in quantity five gallons at any one time.

The expression "druggist's retail license" means a license authorizing a chemist or druggist, duly registered and licensed to carry on business as such, to sell liquor for medicinal and sacramental purposes only in the store defined in such license. Liquor for medicinal purposes can only be sold under a bona fide prescription from a duly qualified medical practitioner signed by such practitioner, on which prescription not more than one sale of liquor shall be made. Sales may be made to dentists, for professional use, in no greater quantity than a pint at a time; to veterinary surgeons for professional use in no greater quantity than two gallons at one time, and to clergymen for sacramental purposes, in similar quantity. Public hospitals are permitted to have liquors for the use of patients only, who must have the liquors prescribed by a physician. Records of all sales must be kept, and no liquor may be consumed or drunk upon licensed premises.

No person within the province, by himself, his clerk, servant or agent, shall have or keep or give liquor in any place whatsoever, other than in the private dwelling-house in which he resides, without first having obtained a druggist's wholesale license, or a druggist's retail license. The expression "private dwelling house" does not include or mean any house or building occupied or used as an office (except physician's, dentist's, or veterinary surgeon's offices) or as a shop, or as a place of business, or as a factory, or as a workshop, or as a warehouse, or as a club house, or club room, public hall, or hall of any society or order, or as a boarding house, or as a lodging house, or as a livery stable, or as an inn, tavern, hotel or other house or place of public entertainment, or any house or building the rooms or compartments in which are leased to different persons.

Liquor kept on club premises is also a violation of the act, the consumption of liquor being sufficient evidence of sale. Clauses referring to the export of liquor are:

Nothing herein contained shall prevent any person from having liquor for export sale in his liquor warehouse providing such liquor warehouse and the business therein complies with the requirements in subsection 3 hereof mentioned, or from selling from such liquor warehouse to persons in other provinces, or in foreign countries, or to wholesale license under this act.

While this act is intended to prohibit and shall prohibit transactions in liquor which take place wholly within the province of Ontario, except under a license or as otherwise specially provided by this act, and to restrict the consumption of liquor within the limits of the province of Ontario, it shall not affect, bona fide transactions between a person in the province of Ontario and a person in another province, or in a foreign country, and the provisions of this act shall be construed accordingly.

ONTARIO LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE

The Work Which is Being Done in Ontario by the Alliance

The Times has been requested to publish the following:

At the annual meeting of the Ontario Branch of the Lord's Day Alliance, held in Toronto, Principal Caven emphasized the critical nature of the present situation in regard to the observance of the Lord's Day, and the tremendous pressure which is being brought to bear by certain interests to break down its safeguards. He deplored the tendency even of Church members to take ground in support of the material interests which came into conflict with the spiritual interests of the community. The report given by the Field Secretary, Rev. J. G. Shearer, was full of encouragement. The principal address of the evening was by Dr. J. Edgar Hill, of Montreal, President of the Quebec Lord's Day Alliance. Dr. Hill made a strong plea, based on historical experience, for the maintenance of the Sabbath. He recounted the struggle for better things in Montreal and spoke in high terms of the co-operation in the movement by Archbishop Bruchesi.

At the business session on Friday reports were received and officers elected. Principal Caven continues to be President.

The annual report of the executive committee shows that there are now 220 branches in the Province as compared with 170 a year ago. There has been similar growth in other provinces. It is interesting and encouraging to observe how the ranks of those who are prepared to battle for the Sabbath are filling and closing together. Strong resolutions have been passed by ecclesiastical courts of all denominations, the General Synod, the General Conference and the General Assembly and by the Conventions of the Baptists and Congregationalists. Roman Catholic prelates like Archbishop O'Brien of Halifax, and Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal publicly express their sympathy with the aims of the Alliance. The organized labor men are growingly in earnest in standing firm in defence of the rest and quiet of the Lord's Day and they co-operate with the Alliance in every possible way.

It is satisfactory, too, to notice that the Attorney-General has taken action during the year in several instances of violation of the Lord's Day Act and has now assumed the responsibility for the enforcement of the law in cases where the law is clear and where violation can be readily proven.

The policy of the Alliance in dealing with Sabbath desecration is first to make use of kindly suasion and remonstrance and they report with gratitude that they are accorded no less than 200 instances of Sunday labor and public pleasuring that have been successfully dealt with by these measures during the year.

All good citizens and lovers of their country should rejoice in these evidences of success and progress, for the work which the Alliance is doing now is one which will tell in the higher life of the country for generations to come.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers
Fortune's Spor Miss Nobody,
Her Royal Highness Lady
Mary of the Dark

on the description to one of the men at the doors. This person thought he recognized it. The lady whom monsieur desired to meet was probably the Comtesse de Silbery, who was well known at Monte Carlo, coming at least once every twelvemonth for the past ten years, and staying a month or six weeks. She had been at the Casino all the afternoon, and usually came again in the evening after dinner, staying late; but to-night was an exception. The Comtesse had not appeared. At what hotel she was staying he could not say. But he was obliged for the coin unobtrusively slipped into his hand; and he thought that monsieur would not find it difficult to ascertain the Comtesse's address.

Newcome bought a paper with the list of visitors at the various large hotels. The Comtesse's name was not there. But at the Cafe de Paris he learnt something from a waiter. The Comtesse de Silbery often lunched there. She was a well-known character at Monte Carlo. She was said to be very rich, but she did not patronize the large hotels. She stopped at a pension, and lunched out or dined out when she wished.

Then Newcome turned his attention to the comparatively few pensions of Monte Carlo. He got a list of the principal ones, and late as it was, called at several. At the last the Comtesse had been staying for some time; but had left that very evening. She had received news which called her away at once, and, packing in a hurry, she and her maid had left almost within the hour. The proprietor of the pension knew, or pretended to know, nothing of her movements, save that the train by which she had departed went no further than Cannes. Whether she would go on that night, or whether, indeed, her destination for the present was between Monte Carlo and Cannes, he could give no information.

Newcome took the last train which left Monte Carlo that night for Cannes. His theory was that the Comtesse would proceed to Marseilles and Paris, in which latter place, it appeared, she lived. But there was one doubt in his mind which made him fear that after all he was starting upon a wild-goose chase.

Supposing the Comtesse were but a pawn on Macaire's chess-board? If he were the man whom Newcome sought he might be credited with a hidden motive for nearly every act of his life; and though Newcome had not thought of it until he was in the train, it was not impossible that Macaire knew the Comtesse and had commissioned her to buy the jewel if Dick Gray could be induced to sell it. This would have been a way of testing Dick's integrity, if Macaire had any reason for wishing to break it down; and it would be maddening if, after following the woman across half France, he had to learn at last that the moonstone Sphinx had never really been out of Macaire's reach.

There was nothing to do now but go on, however, and hope for the best.

At the station in Cannes Newcome made enquiries. A lady answering the description given had been seen there, but had already gone on to Marseilles by a slow train.

Newcome had to wait with what patience he could muster until morning. Then the chase began again. At Marseilles he could learn nothing of his quarry, but he was so sure now that Paris was to be the Comtesse's ultimate destination that he proceeded accordingly.

At the end of the thirteen hours' journey came another night of enforced idleness; but next day he found out the flat where the Comtesse de Silbery lived in a semi-fashionable quarter. He called at the house, only to be told by the concierge that madame and her maid had returned but for half a day, departing he knew not where. They had gone away in a fiacre; yes, with more luggage than they had brought home; so much the concierge divulged, and then ceased to be communicative, despite a bribe.

Newcome resigned himself to more wasted hours, and advertised for the driver of the fiacre which had called at such and such a house, on such a date, to take a lady and her maid to the station.

He had but a day to wait, for on the morning of the paper's issue came the answer he wanted. Having learnt the station whither the Comtesse had been driven, it was comparatively simple to obtain the information later that she had gone to Brussels.

To Brussels Newcome followed, only to lose the scent and pick it up again at last, with the intelligence that, after visiting a friend, the Comtesse de Silbery had departed for Spa.

Though it was discouraging to chase a flitting will-o'-the-wisp, the news that the lady had chosen Spa was satisfactory to Newcome. He saw in it an indulgence of an overpowering love for the gambling-tables; and he told himself that she had hurried away from Monte Carlo for fear of losing her beloved fetich, but was consoling herself at Spa. If she had acted in collusion with Macaire she need not have fled from her Mecca to a lesser Paradise; and Newcome was inclined to think that, if Dick had not hinted at the jewel having been stolen, and the vexation to her certain to ensue, all his troublesome journeyings might have been spared.

The season at Spa was only just beginning; but one could gamble. That was the principal thing.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Story of the Moonstone.

Newcome found out at what hotel the Comtesse de Silbery was staying, and went there also. But it was in the gambling rooms that he saw her first. He could not have failed to recognize her from Dick Gray's description, for, as it happened, she wore the same poppy-red dress she had worn on the night when the moonstone changed hands; and in her dyed auburn hair were the same diamond pins flashing like fire-flies as she moved her head. But had these signs failed he must still have known her, for on the table almost under her hand was the Sphinx's head, close to the little pile of gold which its magical influence was to increase.

Newcome stood close to her, and risked a few sovereigns. He lost steadily; she as steadily won. Being too striking and handsome a figure to pass unnoticed, the Comtesse saw him, and pitied his bad luck. "If you but had my fetich, monsieur!" she said, laughing, to show a bleak gleam of false teeth. "If you like, I will lend it to you. Now, try again."

Newcome's hand thrilled as he touched the moonstone. At that moment he might have escaped with it through the crowd, and she could not have detained him. But the woman had trusted him, and meant kindness. He would not, even playing for such high stakes as gov-

One share of common, par value $100.00, given with each share of preferred.

The whole of the instalments remaining unpaid at any time may be prepaid in full. A discount of one per cent will be allowed upon the par of each share if prepaid at time of allotment.

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company.

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are:—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey:—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4 05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5 23
	100 00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons of ore above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows:—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4 00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows:—

			ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902,	to July 1st,	1903	$2.70	$2 70
July 1st, 1903,	" "	1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904,	" "	1905	1 65	1.65
July 1st, 1905,	" "	1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906,	" "	1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows:—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6½ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000 00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000.00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

Facts as to the Moore Bros

New York, Nov. 18.—A Boston gentleman connected for years with the business enterprises of the Moore Bros, Saturday spoke as follows: "They are not rampant speculators as many people suppose. They should not be included in the so-called Western crowd. Their market transactions are for their own account and not for any pool. As a rule they confine their operations to one property. When they came into the Diamond Match Co. they went into it to the full extent of their fortune, and when they failed in that they lost their all. Within six months of the Diamond Match episode they again came to the front through the reorganization of the Biscuit industry, for Judge Moore was the first to see the benefits accruing through the consolidation of industrial organizations. The organization of this company, one of the first so-called trusts and to-day one of the most successful, placed the Moores on their feet and enabled them to pay off their Diamond Match debts, which they did at 100 cents on the dollar, leaving them a handsome surplus. The Moores then went into steel, organizing the American Tin Plate Co., American Sheet Steel Co., and other kindred companies, and when they sold out to the United States Steel Corporation, they received comparatively the highest prices for any of the companies making up that big corporation. When the Moores were in steel that was the principal investment. When they sold out their steel companies to the steel corporation, they immediately marketed all their stock at about the highest prices ever showed and placed the proceeds into Rock Island, and that property is to-day their principal investment. They have their stock paid for, consequently they are in an impregnable position. They have steel that was their principal investment, would only represent a part of their surplus wealth. The point that I wish to make is that the Moores are not extended; they confine their operations largely to one property, and that property has the full extent of their wide financial experience, ability and wealth. They have very ambitious plans for the Rock Island, and intend to make that system the Pennsylvania of the west.

Summary—To-day's market was without decisiveness in either direction, somewhat mixed and most erratic. Manhattan opened up at 140 first, receded, then rose to 142 5-8. Sugar rose two points, all of which was lost. Stocks advanced, then fell, losses being predominant. B. & O. endeavored to advance upon its splendid annual showing which resulted in net earnings upon the common of nearly 9 per cent. We would call your attention to the comment in these letters relative to Manhattan about 10 days ago, when we predicted it would sell at 145 and cross M. H. Extreme uncertainty characterized dealings more or less. Money 4 per cent.

Oil Strike in Kent County

(Press Despatch)

Chatham, Nov. 12—There is as yet little new in the oil situation, which is the one topic of conversation. Accounts of the Raleigh well's capacity have not been one whit exaggerated. Oil men are swarming here, some coming even from California and great expectations are entertained as to future explorations. A company which has fourteen wells at Northwood, six miles from here, on the line of the Grand Trunk, hold leases for lands adjacent to the gusher, and will begin to bore at once in their territory. The gusher is situated on the apex or crown of a sudden elevation or dome in the rock formation, and oil experts say this is a sure sign of permanency and the reason for the unusual pressure manifested.

Mining Investment Without Precedent

A SMALL SUM INVESTED NOW SHOULD PROVIDE COMFORTABLE INCOME FOR MANY YEARS

The LARDEAU Mines, Capitalized at Only $100,000.00, Should Produce $270,000.00 Net Revenue Per Year—These Figures are Based on the Reports of Well-Known Mining Engineers—Present Price of the Stock Only 10 Cents a Share, but Subscriptions Will Have to be Made Promptly, as the Price Will Soon Advance to Very Much Higher Figures.

We do not hesitate to say that in our judgment stock in the LARDEAU MINES LIMITED, offers a most magnificent opportunity for investment.

There is every reason to believe that the LARDEAU MINES will pay a profit of 270 per cent. PER YEAR, within a short time, and will continue to yield such profits for more than a lifetime.

These are stupendous figures, but we believe them to be absolutely conservative. Our reasons are based on these facts:

PROOF OF NO STOCK JOBBING

In the first place the capitalization is only $100,000. This low capitalization shows upon the face of it that the company is honestly organized—that there is no suspicion of stock-jobbing, which has too often ruined many otherwise honest companies.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY

The property is located in the celebrated Lardeau mining division of West Kootenay, British Columbia. The property owned by this company consists of three full claims, embracing an extent of 156 acres—mineral claims in British Columbia are 1,500x1,500 feet—equal to 51 acres in each extent. Three strong parallel ore veins run through the property from end to end, a distance of of 4,500 feet. If placed end to end this would give us 13,500 feet, equal to a continuous ore body over two and a half miles in length. The values are in gold, silver, copper and lead, and run from $25.00 to $77.00 per ton of 2,000 pounds. These results show indications of permanent values of the most convincing kind.

GROSS VALUE OF SHIPMENTS.

The gross value of shipments of ore aggregating 6,193,691 pounds from twelve mines in the Lardeau, all situated near the property owned by this company, was $453,410.81, equal to a return per ton of over $146.00. The property owned by this company shows up equally as well as any of these more fully developed mines, and will, we are convinced, shortly rank among the best in the Lardeau division.

READ THESE FIGURES CAREFULLY

In a very conservative statement issued by the officers of the company, appears the following:

"In order to show why we are confident we are right, we will estimate our ore values at $50.00 per ton, a little over one-third of the average ore values of the entire Lardeau mining division. We will also base our calculations on a daily output of 30 tons—a small amount compared with the extent of our property and the size of its ore bodies. We will allow $10.00 per ton for mining, transportation (a few miles only) and smelting charges. The profits after making a reasonable reduction for incidentals and surplus, work out as follows:

30 tons at $50.00 per ton...		$1,500
Less $10.00 per ton mining, transportation, and reduction charges		300
Net daily income......		1,200
Say for 300 days per year...... ...		300
Total net yearly income... 360,000
Deduct for incidental expenses, $5 per ton... ......$45,000
Deduct for company's surplus account $5 per ton.	45,000	90,000

which sum is equal to 270 per cent. per annum on our capital stock of $100,000.

"This estimate is made on the basis of a small output compared to the extent of our property and the splendid facilities it affords for economical mining and on the operation of the mine for 300 days per year only, so that anyone can see at a glance that we are not overestimating in any particular, especially when the output of mines similarly situated, and with ore bodies of less extent than ours, ship hundreds of tons each day. There is no good reason why our property, when fully developed—which will be within six months to a year—should not ship several hundreds of tons of ore per year, but we are basing our calculations on the immediate future in presenting the above estimate.

"We are now within seventy to eighty feet of the main ore veins, and assays show values as high as $77.00 per ton. The average returns from twelve mines in our district, according to Government records, which are always conservative, run as high as $146.40 a ton in gold, silver, copper and lead.

HONEST, LEGITIMATE MANAGEMENT

We know the men connected with the management of the LARDEAU MINES, and have known them for years. We know that they never were and never will be connected with any but honest and legitimately conducted enterprises.

REPORT OF MINING ENGINEER.

The property has been thoroughly examined by well known mining engineers and their reports have borne out every statement that has been made by the company. Mr. H. O. McClymont, one of the last engineers to make a report says in conclusion:

The average assays are most encouraging, considering the great width and continuancy of the leads across the country with such great width and prominence of the surface, and judging from other properties in the near vicinity, some of which are on the same level and have developed very rich ore bodies The LARDEAU MINES are as good as any, if not the best, in the vicinity, and I verily believe with a nominal expenditure, they should be made dividend-paying in a short time, and I would strongly recommend extensive developments towards that end. Signed, H. O. McClymont, Mining Engineer."

SMALL AMOUNT OF MONEY NEEDED.

As Mr. McClymont says in his report, only a small sum of money is needed to complete the development work and put these mines on a dividend paying basis.

We want to raise about $10,000 from the sale of shares, this money to be used to complete the work just specified.

A very short time will be required to raise this amount of money for this magnificent property, and then the sale of stock will be discontinued.

READ THIS CAREFULLY.

The present price of the stock is 10 cents per share.

The price will be advanced to 15 cents per share very soon, and then 20 cents per share.

The company reserves the right to withdraw the stock from the market without notice.

TWO YEARS AGO—AND NOW.

We believe that there are 90 chances in 100 of the LARDEAU MINES proving a BONANZA. One property in the vicinity of the Lardeau was recently sold for $500,000 cash, and stock in addition. Two years ago it was not nearly as good a prospect as the Lardeau is today.

The LARDEAU MINES, LIMITED, is a small, close corporation and the profits will consequently be large to each stockholder.

Those who are fortunate enough to buy stock at the low price of 10 cents can calculate on an annual income of $125.00 from an investment of $100.00 In other words, you would get your principal back and $25.00 besides every year.

YOU CAN PAY IN INSTALMENTS.

Write us for further particulars.

We will allow you to purchase a block of stock and pay for in in monthly instalments. Before your stock is paid for you will see it double in value—perhaps more.

We urge prompt action, because of the approaching increase of 15 cents per share, which may occur any day. The safest thing to do is to send us $10, which will reserve the stock you desire at 10 cents per share. Then you can investigate the matter carefully and fully and if you are not completely satisfied we will return your money.

WRITE TO-DAY, TO-MORROW MAY BE TOO LATE.

THE REFERENDUM CAMPAIGN

The Temperance Party Take the Initiative and Placard the Town with Strong Statements

On December 4th, the people of the Province of Ontario will have the privilege of saying by their votes whether or not a prohibitory law shall be enacted by the Government in power. Up to the present the prohibitionists and antis have contented themselves with quietly organizing, and the general public in a certain sense has been kept in the dark as to how the contest is to be waged. But yesterday, so far as this town in concerned, the temperance people threw down the gauntlet to the liquor dealers by posting on every bill board in town the following announcement:—

"The Liquor Traffic pays the Government $7,000,000 yearly for permission to take from the people $40,000,000. It costs the country many millions more to harvest the liquor traffic's crop of pauperism, lunacy and crime. Under prohibition we will only pay the $7,000,000. We will have the $33,000,000 to spend. This will make business boom. The liquor party are fighting to keep on plundering the people. They are after our $33,000,000."

We clip the following item from the Toronto Star of Nov. 17th. The gentleman mentioned is a son of Mr. Walter Strickland, architect, Toronto, and one of the Lakefield Stricklands:—

"Mr. H. S. Strickland was bathing in the lake at Kew Beach half a dozen times yesterday. He took a preliminary along the beach from the cut at Ashbridge's Bay to Munro Park with his child on his back. Then, when sufficiently warmed up, he took a plunge in the water, repeating this operation at intervals from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Mr. Strickland says the only drawback is lack of company, and he is desirous of having some one join him in his natatorial exploits."

NEW COFFEE

For the U. S. Army

Some soldiers are badly affected by coffee drinking. The Hospital Steward in one of the Army Posts in the West, says:—"Though in the medical service of the Army, I suffered agony for two years from a case of chronic gastric indigestion, and now that I am free from all the tortures attendant upon it, I attribute it to the good effects of Postum Food Coffee, both as a food and as a beverage.

I used medicinal and mechanical means to relieve myself during those two years and even though I had left off the use of coffee, I did not find myself in any measure free until I had commenced using Postum.

Being in charge of a detachment of the Hospital Corps, U.S.A., I, of course, had supervision of the mess, and by degrees I have initiated into using Postum, every member of the mess, some of whom were formerly very loud in their denunciation of anything 'manufactured.' And, going still further, I have supplied it to our patients in lieu of coffee; some have found fault, while many have praised it highly, and when returned to duty, have continued the use of it when it was possible, for a soldier has an extremely hard time in trying to choose his own food.

For the past eight months, not a grain of coffee has been used in this Hospital, and thanks to a cook who prepares Postum just right—there is a brilliant prospect of coffee taking a permanent seat in the back ground.

One who has passed through the horrors of indigestion as I have, shudders as he looks back upon his sufferings and when cognizant of the cause, will shun coffee as he would a rattle snake." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

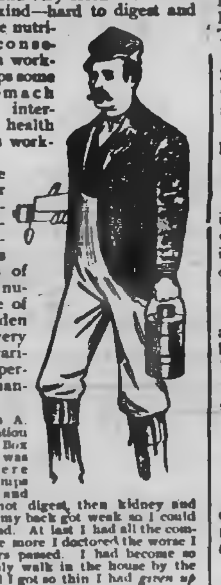
WEATHER NOTES

Wednesday—Fresh variable winds; unsettled and mild with showers.

Pressure is low throughout the northeastern portion of the continent, attending mild weather. Another depression is developing in the middle Atlantic Coast indicating stormy conditions for eastern Canada. Rain is falling over Ontario.

The Dinner Pail



Of the American working man is generally well filled. In some cases it is too well filled. It contains too many kinds of food, and very often the food is of the wrong kind—hard to digest and containing little nutrition. As a consequence many a working man develops some form of stomach trouble which interferes with his health and reduces his working capacity.

Where there is indigestion or any other indication of disease of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition, the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will almost invariably produce a perfect and permanent cure.

Mr. Thomas A. Swarts, of Sub Station C, Columbus, O., Box 103, writes: "I was taken with severe headache, then cramps in the stomach, and my food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. At last I had all the complaints at once, the more I doctored the worse I got until six years passed. I had become so poorly I could only walk in the house by the aid of a chair, and I got so thin I had given up to die, thinking that I could not be cured. Then one of my neighbors said, 'Take my advice and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of yourself.' The first bottle helped me so I thought I would get another, and after I had taken eight bottles in about six weeks, I was weighed, and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) pounds. I am as stout and healthy to-day, I think, as I ever was."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

WILL GREAT BRITAIN COMMIT A FATAL ERROR IN THE TRANSVAAL?

The New York Sun Draws a Dark Picture of the Future

CAPE COLONY IS LARGELY DUTCH

While Johannesburg District is to Be Heavily Taxed to Pay for The War—Chamberlains Great Task

New York, Nov. 19.—It is possible, if not probable, that the information gained by Mr. Chamberlain during his sojourn in South Africa will deter the present British Ministry from making the same blunder that the Government of George III. committed in its treatment of the Thirteen American Colonies after the Seven Years' War. The colonists, who, up to that time, had been thoroughly loyal, were irreparably alienated by the demand that they should bear a part of the pecuniary burden imposed by the costly contest. Now it is asserted that the Transvaal, which practically means Johannesburg, which again means Witwatersrand, must defray a considerable part of the expenses incurred in the struggle with the Boers, and the amount of the contribution, although not as yet officially fixed, has been variously computed at fifty, at seventy, and at a hundred millions of pounds sterling. What would probably be the effect of exacting the largest of those sums?

Sir David Barbour has calculated that £70,000,000 is the maximum contribution that, under any circumstances, the British Government would be justified in exacting from the Witwatersrand. Other experts of nearly equal authority put the maximum at £50,000,000. Nevertheless there is reason to believe that the British Government had hitherto been inclined to demand a contribution considerably larger that Sir David Barbour's estimate, although now it is to be presumed that no definite conclusion will be reached until Mr. Chamberlain has made a personal examination of Johannesburg's resources and of the whole situation in South Africa.

We say the whole situation in South Africa, because Mr. Chamberlain is too shrewd a man to overlook the primary purpose of the war just ended. That purpose was to assure preponderance to the English instead of the Dutch in South Africa, just as the purpose of the Seven Years' War, so far as British statesmen were concerned, was to secure for England, instead of France, ascendancy in North America. In the one case as in the other the purpose may be frustrated at the end, and the preponderance gained at the cost of so much blood and treasure may imperceptibly be lost if the British Government should estrange the one section of South Africa on which she should be able confidently to rely. This section is the Witwatersrand, or, in other words, the Transvaal, which the Rand will hereafter practically control. Natal, indeed, is loyal, but too small and weak to offer any serious resistance to a concerted renewal ten years hence of a movement for South African independence.

On the other hand, the Cape Colony is more utterly in the power of the Afrikander Bond than it ever was, the Orange River Colony must long remain what it now is, overwhelmingly Dutch, Rhodesia is an insignificant factor. The one large and growing nucleus of pro-British population, the one guaranty of British ascendency, is Johannesburg; and yet the British Government now proposes to levy upon the inhabitants of the Rand an immense contribution to the expenses of the recent war; although neither the English colonists in Natal nor the Dutch rebels in Cape Colony are to be called upon to pay a penny of the debt. That is to say, the English-speaking inhabitants of the Rand, who formerly complained that they were plundered by the Boers, are now to be exposed to heavier exactions at the hands of the British Government, and are to find themselves decidedly worse off than they would be if residents of Natal or of the Cape Colony.

It has been suggested by those alive to the dangers of the situation in South Africa that the Transvaal, which means Johannesburg, should not be required to make any direct contribution to the Imperial Exchequer, but that such sums of money as reasonably may be raised from the Rand mines by taxation should be applied for the relief of the Imperial Government from its liabilities in South Africa and to the indispensable work of readjustment and development in the conquered colonies. If this course were pursued, the British Government would avoid the mistake committed in the case o fthe Thirteen American Colonies, for the revenue needed for the purpose we have named would be raised yb the local authorities of the Transvaal, and disbursed under their superintendence. Even if Mr. Chamberlain, after a personal investigation of the subject, shall not be disposed to accept such a substitute for the proposed contribution to the Imperial Exchequer, he is at least likely to recognize the expediency of not making the contribution so large as to repel from England her most loyal and powerful supporters.

It seems to be indisputable that the Transvaal in the key to South Africa and that, for the present, at all events, Johannesburg hold the key. If Johannesburg be crippled or estranged, the Transvaal will remain Dutch and disloyal. With nothing to lean upon but Natal, which, itself, is dependent economically on Johannesburg, the British Empire in South Africa will prove to have been built upon the sand.

EVACUATION OF CHINA A HUGE RUSSIAN BLUFF

Russia in a Position to Strike at the Large Cities on Short Notice

HER EVACUATION OF NO NATIONAL IMPORTANCE

The Question Now Arrises Will England and Japan Tolerate Russia's Latest Move

London, Nov. 19—The Times special from Pekin says—In traversing the Trans-Manchurian Railway from Lake Baikal to Port Arthur you first pass through the Manchurian province of Hei-Lung-kiang; here so few Chinese are encountered that it appears to the onlooker that Siberia has been extended southward to the railway line. Hailar, which five years ago was a small Chinese settlement, is now a Russian town, containing Russian shops, hotels and hospitals. The Times correspondent counted twenty-two locomotives standing at the station. Further on Harbin, where five years ago there were half a dozen Chinese mud huts, is now a Russian city, comprising a civilian population of 8,000 possessing a fleet of steamers on the Sungari River, engine shops equal to any in America and stalls for forty-two locomotives. Going south from Harbin, one finds Russian settlements in course of construction on Russian concessions alongside of the large Manchurian cities.

At Mukden, the Chinese capital of all Manchuria, the railway, which at first was fifteen miles away, now passes the western wall. The Russian concession around the railway station covers ten square miles. Large barracks are being build there, and permanent accommodation is being provided for railway officials and the officers of the permanent garrison. The whole Trans-Manchurian Railway is now open. The distance from the western frontier to Harbin in 635 miles; from Harbin to the eastern frontier, 335 miles, and from Harbin to Port Arthur, 615 miles. There are stations every fifteen miles, and major stations supplied with railway work shops every seventy-five miles; at every station there are sidings of great length. At present three trains pass daily each way over the whole distance, and the number will be increased to ten as soon as the requisite rolling stock is forthcoming. An average train comprises twenty-five cars. The ordinary car has sleeping berths for forty-eight soldiers with rifle equipment. From the western frontier, beyond which lie the great military depots near Vladivostock, troops are moved to Harbin in thirty-four hours, from Trans-Baikalia. beyond the western frontier, trains, even now, while the tunnel under the Khingan Mountains is unfinished, reach Harbin to Port Arthur in sixty-four hours. On the way from Harbin to Port Arthur the railway passes not only Mukden, but the important cities of Kwang-chong-tase, Kaiyuen Tieling, Liau-yang, Hai cheng and others strung along the imperial highway in the Valley of the Liau River. This country is described as one of the richest granaries in Asia, producing enormous quantities of food stuffs and live stock. All along that highway stand vast Chinese caravansaries, able to quarter comfortably the winter traffic; so immense is this trade that 2,000 carts each drawn by seven mules pass a given point per day.

Now let us see what the Russian evacuation amounts to. On Oct. 8, of the present year the correspondent of The Times met Russian troops evacuating the country west of the Liau river. Conforming exactly to the letter of the convention signed at Pekin, these troops moved just one march eastward to the Russian railway concession at Mukden, where they are to be garrisoned permanently ostensibly for the purpose of guarding the railroad. The evacuation of New-chang meant the removal of the troops one hour's march upstream to permanent quarters in the Russian concession, or one hour by train eastward to the Russian settlement of Tashihchiao, where capacious barracks, solidly constructed of stone and brick, have been made ready for the winter. The evacuation of the great city of Mukden simply involved a removal of the troops from within the walls one hour's march to the Russian concession outside of them, where permanent quarters are being constructed for the garrison, which is expected to number 6,000. The evacuation of Liau-yang also meant the removal of Russian troops to the railway concession outside the walls, where preparations have been made for a permanent garrison of 2,000 men.

The same course has been pursued with regard to every other large Chinese city on the railway line, until you come to Harbin, which, being exclusively Russian, is not to be evacuated. A branch eighty miles long is to be constructed from Kwang-chang-tase, on the main line, to Kirin, a city with 300,000 inhabitants, the Russian inhabitants of which will ultimately be quartered at the rail-the city. So shrewdly, in truth, has the Trans-Manchurian Railway been traced that there is not one important highway way station, only one hour's march from in the country which it does not command. The troops guarding the railway practically guard all the capitals and large towns.

In a word, the Russian evacuation of Manchuria signifies nothing more than this, that the troops have been withdrawn to points from which the cities evacuated can be immediately struck. The result is that Manchuria is absolutely dominated by Russia, and the domination is rapidly becoming more effective than is that of England over the vassal States of India.

THE SINKING ISLAND OF LAKE MICHIGAN

It is of Considerable Size and Has an Unfathomable Lake

ONE OF NATURE'S BIG WONDERS

Boat Houses Have Already Disappeared—The Whole 5000 Acres in Great Danger

Chicago, Nov. 19.—South Manitou Island, in the northern part of Lake Michigan, is sinking. The south beach is rapidly being swallowed up, and the greatest concern is felt by those living there lest the entire area of 5,000 acres shall suddenly be submerged. The boathouse at the United States life saving station has already disappeared and where a month ago there was a high beach deep draught boats now plough through the water.

Vesselmen and officials advance two theories as to the cause of the phenomenon. One is that the island, which seems to be of volcanic origin, has been shaken by the seismic disturbances felt this year in a belt encircling the earth. The other is that the action of the water has undermined sections of the thus causing submarine avalanches.

The first intention received by outsiders that the area of the island was diminishing came from Capt. Lafberg, who has charge of the life-saving crew at Sleeping Bear Point on the Michigan mainland. He sent word to his superiors at Washington ten days ago that the boathouse at South Manitou had dropped out of sight during the night. Further news came from Lake captains who said that many residents were alarmed over indications that the peculiar island may suddenly be swallowed up.

Soundings made during the last few days have served only to add to the alarm. A short distance off shore where shoal water was formerly from three to five feet deep the sounding line indicated a depth of from twenty to seventy feet. No ordinary shifting of the shoal sands is regarded as being responsible for the great change.

The strange sinking of the land is regarded by many as being a warning to leave the island. Several have already left and others are preparing to go. They think they forsee a disaster that will erase South Manitou from the map and drown the entire population. Some are keeping a watch upon an unfathomable lake in the centre of the island. The Hollanders that inhabit the island do not share in the terror. They remain at their homes without fear, and and while they are more or less amazed at the creeping in of the lake, they point to the sand hills, and say it will take a long time for the water to reach the top.

But it is not the gradual destruction of the island that is expected by the alarmists. They believe it will be swallowed up suddenly, and that all who remain to tempt fate will perish. They fear destruction from two sources, and look either for the land to sink beneath the surface of Lake Michigan or for a volcanic eruption to rain fire down upon them. The cataclysm of St. Pierre and the tidal wave at Galveston are recalled and recited by the fearful ones.

A TERRIBLE EARTHQUAKE

Loss to Coffee Planters will Amount to Many Millions

Washington, Nov. 19.—James C. McNally, United States Consul-General at Guatemala City, has made a report to the State Department in regard to the eruption of Santa Maria volcano, which occurred on Oct. 4, causing the total ruin of the best coffee plantations in Guatemala, as well as half the coffee crop for the year, the total loss being estimated at more than $5,000,000. He says;

"As a climax to the terrible earthquakes of the 18th of April, which practically compassed the ruin of Quezaltenango, the volcano, Santa Maria, almost adjoining that city, erupted on the 24th inst., throwing out quantities of mud and ashes, causing untold damage on the coast side, which comprises the rich coffee zone of Guatemala.

The volcano is still active and ashes are falling on places thirty miles distant from the crater. The valuable coffee plantations noted for a large and fine production are to-day covered with from three to ten feet of mud and ashes, as well as other matter from the crater, and the tops of the coffee trees are scarcely noticeable. The loss to the owners of plantations is at this time incalculable, but it is conceded on a conservative estimate that the coffee loss will reach between 250,000 and 400,000 quintals of 100 pounds each, while the ruin of plantations and buildings, cattle and other accessories will aggregate $5,000,000 gold.

"Most of the ruined plantations were owned by the Germans, and the absolute loss of the properties has impoverished many who were before the 24th inst., reputed wealthy. Many owners had borrowed money on the present crop, while others had mortgaged their plantations to foreign banking houses, which carries a measure of misfortune to Europe. The reported loss of life is meagre and it is thought that the people escaped from the vicinity of the volcano at the first sign of trouble from that source. The Consular agent at Quezaltenango telegraphs that all the plantations within a radius of twenty miles from the volcano are totally destroyed.

"Later advices from Quezaltenango say that about four inches of pumice stone has fallen in that city and that the odor accompanying this deposit is discernible many miles from the seat of trouble."

MUST SUFFER DEATH PENALTY

Supreme Court Affirms the Conviction of an Alaskan Murderer

Washington, Nov. 20.—Homer Bird, convicted of murder in Alaska, whose case has been before the United States Supreme Court once before, will, under the decision rendered to-day, pay the penalty of his crime. Bird shot in cold blood two fellow prospectors in Alaska and on conviction in September, 1898, appealed to the Supreme Court, which reversed that judgment on the ground of an error and directed a new trial. He was convicted a second time, and again appealed to to the Supreme Court, taking the ground this time that the Alaskan Criminal Code law, which had been enacted in the meantime and under which he was tried the second time, had repealed and superseded the former code and that his conviction under it was therefore illegal, as the district court had no jurisdiction over an act committed prior to its enactment. The Supreme Court, in an opinion by Justice McKenna, holds that the Alaskan Criminal Code act provided for just such a contingency and that the district court had jurisdiction over the case. Bird's conviction was therefore affirmed and the Court directed the death sentence carried out.

THE ARABS ARE GREAT ON HEAVY CARRYING

Miss Ben-Oliel Tells of Seeing an Arab Carrying an Upright Piano—Second Lecture

Woodstock, Nov. 19.—The second lecture on Palestine at Dundas street church last night, was a most interesting one. Miss Ben-Oliel gave a talk on city life, showing many of the characters seen there, such as a Turk, a Greek, Bendouni, Arab, water carrier, burden carrier, scribe and school boys. From the references made to these in Scripture, it was a well spent hour, being introduced to them, the costumes bringing them closely in touch with the lecturer's descriptions. Some astounding statements were made in reference to the Arab burden carriers. The speaker said one man would rope three or four large trunks together, and jerking them up on to a pad on his back stagger off under the load, nothing of him in sight but his feet. She had seen one man carry an upright piano on his back two or three blocks, and her sister had seen one man carry a piano up a flight of stairs.

DEATH OF MISS COTY

Typhoid Fever Finds a Weakness of the Heart and Death Ensues

Early yesterday morning, Nov. 19th, Miss Ann Coty passed from this world to life eternal in the golden city of God, at the home of her sister, 158 King st., at the age of 38 years. She was a lady of bright mind and intellectual qualities of a high order, and her life's aim was to do unto others as she wished to be done by. Three or four months ago she was afflicted with typhoid fever, and although she recovered from that disease, a weakness of the heart developed and all that skilled physicians and kind and attentive friends could do, failed to restore her health and her spirit took its flight across the trackless sea of eternity as stated above. Deceased was born in Oakville and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Coty, who are now both dead. She leaves the following relatives to mourn her departure:—Rev. Father Coty, brother; Miss Lena Coty, of Hamilton, sister; Mr. Lewis Coty, of the post office, Oakville, brother; and Mrs. W. Rudkins, wife of the Collector of Inland Revenue, town, sister. Undertaker McFadden coffined the remains, and they were taken to Oakville by the 11.40 train yesterday, accompanied by Rev. Father Coty, and Rev. Dean O'Connell, of Mt. Forest, uncle of the deceased. The funeral will take place in that town on Friday and Mr. Rudkins, who was unable to accompany the remains on account of business arrangements, will leave this morning to be present at the last and rites to one who in life was beloved by all her associates and friends. To the sorrowing ones we extend our sympathy.

WILL HE STAY?

Rev. Wilson Asked to Remain in Peterborough

The quarterly meeting of George St. Methodist church was held on Tuesday night when Messrs. B. Shortley, D. W. Dumble, B. F. Ackerman, John Jeffrey, John Lockhart, S. R. Armstrong and H. C. Stabler were appointed stewards. The following resolution was also unanimously carried:—

"The Board of the George Street Methodist Church, Peterborough, while recognizing the present law of the Church, which entitles a stationed minister to remain on a circuit four years, yet deem it a duty to their minister, the Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., to make it known to him that they will rejoice in his continuing their pastor for the fourth year. The relationship of pastor and people has been so pleasant and satisfactory in all respects, that they are happy in the prospects of its continuance so long as the law of the Church will permit. This Board tenders to Mr. Wilson their thanks for faithful services and to his family their felicitations, and wish that he and they may enjoy all happiness in Peterborough."

Ringing in the Ears

This is an unfailing sign of catarrh, and if not checked will ultimately result in deafness. The simplest remedy is Catarrhozone, which if inhaled a few times daily, prevents the catarrhal condition from spreading. ANNUAL DANCE.

Will Trip the Light Fantastic on January the 21st

It is said that a soldier never grows old and there appears to be a great deal of truth in the saying. The "old boys" of the 57th Regiment recently organized and appointed the following officers:

President—Staff-Sergt Sharpe.
Hon. Sec.—Sergt. A. F. Paddon
Committee—Col. Sergt. Edwards, Corporal Henderson and Corporal Gemmell.

At a meeting held on Tuesday night it was resolved to hold a grand ball on Wednesday evening, Jan. 21st, 1903, and elaborate preparations are now in progress to make this event one of the best ever held in Peterborough. Those "soger boys" never do things by halves.

IN SESSION

To Spend $10,000 on Road and Bridges in the County

The men placed in charge of the affairs of the County of Peterborough met in special session in the Council Chambers yesterday. There were present Mr. T. G. Eastland, Warden, and councillors Richard Crowe, P. Costello, W. H. Casement, G. W. Fitzgerald, Robt Shaw, E. A. Peck, Wm. Anderson, J. B. Pearce and W. H. Jeffs.

J. B. Pearce moved the third reading of the by-law for the issuing of $10,000 debentures for improving roads and bridges.

The council then resolved itself into committee of the whole to discuss matters of general importance to the county and a report of their deliberations and resolutions will be given in to-morrow's daily.

POLICE COURT

Two Cases Adjourned for Further Enquiry

Yesterday morning the case of a man charged with drunkenness engaged the attention of the Police Magistrate. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, and the case will be further investigated this morning. A Texas magistrate recently decided that a man could not be considered drunk until he was found clutching at the grass to save himself from falling off the earth. We do not know whether or not the prisoner will cite this decision this morning or if it will be recognized as a precedence by the magistrate here.

The parties who removed a ladder belonging to Mr. Learmouth on Hallow'en were given a week by the Police Magistrate to restore Mr. Learmouth's property or go down a rung or two into their pockets to pay for the same.

NOVEMBER WEDDING BELLS

Miss Lilian May Kindred Becomes the Bride of Mr. Frederic Whaley

Another one of those pretty house weddings took place last evening at [illegible] Hunter street, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Kindred, when their third daughter, Miss Lillian May, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Frederick Whatley, assistant superintendent of the Metropolitan Life, by Rev. C. L. Thompson, pastor of Mark street Methodist church, Ashburnham.

At eight o'clock the bride, who was charmingly attired in white organdie, trimmed with lace applique and chiffon, entered the drawing room on the arm of her father to the strains of Mendellsohn's wedding march rendered by Miss Flo Thompson. Miss Maud Kindred, sister of the bride, who wore a becoming gown of white organdie over yellow trimmed with lace and chiffon, officiated in the capacity of bridesmaid. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Robert Whatley.

After the ceremony the wedding party sat down to a daintily served wedding breakfast in the dining room which was decorated elaborately with choice ferns and flowers. Later in the evening the happy couple left for their home at 348 Stewart street where they will reside. The bride wore a pretty suit of stone colored ladies' cloth, trimmed with white watered silk when leaving for her new home.

Mr. and Mrs. Whatley are both well known and highly esteemed in this community and the large number of wedding tokens they were the recipients of testifies to their popularity. May happiness and abundant prosperity be their portion as they journey onward is the fervent wish of The Times.

SYSTEM OF RAILWAYS FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

Survey Parties at Work in the Transvaal and and Orange River Colony

Energies of the Empire—Should be Conserved by Carringy British Methods Into Colonies

London, Nov. 19—A correspondent at Ladybrands reports that in various districts of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, survey parties are engaged in preparing a general scheme of railway construction, which will be submitted for the approval of the Railway Financial Board when the Transvaal loan is issued, and the sum alloted for the use of the railway department is known. In the meantime construction work will be pushed forward on the Bloemfontein, Thabanchu, and Harrismith and Vereeniging lines.

Paris, Nov. 19—Dr. Loir, of the Pasteur Institute, who has gone to Rhodesia to deal with the outbreak of hydrophobia there, writes a letter to Paris Temps describing his journey, in which he refers to the concentration camps which he visited, and which he says enabled the Boers to prolong resistance. Dr Loir says he asked his fellow-passengers their opinoin of the concentration camps, and a Frenchman from Johannesburg, a Dutch lady, and the Boers all said that the reported cruelties which had excited all Europe during the South African war never had any existence. Dr. Loir saw one camp which was built like a hospital. The huts seemed very clean ,and looked better than the slight, dingy buildings occupied by the British guard ing Buluwayo.

Berlin, Nov. 19—It is understood that negotiations between representatives of the Government and leaders of the Agrarians and the National Liberals in the Reichstag, regarding the tariff, are being vigorously prosecuted. The situation is said to be favorable for the Government, because the extreme opposition is engaged in a bitter controversy with the Radical left which, while opposing the Tariff Bill, protests energetically against obstructive tactics.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 19—Radzig, a well-known financial expert, publishes arguments based on facts supporting the complaint of local agricultural committees that the Government's financial policy is at variance with the country's true interests, and that Minister Witte has imposed a crushing burden by indirect taxation. Radzig gives figures showing that during the last twenty years the total indirect taxation has increased by 100 per cent., or 34 per cent. per head of population. Pokrovski, another well known expert, calculates that the protective system since its introduction has taken from the Russian consumer, on twelve common articles, a tax of $150,000,000. of which only $35,000,000 to the Treasury. The journal Khozain, where this article appeared, has been rebuked by the censor, and the current number of the paper has been prohibited except to regular subscribers.

London, Nov. 19—Lord Strathcona will preside to-night at the winter dinner in London of the Aberdeen University Club.

To Conserve Empire's Energy.

Major Craigie, president of the Royal Statistical Society, speaking last night, urged that, in view of the problems before the British race, Britain should seriously resume the exportation of brave, courageous men, ready to carry British civilization into countries like Canada, rather than the mere placing of colonial towns on a fringe of unoccupied regions. Herein Major Craigie gives authoritative expression to the growing belief of governing Englishmen that British statesmanship should concentrate itself upon the self-governing of the Empire rather than dissipating its energies over a half useless empire.

The prospectus of the new Canadian Railway Company will be issued to-morrow. The capital is £100,000, in shares of £1 each, of which 60, 207 will be alloted at par, with 5 shillings per share paid. The objects are as stated in yesterday's cable. Sir Douglas Fox and partners are the consulting engineers. No well known men are among the directors.

In the course of speeches yesterday at the launching of the Canadian Pacific steamer Princess Victoria from the Newcastle shipyard of Swan and Hunter, Limited, stress was laid upon the fact that the vessel provided exceptional equipment, and a speed of 19 knots, with a view to continuous service between Vancouver and Victoria in connection with the main Canadian Pacific line. The launch was most successful.

New York, Nov. 19—It was easy to me," said Andrew Murray, a Brooklyn horse doctor last night, as he described how he had cut a growth, declared to be cancerous, off his tongue, after well known physicians had told him that he must submit to a skilled operation or die. The remarkable operation was performed by Mr. Murray in his own office.

With a veterinary surgeon's knife in hand he stood before a mirror, and, pulling out his tongue, cut into the underpart and side of it, where the growth protruded. His tongue last night showed the marks of the keen knife, and the growth seemed removed. Mr. Murray declared that he never felt better in his life.

Mr. Murray is a tall, strongly built Scotsman, sturdy and young looking, in spite of his fifty odd years.

When, a few months ago, a back tooth began to ache, he had it pulled. Shortly afterwards, he says, his tongue and neck became affected. He was a heavy smoker, so he stopped using tobacco, but the growth in his mouth increased, until he could scarcely eat. Meantime, the glands in his neck swelled ominously.

Mr. Murray consulted Dr. A. Warner Shepard, of Willoughby street, Brooklyn, and was advised to immediately consult a specialist, as he had cancer in pronounced form.

Subsequently Mr. Murray consulted Dr. George R. Fowler, the well known surgeon. He told Mr. Murray that he must submit to an operation or succumb within eight months. To have the operation performed Dr. Fowler asked him to call on Tuesday of last week at the Brooklyn Hospital. It was contemplated to remove a gland from Murray's neck and to cut his tongue.

Rather than take his chances on the operating table, under ether, Murray resolved to operate on himself.

Whether Mr. Murray has actually removed all of the growth, is a matter for medical men to subsequently determine.

London, Nov. 19—The punitive expedition against the Kabul Khel Wazirls, whose country lies on the Indian frontier, near Bannu, and whose strength in fighting men is placed at about 3,000, has already led to far more severe fighting than was anticipated. The British force employed consists of four columns of Indian troops, each 700 to 800 strong and started out on Sunday and Monday it was thought that five or six days would suffice to bring the operations to a successful close, and that there would be no fighting of a serious nature.

Today, however, news arrives that the fourth column is being obstinately opposed, and that the colonel in command of it has been wounded, and has asked for reinforcements. The morning papers think that the colonel alone is not all who are likely to be wounded in such an enfalement, and it is surmised that the full extent of hte British casualties has yet to be made known. The demand for strong reinforcements would seem to point to the probability of the force having been surrounded or entrapped in some way by the enemy.

Railways to Raise Rates.

Companies Say the Cost of Operating Lines Has Greatly Increased

Montreal, Nov. 19—The Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Railway Companies have felt keenly in common with other great railways, the pressure of the demands of labor organizations for greater remuneration, and the almost equally pronounced and continuous increase in the price of every kind of equipment and material, and the question of a general movement for advance in transportation rates is now receiving serious consideration.

Mr. G. M. Bosworth, of the Canadian Pacific, lays great emphasis on the fact that while the gross earnings of the railways have gone up amazingly, there has been practically

No Increase in the Net Earnings.

In other words, the working expenses were steadily absorbing the whole of the fruits of managerial enterprise in opening up new avenues of traffic and in enlarging and increasing the old. The companies, Mr. Bosworth remarked, have to pay more for locomotives, more for passenger and freight cars and all other kinds of rolling stock, more for rails and ties, more for the fuel they burn, and more—far more—for all kinds of labor. In these circumstances the companies must look somewhere to recoup themselves.

How to Recoup Them.

The question was asked. Would the continuous growth of traffic resulting from the advance in population, carrying with it the demand for all kinds of articles, in the end restore the equilibrium by giving the companies a wider basis from which they could draw their profits? It did not seem so now, Mr. Bosworth replied, nor could he see a solution of the difficulty in that direction. Increased traffic necessarily implied increased cost in handling it, because additional traffic could not be handled without increased facilities, additional equipment, and very often it entailed the construction of additional lines—all of which meant the employment of new capital, which naturally looked for a fair return.

"Reduce it to its fundamental basis," remarked Mr. Bosworth, "and you have the old economic principle, that you cannot sell goods that cost you six cents for five cents and hope to carry on business. Take the case of the Pennsylvania. The other day they gave an advance all round on the wages of their employes, representing 10 per cent., and involving millions of dollars. What was the result? A prompt fall in Pennsylvania stock in the financial markets."

The views of the Grand Trunk Management were in harmony with those expressed by Mr. Bosworth. The officials had just returned from their trip through Ontario, where they had inspected the branch lines. Fresh from the gathering grounds of traffic, and having before them the need of greater expenditure in increasing the facilities for transportation, the Grand Trunk officials point out that a very small increase in the rates, a fraction per ton mile, would make all the difference between working the system at a fair profit and working it under unremunerative conditions.

The impression clearly given was that these companies will very shortly have to consider jointly the question of falling back on the public to recoup them for the increased expenditures that they are obliged to incur to meet demands that they are unable to resist.

A Great Sufferer Cured

Mr. Benjamin Dillon, of Leeds, Ont., was cured of Muscular Rheumatism by Polson's Nerviline and says: "I feel it my duty to proclaim Polson's Nerviline as an infallible cure for Rheumatism; it cured me after 20 years of suffering, and nothing I know of can equal its penetrating power. Nerviline simply has no equal in quickly relieving and curing Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, and Lumbago. A trial will convince anyone. Price 25c.

LONG - DISTANCE TYPE - WRITING

In this progressive age, labor-saving appliances, while frequently driving persons out of certain occupations, add so materially to the products of the world that in the end any new invention furnishes additional employment, besides contributing materially to the comfort of the masses.

One of these recent inventions, the electric long distance typewriter, is likely to reduce for a time the number of telegraph operators employed in various businesses. The new appliance, which is now being used between the cities of Berlin and Hamburg in Germany, and will soon be utilized by the German government throughout the empire for postal telegraphing, is very simple. A persons sits at a keyboard somewhat similar to that of an ordinary typewriter, and by playing upon the keys, causes a little instrument fifty, seventy-five or one hundred miles away to print the words in plain type on a roll of paper as rapidly as the keys are pressed. No one is required to be near the receiving instrument, which takes care of itself.

If a correspondent at Washington wished to send to his newspaper a long report of an exciting debate in Congress, he would sit down at the keyboard of this new instrument and send probably 1,500 words an hour in such shape that it would be ready for the type machine as soon as it was marked off by the receiver. Truly, mankind is working seeming miracles!

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The Hamilton Times says negotiations are in progress for the establishment of a "large" hat factory in that city. Some such enterprise has become necessary because of the swelled heads of the citizens.

Hamilton Times: William K. Vanderbilt and Grover Cleveland received respectively the largest and smallest checks ever issued by the United States Government. At one time Mr. Vanderbilt owned $50,000,000 worth of government bonds, and on this amount drew annual interest of $2,000,000. At the close of Mr. Cleveland's administration it was discovered, in settling up his accounts for salary, that the government owed him 1 cent. A check for that amount was forwarded to him, and as it has never been presented for payment, it is probable that the recipient preserves it as a curiosity.

The other Doukhobors in Russia are petitioning the Sultan to allow them to settle in Turkey and mention that Canada is not free enough to suit them. This is pretty hard on Canada, but if our own Douks would also betake themselves to the sheltering wings of Turkey nobody would resent the slight.

PUBLIC OPINION REFLECTED

Times Readers Express Their Opinions on Famous Topics

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—We know that the day is fast approaching when the referendum vote will be taken, and I am more than surprised at the don't care style of the electorate in this section. There has been some little organization by both parties—that is the temperance party and the antis—but nothing like the importance of the subject demands. For many years we have had this question of prohibition agitated, and in my opinion, the coming referendum vote is a culminating era in that agitation. If the vote is an adverse one, then temperance people who have been expressing so much anxiety to see Canadians made a sober people by act of parliament, will need to hold their peace and trust to the Giver of all Goodness to right affairs along this line.

If the vote is strongly in favor of prohibition, the Government, Grit or Tory, cannot but heed the voice of the people, and the consequence will be that the sale and drinking of liquor as a beverage must not be licensed by act of parliament.

I am not going to express my opinion as to how others should vote on this matter, nor am I yet fully persuaded as how I shall mark my ballot, but this I do think that there should be more public meetings, more thorough discussion, and a more independent generality of this all important subject between now and when the vote is to be taken, on December 4th. The still-hunt campaign is not desirable on either side in this struggle. The temperance party are attacking the business, occupations and property interests of the hotelkeepers. Those attacks should be made in the open and the hotelkeepers and others engaged in the liquor traffic should come out and defend their interests publicly. Let us have a little more light on this subject, so that we may be able to vote intelligently.

Yours, etc.

RATEPAYER.

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—I notice that you say in your paper that there are no great issues still in sight for the coming municipal campaign. I take issue with you there. The streets and crossings of Peterborough are a disgrace to the importance of the place. I have heard it said that we have an underground street railway, and I think it could be as truly remarked that we have underground Macadamized streets, and virtually no crossings at all.

There is one thing we have, and that is plenty of mud. Men are almost daily engaged in scraping this mud off the hidden treasure—the buried stone—and still they seem to make little or no progress. Dollars and dollars of the people's money are being spent in this way. Is this not a great issue? Should not the people of Peterborough elect a Council for 1903 who will secure a mining expert to make a thorough examination and ascertain if our former good stone roads have gone so deep down in earth's bosom that they cannot be resurrected? Let the ratepayers think this matter over and see that a Council of practical men who will know something about the streets, are elected for the ensuing year.

Yours truly,

A. LABORER.

CZARINA REFUSES TO DISROBE

Greek Church Requires Immersion to be in Garments of Mother Eve

St. Petersburg, Nov. 18.—The gossip to the effect that the Czarina will be divorced because she has failed to give the Czar a son, but under the pretext that she has not adhered to the belief of the Greek church of which she became a member when she was married, recalls a hitherto unpublished incident of her baptism when she entered the Church of Russia.

The Greek church not only requires immersion at baptism, but immersion absolutely without clothes. This does not matter in the case of infants, but where grown people become converts it is at least embarrassing.

When the Czarina heard this and heard that she was expected to face the ordeal of a semi-public baptism garbed as was Mother Eve, she flatly and persistently declined, and no amount of argument or coercion would move her. At one time it looked as if the incident would end in an international fracas between her court and that of Russia, for the church declared that the rule had never been changed and never would be. The Empress-elect remained firm and the church was finally induced to compromise. It was decreed that she might go through the ceremony wearing a single white garment, and in this fashion she was immersed.

The fact that the immersion was not according to the regular rites of the church will be used, if the Czar consents to a divorce, to show that the Czarina is not a real and conscientious member of the church and therefore not legally the Empress.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

House, etc.

erned the game he played in secret, have betrayed the trust.

He would have wished to lose, rather than win, so that the Comtesse might see her talisman was not infallible, and value it the less. Nevertheless, as luck would have it, he won; and with thanks said that he would no longer rob the lady of her fetich. He would play no more that night.

Next evening he was purposely late for dinner, and, seeing the Comtesse at a small table, he drew near, as if to be seated at the next which was available. As he advanced their eyes met; she gave him a half-bow, which he answered so impressively that with a gesture the old Frenchwoman beckoned him to her. If he chose, he might sit at her table. She would explain to him her system, and if he took her advice he need no longer throw his money away as he had done last night.

"But madame has the wisdom of the Sphinx to assist her," he said, smiling as he joyfully accepted the lady's invitation.

This brought up the subject of the moonstone, and Newcome's heart sank as every word the Comtesse spoke betrayed the fantastic value she set upon the jewel.

It was not until they had been on friendly terms for three days, dining together every evening, that he ventured to take advantage of the favor with which he was evidently regarded. The Comtesse, always ready to talk of the moonstone, had been drawn on to tell him that she had paid a thousand francs for it to a mad young Englishman at Monte Carlo.

"Fancy selling it!" she exclaimed.

"Would you not sell it, Comtesse?" Newcome questioned.

She laughed. "Try me."

"Suppose I took you in earnest, and offered you a thousand pounds instead of a thousand francs?"

"Do you mean it?"

"Absolutely."

"No, then, my dear Baron von Zellheim. Not for two thousand pounds. Not for twice two thousand. For, you see, I am fortunate enough not to be in need of money."

"Is there anything that you do happen to be in need of, Comtesse? If there is anything you want that I could get for you, I will get it—provided that you pay me with the Sphinx's head."

"I will exchange it for the Koh-i-noor. Can you get me that?"

"I might. But it will take time. Will you lend me your talisman?"

"I have never yet lent anything I valued, not even a book, until I lent you the moonstone the other night, without your even asking. I don't know why I did it, unless—it was your eyes, I suppose. I am of a certain age, and I can safely tell you that."

"Will you lend it to me again—for a few days?"

"For the tables, you mean, as I use it?"

"No, Comtesse, to carry away to London. I should be only too pleased if you would come, too."

"I never knew so impudent a young man!" said the lady. "Neither I nor my moonstone will go to London."

"It is really my moonstone, if it comes to that," Newcome said on a sudden impulse, speaking with far more coolness than he felt.

The Comtesse's face changed, and she set down her champagne glass to stare at him. "Your moonstone?" She did not know but that he led up to some jest.

"Mine by inheritance. It was stolen from—someone very near to me."

"Oh!" she paused thoughtfully. "Then—your coming here—our acquaintance—is not an accident?"

"Comtesse, you led me a terrible dance—from Monte Carlo to Paris, from Paris to Brussels, from Brussels to Spa."

"Great Heavens! You are one of those detective people!"

"If I had been, I should have found you sooner."

"And now that you have found me, mon cher ami, it will do you no good. Possession is nine-tenths of the law. You would have to prove that my moonstone was your moonstone. To do that you might have difficulty. And if it were done, I am still a woman. I should find some way of evading the law."

"I don't intend to appeal to the law. But I think, because you are 'still a woman,' if it be against your principles to lend me the Sphinx's head, and you will not sell, that you will give it."

"I would make a big wager that nothing you could say or do would induce me to give up my fetich of my own free will."

"What would you wager—the moonstone itself?"

"Good Heavens, what an idea!"

"Yet if you are so sure of yourself, why not stake it?"

His handsome eyes compelled hers. He was twenty-six, and she was sixty; but he was a man, and—as she had said—she was "still a woman." So she laughed excitedly, and the gambling spirit rose within her.

"Yes, I will wager the moonstone itself. If you are clever enough to make me want to give it to you, you shall have it. But—do you remember one of the tasks that Venus set for Psyche?—how the great piles of mixed grain had to be sorted, each kind to itself, between sunrise and sunset. You have as hard a task, and there are no grateful ants to help you, Baron."

"There are my own wits—and there's your sense of justice; your womanly sympathy."

No one had talked in this way to the lady of dyes and paints for many a long year; yet she listened, and laughed, and was not displeased; but she knew that she would never give up her talisman.

"And how do you propose to make use of my sense of justice with your wits?" the Comtesse de Silbery deliberately asked.

"By telling you a story," said Hope Newcome.

"Is that all? An exciting one, I hope, or I shall remember that in half an hour it will be my usual time for beginning a little game."

"I shall try to make you forget," replied Newcome. "It is exciting enough—at least, it was to the actors. For it is a true story that I shall tell you. A story of treachery and murder."

"Oh—you are sensational."

"Real life is sensational. There are true things stranger than any fiction which people would dare to write. My story begins a long time ago, and I should be afraid it might bore you at first were not my heroine one of the most beautiful women who ever lived. And the love element of the romance comes in early."

"Are you the hero, my friend?"

"No. I am only a walking gentleman. But, to begin, or you'll be impatient for the green baize. Once upon a time there

Pitkin Gold Belt Mining and Reduction Company

Which is Safe and Sure of Quick Returns, may Bring an Enormous Return at any Moment. It has the Possibilities of Rivaling the Great Mines of the Past.

This Company has a mine on a true fissure vein, in the center of the Gunnison Gold Belt, Colorado, which is the "Mother" lode or dike, which has produced 55 per cent. more gold than the total output of the Cripple Creek district.

This Mine is no Prospect. Nor is it Waiting on Your Subscription to Buy Machinery or for Development.

After a careful examination by experts, Joseph M. Bradley, M. E., and Mr. George Arlett, A. I. M. E., Amalgamated Copper Company's expert in Chihuahua, Mexico, they advised the purchase of the property. The property had shallow development upon it, showing two ore shoots from which smelting ore had been shipped to the Buena Vista Smelter.

The Company purchased and paid for the latest improved machinery and has put a shaft down 250 feet and intend to carry it down 1000 feet. On the 150 foot level 300 feet of development has been made and an ore shoot has been encountered and blocked out for 57 feet, carrying values in gold from 2 to 9 ounces or $40 to $180 per ton. The cost of mining, hauling, freight and smelters charges will be between $12 and $18 per ton.

Ed. McCarthy & Co., bankers, guarantee a shipping mine of smelting ore running from 2 to 6 ounces in gold, or $40 to $120 per ton, by January 1st, 1903, or all funds will be returned to subscribers upon presentation of receipt issued by said bank.

Also to prospective purchasers of $600 worth of stock we are offering a free trip to Colorado and return. You investigate first and purchase afterward. Could you expect anything fairer than this?

The capital stock of this company is $1,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares of stock at $1 each, full paid and non-assessable. A portion of the treasury stock is now offered at

25 CENTS PER SHARE—PAR VALUE $1.00

In one payment, or 20 per cent. down and the balance in four equal monthly payments, for necessary expenditures and improvements on a shipping mine.

Mining Investment Without Precedent

A SMALL SUM INVESTED NOW SHOULD PROVIDE COMFORTABLE INCOME FOR MANY YEARS

The LARDEAU Mines, Capitalized at Only $100,000.00, Should Produce $270,000.00 Net Revenue Per Year—These Figures are Based on the Reports of Well-Known Mining Engineers—Present Price of the Stock Only 10 Cents a Share, but Subscriptions Will Have to be Made Promptly, as the Price Will Soon Advance to Very Much Higher Figures.

We do not hesitate to say that in our judgment stock in the LARDEAU MINES LIMITED, offers a most magnificent opportunity for investment.

There is every reason to believe that the LARDEAU MINES will pay a profit of 270 per cent. PER YEAR, within a short time, and will continue to yield such profits for more than a lifetime.

These are stupendous figures, but we believe them to be absolutely conservative. Our reasons are based on these facts:

PROOF OF NO STOCK JOBBING

In the first place the capitalization is only $100,000. This low capitalization shows upon the face of it that the company is honestly organized—that there is no suspicion of stock-jobbing, which has too often ruined many otherwise honest companies.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY

The property is located in the celebrated Lardeau mining division of West Kootenay, British Columbia. The property owned by this company consists of three full claims, embracing an extent of 150 acres—mineral claims in British Columbia are 1,500x1,500 feet—equal to 51 acres in each extent. Three strong parallel ore veins run through the property from end to end, a distance of of 4,500 feet. If placed end to end this would give us 13,500 feet, equal to a continuous ore body over two and a half miles in length. The values are in gold, silver, copper and lead, and run from $25.00 to $77.00 per ton of 2,000 pounds. These results show indications of permanent values of the most convincing kind.

GROSS VALUE OF SHIPMENTS.

The gross value of shipments of ore aggregating 6,153,004 pounds from twelve mines in the Lardeau, all situated near the property owned by this company, was $452,410.21, equal to a return per ton of over $146.00. The property owned by this company shows up equally as well as any of these more fully developed mines, and will, we are convinced, shortly rank among the best in the Lardeau division.

READ THESE FIGURES CAREFULLY

In a very conservative statement issued by the officers of the company, appears the following:

"'In order to show why we are confident we are right, we will estimate our ore values at $50.00 per ton, a little over one-third of the average ore values of the entire Lardeau mining division. We will also base our calculations on a daily output of 30 tons—a small amount compared with the extent of our property and the size of its ore bodies. We will allow $10.00 per ton for mining, transportation (a few miles only) and smelting charges. The profits after making a reasonable reduction for incidentals and surplus, work out as follows:

30 tons at $50.00 per ton...		$1,500
Less $10.00 per ton mining, transportation, and reduction charges		300
Net daily income.....		1,200
Say for 300 days per year..... ...		300
Total net yearly income...		360,000
Deduct for incidental expenses, $5 per ton...	$45,000
Deduct for company's surplus account $5 per ton.	45,000	90,000

which sum is equal to 270 per cent. per annum on our capital stock of $100,000.

"This estimate is made on the basis of a small output compared to the extent of our property and the splendid facilities it affords for economical mining and on the operation of the mine for 300 days per year only, so that anyone can see at a glance that we are not overestimating in any particular, especially when the output of mines similarly situated, and with ore bodies of less extent than ours, ship hundreds of tons each day. There is no good reason why our property, when fully developed—which will be within six months to a year—should not ship several hundreds of tons of ore per year, but we are basing our calculations on the immediate future in presenting the above estimate.

"We are now within seventy to eighty feet of the main ore veins, and assays show values as high as $77.00 per ton. The average returns from twelve mines in our district, according to Government records, which are always conservative, run as high as $146.00 a ton in gold, silver, copper and lead.

HONEST, LEGITIMATE MANAGEMENT

We know the men connected with the management of the LARDEAU MINES, and have known them for years. We know that they never were and never will be connected with any but honest and legitimately conducted enterprises.

REPORT OF MINING ENGINEER.

The property has been thoroughly examined by well known mining engineers and their reports have borne out every statement that has been made by the company. Mr. H. O. McClymont, one of the last engineers to make a report says in conclusion:

The average assays are most encouraging, considering the great width and continuancy of the leads across the country with such great width and prominence of the surface, and judging from other properties in the near vicinity, some of which are on the same level and have developed very rich ore bodies. The LARDEAU MINES are as good as any, if not the best, in the vicinity, and I verily believe with a nominal expenditure, they should be made dividend-paying in a short time, and I would strongly recommend extensive developments towards that end. Signed, H. O. McClymont, Mining Engineer."

SMALL AMOUNT OF MONEY NEEDED.

As Mr. McClymont says in his report, only a small sum of money is needed to complete the development work and put these mines on a dividend paying basis.

We want to raise about $10,000 from the sale of shares, this money to be used to complete the work just specified.

A very short time will be required to raise this amount of money for this magnificent property, and then the sale of stock will be discontinued.

READ THIS CAREFULLY.

The present price of the stock is 10 cents per share.

The price will be advanced to 15 cents per share very soon, and then 20 cents per share.

The company reserves the right to withdraw the stock from the market without notice.

TWO YEARS AGO—AND NOW.

We believe that there are 30 chances in 100 of the LARDEAU MINES proving a BONANZA. One property in the vicinity of the Lardeau was recently sold for $800,000 cash, and stock in addition. Two years ago it was not nearly as good a prospect as the Lardeau is today.

The LARDEAU MINES, LIMITED, is a small, close corporation and the profits will consequently be large to each stockholder.

Those who are fortunate enough to buy stock at the low price of 10 cents can calculate on an annual income of $125.50 from an investment of $100.00 in other words, you would get your principal back and $25.50 besides every year.

YOU CAN PAY IN INSTALMENTS.

Write us for further particulars.

We will allow you to purchase a block of stock and pay for it in monthly instalments. Before your stock is paid for you will see it double in value—perhaps more.

We urge prompt action, because of the approaching increase of 15 cents per share, which may occur any day. The safest thing to do is to send us $10, which will reserve the stock you desire at 10 cents per share. Then you can investigate the matter carefully and fully and if you are not completely satisfied we will return your money.

STOCK MARKETS

Situation Expressed by Town Topics

New York, Nov. 19.—The market superstructure for the greatest bull campaign which this country has ever seen is now being laid on the best fundamental basis that ever existed in the United States. The Wall street bargain counter is open; the speculative bear tide is going to the extreme, and just as reasonably as prices are declining so will they advance later. In the face of the most bullish conditions prospective and present stocks have fallen below the lowest level of the year and are intrinsically cheap. Sixteen of the most active trading stocks of the list have declined from fifteen to thirty-four points, or an average of more than twenty-two points, which exceeds the extent of the advance from the level at which the recent bull market was inaugurated. Investors and speculators with ample margin are foolish to consider whether they can get stocks two or three points cheaper. They should buy now and hold. Ignore bear rumors henceforth, save those as conclusively demonstrating themselves, for the shorts will fill the street with gloomy talk so that they may cover. The bear has had the bull by the horns, he will get his tail twisted soon. This line of advice seems to us to be remarkably good and emanates from one of the best Wall street authorities. Stocks are certainly low. Railway business is unprecedented. Think of the Pennsylvania and other great system being absolutely blocked with traffic. Look at the Manhattan report just issued. It shows an increase of daily passenger traffic amounting to 80,000, a gain of eight per cent. in gross earnings, and the further remarkable gain of nearly fifty per cent. in net earnings. This foreshadows what electricity is going to accomplish for the Manhattan treasury. No wonder the stock is so strong. Railway reports are all unanimous as to great earnings, unprecedented business and brilliant outlook for the future. It is a time to take courage and not a time to lose it. The coming market is bound to ultimately be a good one—all signs point that way—while the present low prices afford the opportunity of purchasing cheaply prior to the coming upward movement.

KERN COUNTY (SUNSET DISTRICT) OIL COMPANIES PAID

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS IN AUGUST ALONE

MORGAN IN THE OIL INDUSTRY--NEW YORK FINANCIER AT THE HEAD OF A $20,000,000 COMPANY TO EXPLOIT CALIFORNIA FIELDS

Bakersfield, Cal., Sept. 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan is about to identify himself with the oil business in California. On October 12, or a few days later, surveyors will be put into the field, and will run lines to the ocean from Sunset, Coaling, McKittrick, Midway and Kern River fields to determine by which route it is most feasible to transport oil to tide water. The surveys will run over the coast range at a number of points, and also will go down the San Joaquin valley parallel with the line of the Standard.

A company having a capitalization of $5,000,000 has been organized for the construction of lines, pumping stations, storage tanks, and the like. Mr. Morgan and his associates have also formed a separate company, capitalized at $20,000,000, half of which will be invested in proven ground and the other half turned into a reserve fund.

It is stated that the Morgan syndicate will be prepared to handle 2,000,000 barrels the first year, and will increase that amount at the rate of 1,000,000 a year until the whole demand of the market is met.

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY own and control a large tract of absolutely oil proven asphalt land in the very heart of the best oil producing land of Kern County, California, the district where flowing wells are situated. We have a bed of Liquid Asphalt underlying a portion of our lands. Our property is situated right at Sunset Station. A new line of railway is surveyed and will be constructed in a very short time, putting us not only in touch with Eastern cities, but in touch with tide-water. This, in addition to the railroad facilities we now have. Remember that we own our land—it is paid for and entirely free from debt.

ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL CO.'S GIGANTIC TRACT

will be developed and should prove a formidable rival for the new company.

PROFESSOR DR. RUD J. SCHIMPER, Analytical and Expert Chemist, of St. Paul, makes the following statement relative to the composition, what can be produced and the estimated profits of the Sunset Crude Oil. A copy of the original certificate can be seen at the office of the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co., which is in substance as follows:

"This is to certify that the undersigned, Dr. Rudolph J. Schimper, Chemist expert, member of Parisian Academy, according to analysis made from the crude oil furnished me by the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company, I find the following valuable products and with each beg to submit my estimate of its value:

1. LIQUID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 1,800 lbs. of liquid rubber, value of which is from 25c. per lb. and up. (Estimated value $450.00.)
2. SOLID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls) will produce 1,700 lbs. of solid rubber, value of which is from 50c. upwards. (Estimated value $450.00.)
3. FUEL BRIQUETTES—2000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 2,000 lbs. (1 ton) of fuel briquettes, which, according to government tests made, is equivalent to two tons of best anthracite coal. (Estimated value $22.00)
4. ASPHALTUM—2,000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce ½ ton of asphaltum, value $25 to $35 per ton. 25 gal. of lubricating oil, value 50c. per gal. and upward. 40 gal. illuminating oil, value 10c per gal. and up. 60 gal. of distilled oil, value 5c. per gal. and upward. (Estimated value $54.50.)
5. SOAP—2000 lbs. (1 ton) of crude oil and filling will produce over 2,000 lbs. of soap, value 3c. per lb. and upward. (Estimated value $60.00.)

Id my opinion many other valuable products can be obtained from the oil of that famous field.

Respectfully, DR. R. J. SCHIMPER, Chemist Expert."

THIS goes to show the immense profits that will accrue from our products when refined. We expect to commence Building Our Refinery in the very near future. The sale of the next allotment of stock will be made for that purpose. The largest flowing wells in California were brought in adjoining our property and their stock was taken off the market. We employ the best drillers who report rapid progress on our wells and we expect to bring in gushers equal, if not to excel any in the Sunset field. Our General Manager, Superintendent and Drillers, all are experienced oil men. The officers of our company are all thorough, competent and efficient men who have always made a success of their undertaking in life and who will see that the welfare of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company is furthered, portected and promoted to the most advantageous extent possible.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS SHOULD BE PAID STOCKHOLDERS.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS should be paid to the stockholders of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company when their property is fully developed, their refinery equipped and in full operation. ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS was paid by Kern County Oil Companies during the month of August alone.

SIX MILLION BARRELS is the consuming capacity of the Southern Pacific Railway engines, which are now equipped for burning oil. Outside of this consider other railway lines, smelters, factories, steamships, stationery engines, which are all heavy consumers of fuel oil and last but not least, hotels and private dwellings are falling in line with the procession in the use of fuel oil.

A GOOD REASON WHY YOU Should Invest in the stock of St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company. More fortunes have been made in oil than any other business. Consider the immense amount of money the Standard Oil Company has made for its fortunate stockholders, and the California oil companies have done better in proportion to their capitalization than the Standard Oil Company. Here is what $100 has accomplished for those who invested that amount in the following California companies in the beginning of their career:

Home Whittier $1,000 on an investment of $100.

Kern returned $2,200 on an investment of $100.

Peerless returned $1,800 on an investment of $100.

Dillon returned $2,500 on an investment of $100.

New York returned $30,000 on an investment of $100.

Union returned $150,000 on an investment of $100.

Home returned $50,000 on an investment of $100.

THERE is no reason in the world why the St. Paul and Sunset Company's oil holdings and property, when developed and handled, should not bring like returns

CONTRARY to the general supposition the earth is the repository of all mineral wealth. When it is known and demonstrated beyond a question of a doubt where its wealth reposes and you put your money up to take it out, your money is invested. Hence you are an investor, not a speculator. A proven oil producing property does not draw its profits from the people but creates new wealth. It is therefore an investment.

WE CLAIM NOTHING WE CANNOT PROVE TO BE TRUE

BRIEFLY, OUR PROPOSITION IS THIS: THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY

owns its immense tract of proven Oil Land—without a penny of incumbrance. The property is located in the most wonderful and richest oil producing section in the world, in the famous Sunset District of Kern County, California. Other Oil Companies in Kern county have paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in dividends—and today their stock cannot be bought at any price. These companies in many instances have less property, and in some cases are only lessors, not owning refinery, tanks, lines, etc.

A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THIS STOCK WILL BE SOLD AT 35c. PER SHARE, PAR VALUE $1.00.

BUY NOW. THIS STOCK WILL BE ADVANCED TO 50c WITHIN THE NEXT 30 DAYS

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY will erect their own refinery, etc. are now owners of the property they are developing, employ the best drillers in the whole State of California. The manager is an old and experienced oil man who has been connected with large California companies. The officers are all successful and reliable business men, who are investors—the same as every other stockholder. And the company, with plenty of ready capital, proposes to make the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co. a leader in the field and to develop their property to the fullest extent that money and brains will permit.

Removed

Dr. Edson A. Titus who has been located at Hotel National has removed to Parlours at Mrs. Chamberlain's, 322 Water street, corner of Charlotte, where he will continue to teach and treat by Scientific Massage.

A Snap in Paper

Five quires of good quality writing paper, either plain or ruled, for only 20 cents This paper is as good as paper sold elsewhere at 10 cents quire. Times Bookstore, Market Block.

The Millbrook Bank

The branch of the Bank of Toronto which has been opened at Millbrook will be officered as follows:—Manager, Mr. A. E. A. Smith, formerly accountant at Peterborough; teller, Mr. Harry A. Grubbe, who got his first experience in the office here, where his father, Mr. R. W. Grubbe, filled the position of teller for many years. The junior clerk in Millbrook will be Mr. Welsh, a local man.

The Direct Line

From Peterborough to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and the South is via Grand Trunk and Lehigh Valley Railroad. Route of the "Black Diamond Express." Pullman sleepers and dining car service from Toronto. Everything first class. Scenery and service unsurpassed. Call at W. Bunton's ticket office Peterborough, for tickets, Pullman and further particulars.

Prize to Our Subscribers

Subscribers to the Daily and also to the Weekly Times who will pay up arrears and also pay a year in advance, will be presented with a magnificent picture of the Coronation of Their Majesties, King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra—(size 22x28, printed in 14 colors). They are splendid prints, and will serve as mementos of that great historical event. The picture is now to be seen at The Times Bookstore.

Changed His Location

Mr. Chas. Dusty, who has been in charge of the bar at the Palace Cafe during the absence of the proprietor, Mr. J. M. Brooks, in the North country has accepted a situation in the Queen's hotel, and in future will dispense liquid refreshments over the bar of that hotel. Mr. Dusty is a very popular bartender, and no doubt will increase the patronage of the Queen's very materially.

Capitularly Honoured

There was a large attendance at the regular convocation of Corinthian Royal Arch Chapter No. 36, Tuesday evening, when several distinguished companions were present. M. Ex-Comp. W. Gibson, Grand Z., of Beamsville, and Rt.-Ex. Comp. A. Shaw, Grand H., of Kingston, complimented the officers of the Chapter on the exemplification of the work of the evening. Much disappointment was felt on the inability of Rt. Ex-Comp O. H. M. Baker, Grand Superintendent, of Lindsay, to be present as he was to pay his official visit to the chapter. At the close of the chapter a pleasant hour was spent in the dining room, where an excellent spread had been prepared.

First Canadian Sugar

The Times yesterday was in receipt of a little blue cardboard box filled with granulated sugar, "the first ever made in Canada from sugar beets grown in Canada." The sample came from Berlin, Ontario, and is the product of the Ontario Sugar Company's factory recently built at that place. The article presents a clean, bright appearance and will no doubt find favor with the Canadian public. A new industry is always a good thing for a country and the success of this particular venture should mean much for Berlin and the farmers of the surrounding district who raise the necessary sugar beets. We may expect, in the event of the Berlin factory proving a money maker to see similar establishments spring up in other parts of the province. A great beet sugar industry is under way among the Mormons of Alberta, and Canada may yet be able to furnish the entire domestic market with home-grown, home made sugar. Peterborough is also to have a sugar factory which will be one of the largest and best equipped on the continent.

AFTER A WOMAN

P. C. Stewart Follows Miss Perry to Golden Lake

About a year ago a Miss Perry, hailing from Belleville, made her appearance in town and took up her residence at Mr. Samuel Johnston's, McDonell street. A few weeks ago she disappeared from town, and at the same time a watch, chain, gold bracelets, pair of kid gloves and several other articles passed to some place other than where they used to be. The matter was placed in the hands of the police, and police constable Stewart, who has the reputation of being a great lady catcher was detailed on the case. He sustained his reputation by arresting Miss Perry at Golden Lake yesterday, and he will arrive this morning with his prisoner who will likely be given a hearing at the police court today.

SNOWDEN PARTY HOME

They Shot Twelve Fine Deer and Brought Nine Home

The Snowden hunting party, comprising Wm. Snowden, Argyle Blade, G. M. Rogers, Martin McFadden, Samuel Wray, Chas. Curtis, Joseph Pentland, T. E. Boddy, Larry Steele and W. B. Hartshorn returned yesterday from a two weeks' hunting expedition near the Georgian Bay. They had very poor luck at first, three of the party returning to Peterboro. The second week the hunters had lots of sport and succeeded in killing twelve deer. Yesterday nine of the deer arrived on the Toronto train, and they were on the whole the finest specimens that have reached Peterborough this season.

Wolves Kill Hounds in Muskoka

The Uppington Club, of Uppington, Muskoka, lost a couple of valuable hounds this season by wolves. It is seldom that wolves come so far south in any quantity. The hounds were attacked on one of the deer runs, within sight of one of the party, and literally torn to pieces, although the hunter emptied his rifle upon the wolves. Next morning the Buckhorn Club, one of whose members had also lost a hound, went in search of the wolves, and surrounded them in a swamp two miles from Uppington. They killed them all. The Uppington Club consists of John Crozier, Captain, and James Thompson, hunter, and cook, of Uppington; J. Beatty, Toronto; Art. Crozier and Mark Wilkinson, St. Mary's, and James McKay, Thomas and William Kirk, Uppington. During their nine days' shooting the party obtained sixteen deer.

SPECULATORS IN OIL

$2,200 of Lakefield Money Floated in Oil

There is some anxiety in certain speculative quarters of the progressive village of Lakefield regarding a recent investment made in the Texas Oil Wells. It seems that Mr. T. H. Benson, late manager of the Linton Bank, was the chief promoter of the scheme. Two gentlemen were sent down to Texas where the oil wells, which the Company had in view of purchasing, were situated. Dr. Baker, one of the gentlemen who went south on the inspection, advised the purchase of the property which was to cost $2,200. This amount was raised by Lakefield subscribers and supposed to have been paid to the owners of the oil wells. It is now alleged in Lakefield that only $1,100 of this was handed over and that the remaining $1,100 is not accounted for. Dr. Baker, who will be able to throw some light on the matter, is in the back country shooting, and his arrival home is anxiously awaited, when it is expected that all matters will be satisfactorily explained.

—A new barber shop will be opened at 144 Simcoe street this week. Mr. A. Haskell who is well and favorably known in Peterborough, will be the proprietor.

FOOD TO USE

When Doctor is Not Convenient

Many people dislike to call in a doctor until it is absolutely necessary; frequently a change of food will work wonders.

A young lady, in Russellville, Ky., says:—"I was taken ill six weeks ago, and could not take solid food; was only allowed to eat soup and milk. In about a week, I got so weak and nervous that I could not sleep. Father wanted to call in a doctor, but I objected, as I didn't feel I needed medicine as much as good food. The next day Father had to go to town, and brought back a package of Grape-Nuts with him, and I commenced to eat it twice a day in milk. I would get hungry for it from one time to next. In a few nights, I could sleep soundly all night, and in two weeks I was up, and had actually gained flesh, and was soon as strong as before I got sick.

I would not be without Grape-Nuts now for anything, and my friends comment on my looks. I tell them I owe it to Grape-Nuts, and recommend it to all who complain with stomach trouble, which is the general complaint in this neighborhood." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE PETERBOROUGH PROTESTANT HOME

The Annual Meeting and Election of Officers

THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT

Many Aged and Infirm Find Shelter and are Carefully Looked After in the Home—Two Deaths During the Year

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Protestant Home, held on Nov. 18th, the following report was presented, which shows the Home to be well managed and doing a good work:

In presenting the annual report of the Peterborough Protestant Home, the committee are grateful for the privilege of being used to do this work for the Heavenly Father. There is very little to report other than the coming and going of those who seek shelter, some for the remaining years of their life, others during a period of trouble or adversity. During the winter the Home was filled to its utmost capacity. Quite a number of old men, who were too infirm to work in the winter, were sheltered, but these went to work in the spring. Already applications are coming in from just such old men. Altogether twenty-seven found a comfortable home, the ages ranging from thirteen months to eighty-eight years. Two of the inmates died during the year, both in advanced years. Miss Fraser, the matron, continues to give satisfaction, and her task is not a light one, for it is not always easy to keep peace and harmony among so many. Our sincere thanks are due to the clergymen and physicians who give so kindly of their time to the relief of the inmates, also we desire to thank the editors of the papers for inserting notice of our work gratuitously and to all who in any way contribute to the welfare and comfort of the Home. Year after year we ask through the press and in other ways for more ladies to become interested in the work and be members of the committee of management, but, as as yet, there has been no response. The same ladies have taken the work for many years and some of them feel that others should be ready to take their places. M. Miller, secretary.

Officers were elected for the year as follows: President, Mrs. Vernon; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Hall; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. J. H. McWilliams; treasurer, Miss Rogers; secretary, Mrs. Miller.

Nervous and Sleepless

There is just one cure and that is plenty of food for the blood and nerves, which is best supplied in Ferrozone, that which no blood builder, nerve tonic, or strength producer is better. Ferrozone promotes healthy digestion, which results in improved nutrition. The blood grows rich and red, furnishes stability to the entire system, and the store of nerve force and energy increases daily. A rebuilding of the constitution, new spirits, health and strength all come from the use of Ferrozone. This marvelous renovator is sold by Druggists for 50c. a box, or six boxes for $2.50. Just within her grasp is safety—but she does not see it; she is looking the wrong way. There's many a woman struggling in a sea of disease who is doing the same thing—looking the wrong way—snatching at medicinal straws when the life buoy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is within her reach. Many a woman has testified: "I know I should not be alive to-day but for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription." This famous medicine establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

Weak and sick women, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I take pleasure in writing to let you know the great good I received from your 'Favorite Prescription' and your 'Pleasant Pellets,'" says Mrs. Nora Gaddie, of Rio, Hart Co., Ky. "I took seven or eight bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one or two vials of the 'Pellets.' Think I would have been in my grave had it not been for your medicines. It has been about four months since I took the medicine. I was all run down, had loss of appetite could not sleep at night, was nervous, had backache, black spots on my limbs, and sick headache all the time. I have not had sick headache since I took your medicine."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure dizziness and sick headache.

THE POPE OF ROME BEFORE THE KING

The Incident in Toronto Creates a Feeling of Mild Indignation

The Toronto Globe Takes the Matter Up and Speaks Its Mind Fearlessly

Toronto, Nov. 21.—The banquet at McConkey's on Tuesday night, to Monsignor Falconi, at which the toast of the Pope preceded that of the King, has created a feeling of indignation amongst many Protestants in this city and throughout the country. Fortunately or unfortunately, the press of the country, on account of party, are evidently afraid to take the matter up. With the exception of the Globe, so far as your correspondent can see, no prominent newpapers has taken the matter up. As your readers already know, the affair was given under the Canadian Catholic Union, and was presided over by Mr. Justice McMahon, president of the Union, amongst those present being Premier Ross, Mayor Howland, the members of the press, and many dignitaries and prominent citizens.

The chairman proposed the toast of "The Holy Pontiff, Pope Leo XIII.,' in an eloquent speech, following with the toast of "The King." When the toast of "The Corporation of the City of Toronto," was reached, Mayor Howland said: "I have joined with you in drinking the toast of his Holiness, a friend of the British Empire, a friend of the peace of the world, one whose name and fame are respected by all creeds. I would have preferred it should not have been followed by the toast of His Majesty the King. I think it would have been better if the relations between the Church and State had not thus been expressed in this city and under the British flag. I could not refuse to join following that in drinking the toast of his Most Gracious Majesty."

The remarks of the Mayor were received with consternation, and for a few moments no one spoke, when the Archbishop of Toronto broke the silence, but did not refer to the point taken by Mr. Howland.

Yesterday's Globe editorially says:

"The dinner to Mgr. Falconio, Apostolic Delegate to Canada, was a well conceived tribute to a gentleman who has commended himself to all with whom he has come in contact. His graceful words, complimentary of Canada and its people, are undoubtedly sincere and Canadians of all classes will regret that a gentleman who had fitted himself so happily into our life has had other duties delegated to him. That being the case, it must be considered as important that this mutually pleasant gathering was somewhat marred by an injudicious transposition in the toast list. In this country of free opinion no individual need explain why he prefers to drink one man's health rather than another's. It is a matter of choice with him. But the custom of honoring the head of the nation first among the toasts at a public banquet is so nearly universal that it must have occasioned surprise, among some of the guests at least, to find that it was departed from at this dinner. There could be no argument that it was merely a private affair. A dinner to which the Premier of the Province of Ontario and the Mayor of Toronto were invited, and at which the press was represented, could not be regarded as anything but public, and to ask these gentlemen to honor the toast of the King second to that of any other person was to put them in an embarrassing position, and one which true hospitality would have forbidden."

CANADIAN PEAT FUEL WILL NOW BE EXPLOITED

A Buffalo Paper Says That It Will be Much Cheaper Than Coal

Buffalo, Nov. 21.—Yesterday's News had the following:

Edwin N. Gunsaulus, United States Consul at Toronto, has made a report to his Government at Washington that experiments perseveringly continued for some time in Canada have now resulted in the economical production of a saleable peat fuel, highly satisfactory for domestic purposes. The success of this new industry in Canada is due to two individuals — Joseph M. Shuttleworth, of Brantford, Ont., and Alex. Dobson, of Beaverton, Ont, in association with the Peat Machinery Supply Company, Limited, of Toronto, and the Peat Development Syndicate, Limited, of Brantford, and it is satisfactory to note that conclusions do not rest on mere laboratory experiments, but on results demonstrated at practical plants, turning out fuel in commercial quantities. The machinery in operation at Beaverton is reported by the secretary of the Ontario Bureau of Mines as "withstanding the test of steady usage, producing sufficient fuel for the town, with some over for shipment," and this official says, further; "With this plant in successful operation, very substantial evidence is furnished of the advance of the industry to a commercial basis."

Peat fuel has been made at the property of the Peat Industries, Limited, near Welland, and at the Brunner bog, by the Stratford Peat Company, but in both cases the permanent equipment of the plants has been wisely deferred until, by sufficiently long usage, selection can be made among the several appliances available. This end has been served by the operations of the past few months, and the coming spring, it appears, will witness very general activity in peat fuel manufacturing in Canada.

The reports of engineers of high standing in the Dominion agree in the opinion that methods and appliances are now available whereby peat briquettes may be produced, ready for shipment, for a maximum manufacturing cost of $1.50 per ton, and probably for considerable less in plants of large capacity.

The importance of this information, based on actual experiments of extensive supply and manufacturing cost, is very great to the people of the Dominion and the United States as well, and the evidence of success in Canada will stimulate action in American peat fields where the substitute for coal is greatly needed for its cheapness and cleanliness for domestic purposes.

ITEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE AND LETTER

Lisbon, Nov. 21—There are persistent reports here that King Edward will return the visit of King Carlos and will come here for a visit next spring.

London, Nov. 21—At the next session of Parliament, Mr. Gerald Balfour, president of the Board of Trade will introduce a by-law for the improvement of the port of London. It will empower the expenditure of £1,000,000.

This amount, however, will be probably only the first installment, as the commission that recently inquired into the matter estimated the necessary expenditure at £7,000,000.

Montreal, Nov. 19 — "It is utterly useless for Canada to try to have the embargo on Canadian cattle to England removed, for it will be impossible to succeed."

Such was the statement made at the Windsor yesterday by Lieut-General J. Winburn Laurie, M.P., of London, Eng. Lieut.-Gen. Laurie, who was second in command during the Northwest Rebellion, was formerly a member of Parliament, for Shelburne, N.S., in which country he still owns a large stock farm. Since becoming a member of the British Parliament he has taken a leading interest in all matters of especial interest to Canada.

"No matter what Canada may do," Lieut-General Laurie went on to say, "the embargo will remain. It will not make any difference that you should be able to show that there is not any disease among the Canadian cattle.

"Disease has spread in the past and the amnner in which the Board of Health has closed down on the farmers of the district in which disease was found and prevented them from sending any cattle to market for at least three months, meant ruin to the farer.

"The English farmer must be protected. It is not sufficient, as many think in Canada, to kill the diseased animals. Every precaution must afterwards be taken to prevent the disease spreading, and the only way is to prevent the cattle from being moved from one place to another.

"But then it must not be htought that in insisting on such an embargo the English farmer is trying to secure protection for his prices. As a matter of fact, all beef killed in England is considered English beeg and it does not make any difference whether the cattle has just been brought into the country or not."

Simla, Nov. 21—The British expedition under Gen. Egerton against the rebellious Wazaris on the Afghan frontier entered the Kabul Khel country yesterday.

A large section of the Waziris became alarmed and sent representatives to the British commander to ask for terms of peace.

The fourth column on the Waziri experition has met with determined opposition. The commander of the column, Col. Tennochy, has been badly wounded. Major Beresford, the second in command, has asked for reinforcements. The Political Officer at Gumatti has promised to send all available assistance to him.

NEW YORK CRIPPLES — AWAIT DR. LORENZ

The Great Austrian Surgeon Will Operate in the City

PATHETIC RUSH OF SUFFERERS

Who are Nearly all Children Born Deformed —The Great Specialist Will Operate Free

New York,, Nov. 21.—Fifty crippled children were taken by 300 mothers and friends to the Cornell University clinic at First avenue and twenty-seventh street yesterday afternoon to be examined by Dr. Newton M. Shaffer, professor or orthopaedic surgery. The object of the preliminary examination was to select patients to be operated on by Dr. Adolph Lorenz, the University of Vienna specialist.

Dr. Lorenz is in San Francisco and is expected to reach this city on Dec. 2. Until his arrival cripples will be examined at the dispensary by Dr. Shaffer and his assistants, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

The dispensary reception room presented an interesting and pathetic spectacle yesterday when the cribbles hobbled in on crutches or were carried in by their friends. One girl asked an attendant if Dr. Lorenz would operate upon any one over the age of twenty-one. She said she had heard that the operation was hopeless if the patient was over ten. Her sister was 21 years old and had been suffering from hip disease for only a year. She was told to bring her sister next Monday.

Mrs. Charles Schmidt of 193 Stockholm street, Brooklyn, brought her nine-year-old son Edward for examination. Mrs. Schmidt said that her husband, who is a machinist, had spent $300 trying to have his son cured. They had spent all the money her husband had earned, except barely enough to live on.

A fourteen-year-old girl named Rachel Decker came to the clinic on crutches She worked in a factory before she contracted hip disease, four years ago. Since then she has been studying stenography when her health would permit. When she reached the dispensary she was disappointed to find the room full. She had hoped to be examined and excused in time to attend the afternoon session at the school, but she took her place in the line and gave up the recitation.

The faith the patients had in the great specialist was almost superstitious. They expected to find him on hand ready to operate. The friends of the cripples had heard that no knives were to be used and that the cures were made by manipulation. They could not understand it and talked in whispers about the "healing touch."

When asked about the specialist's visit in this city, Dr. Shaffer said;

"I wish the students of this university to have an opportunity of seeing the greatest exponent of bloodless orthopaedic surgery while at work. I also wish to arouse a greater degree of interest in this branch of surgery, especially in the poorer districts.

"A certain fatalism is prevalent among the poorer classes, which leads them to look upon any strange affliction as a mark of God's displeasure.

"In his profession Dr. Lorenz has subordinated operations to mechanical work. The operations he will perform here will be confined to congenital dislocations of the hip. However, we shall examine everybody who comes, and even those whom Dr. Lorenz will not operate may receive great benefit as a result of the preliminary examination."

Dr. Shaffer was asked if hip diseases could be permanently cured when they were the results of accidents. In reply he said;

"In only a few cases is the disease the result of accident. It is often supposed to be, especially, if it makes itself apparent after a fall of some kind. In reality, most of the patients already had it in a latent ofrm. The best age at which to operate is between four and ten. However, I should not advise any one to stay away from an examination because he is over ten. Of course no hopeless cases will be brought before Dr. Lorenz."

The Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled Children has received over two hundred applications for examination.

TO MINE MOLYBDENITE

A $6,000,000 Company Being Formed to Operate in Haliburton

Toronto Star: It is probable that a year will see the establishment of another branch of mining in Haliburton county. The new branch is the production of molybdenite, which is used in tempering steel, and which effects a great saving on the usual process of using silver. Mr. C. M. McArthur, of Fenelon Falls, was in the city on Wednesday on his way to Chicago, accompanied by C. E. Taylor, of the Windy City, and these two gentlemen expect shortly to float a company capitalized at $2,000,000 to work their claims in Haliburton. Their claims number 22, covering about 3,000 acres.

PLENTY OF COAL

Canada to be Taken Care of says the Railway Company

Buffalo, Nov. 20.—J. J. McWilliams, local sales agents for the D., L. & W. whose office is in the Dun building said this noon:

"While coal consumers cannot get all the coal they need, there is no need of anyone suffering for want of it. At present the lake trade is unusually heavy. The coal must be delivered to the lake ports before the close of navigation, as there are many that are not reached by railroad at all. When this trade is over, more coal than ever will be thrown into Buffalo for local consumption. But of course Canada will have to be taken care of just as soon as the lake trade closes."

NOT TO TAKE OVER RHODESIA

Official Denial That This is One of the Objects of Chamberlain's Trips

London, Nov. 21.—The Exchange Telegraph Company says it has been officially authorized to state that the reports that one of the main objects of Mr. Chamberlain's visit to South Africa is to arrange for the Government taking over the territories of the British Chartered Company and also for the administration of Rhodesia as a Crown Colony are unauthorized and untrue. Mr. Chamberlain does not expect to be able to visit Rhodesia in the time at his disposal.

GREAT BRITAIN'S DEBT

One Hundred and Thirty Million Pounds on Account of War

London, Nov. 21.—An official return issued by the British Government shows that the national debt on March 31 last was £768,443,386, of which £130,000,000 represented the cost of the South African war. Since 1836 war has added nearly £200,000,000 to Britain's debt. In 1836 the debt was £863,473,697, a far greater burden then, when the national wealth population, etc., are taken into account, than it would be now. The debt reached its lowest point in the last sixty years in 1899, when it totalled £635,040,965. An interesting fact gleaned from the return is the multiplication of the value of the Suez Canal shares, that splendid investment of the late Earl of Beaconsfield. Purchased in 1876 for £3,532,040, they are now valued at £27,336,000.

LORD SHOLTO SAYS SHE'S INSANE

Has His Mother-in-Law Arrested for Trying to Burn His Home

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—Mrs. Margaret Mooney, mother-in-law of Lord Sholto Douglass, has been arrested for insanity at the instance of her son. He says she tried to burn the house down and has also threatened to exterminate her family.

Mrs. Mooney gained much notoriety when her daughter married Lord Sholto, as she gave reporters very picturesque interviews. Lord Sholto tried the saloon business in Spokane, but when his father, the Marquis of Queensberry, died, he was recalled to England. He celebrated his departure by inviting the public to his saloon and setting up free drinks until all the liquor was consumed. It was a red-letter night for Spokane bummers.

DUST CLOUD IN AUSTRALIA

ONE RESULT OF THE SEVEN-YEAR DROUGHT THERE

Gale Sweeps Over the Parched Land Carrying Up Large Quantities of Red Dust—Day Turned Into Night—Lightning Accompanies the Storm but no Rain

Sydney, N.S.W., Nov. 21—the southern parts of Australia have been visited by unprecedently violent dust storms, the dryness which has prevailed for seven years reaching its climax this year. The terribly destructive drought has destroyed the herbage in large areas, laying the land bare.

A heavy gale yesterday raised immense quantities of dust from these tracts and drove vast clouds of red powdered earth far and wide. The atmosphere was oppressive and it was hardly possible to breathe. The darkness was intense while the dust clouds were passing.

The inhabitants of numerous towns were badly frightened by the darkness and hid in their houses. Artificial light was necessary in the streets of Melbourne, where there was also much ball lightning which ignited several buildings.

It was very dark in Sydney. The clouds extended twelve miles seawadr. The railroads in some places were blocked by heaps of dust. After the wind subsided the atmosphere was brilliantly pink and the temperature fell suddenly. No rain has fallen.

MARRIED IN DENVER

Miss Nellie Young Formerly of Peterborough the Bride

Dr. Robert Wellington Frazier of Central City and Miss Nellie Young, of Peterborough, Canada, were married on Wednesday evening (Nov. 12th,) at 8 o'clock at the residence of the cousin of the bride, Mrs. L. D. DuBois, 2844 Downing avenue. The witnesses were composed of near relatives and a few intimate friends. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Barry, S.J., of the Sacred Heart. The bride, who is a brunette of graceful figure and handsome features, was gowned in white organdie and Valenciennes lace. The wedding march was played by Mrs. DuBois. Master Alfred DuBois carried the ring in an Easter lily, and Mr. W. K. DuBois gave the bride away. The official witnesses to the wedding contract were Mr. Richard and F. Johnson, of Birmington, Ala., and Mrs. W. K. DuBois. After the wedding the bride cut the wedding cake and refreshments were served. The young couple are spending a few days with the parents of the groom at Alma Colo., after which they will permanently reside at Central City. Dr. Frazier met his bride last winter during her visit to Mrs. DuBois.—Denver News.

THE INDIAN DURBAR WILL COST MILLIONS

Preparations for the Kings Coronation in Delhi Progressing at a Great Rate

London, Nov. 21.—The excitement over the Indian durbar continues. It is estimated that nearly 50,000 British and Americans will visit Delhi for the occasion. The enormous prizes charged, however, have caused many people to abandon the idea of being present. It will cost two persons with two servants $3,000 in travelling expenses alone. The cost of the stay of visitors at Delhi can not be fully estimated. The hotels there are already charging eight times their usual tariff and the available houses of the town have all been quickly hired at from $30,000 to $45,000 apiece.

The Indian princes are sparing no expense in taking steps to return the hospitality which was extended to them in England at the time of the coronation. Owing to the scarcity of houses some rude huts have been built among the camps, and although they will only contain fire places and a few simple comforts, extravagant prices are demanded for them. They will be of three classes. The first will cost $100 daily for boarding and lodging for each person and $100 will be charged daily for carriage hire. Some of the travelers are taking their own carriages and horses.

The most envied of the Americans going to the durbar is Mrs. Adair, who starts at the end of the month. She will be Lord Kitchener's guest and will act as his hostess, entertaining a very large party invited by the British general. Mrs. Adair is taking a large number of her own servants, including her chef. After the durbar Mrs. Adair will visit Lord Curzon of Kedleston, the viceroy, and Lady Curzon.

Another American who will take a prominent part in the durbar is Mrs. "Jack" Leslie, whose husband has just been appointed on the staff of the Duke of Connaught, who will represent King Edward at the Indian ceremonies.

HARD TIMES AHEAD FOR OLD ENGLAND

Reterning Volunteers Must Have Work and Settling of War Disturbs Politics

The Conditions of Employment are Much Worse Than They Were a Year Ago.

London, Nov. 21—Reports of coming hard times in England this winter continue to cause uneasiness. Even if work were plentiful the poor would have a hard time. A four-pound loaf of bread which last winter cost 9 cents, this winter costs 11 cents. This is due to the war tax on flour, and these same war taxes are felt in a smaller degree in regard to other food. Then coal is from 75 cents to $1 a ton higher this year than last, because of the coal strike in Pennsylvania.

But conditions of employment are already much worse than last year. As long ago as the first of October, of 221 trade unions, with an aggregate membership of 553,870, no fewer than 27,000 were out of work, about 5 per cent. In ship-building the percentage of unemployed is 9, and these percentages are rapidly increasing.

For those who remain wages are coming down with a rush. Recent reductions have affected 110,000; some within a few weeks to the extent of 10 per cent. under what they formerly earned. It is probable that these conditions will grow worse as winter advances, and that there will be great suffering and destitution.

Already religious and charitable organizations are straining every nerve to meet the expected pinch. Lord Meath, who is president of the Church army, a Church of England organization on the model of the Salvation army, has just issued an appeal in which he says.

"A hard winter with bad trade and general distress seems inevitable. The King's illness, with the consequent postponement or curtailment of the coronation festivities, ruined many and dislocated trade. This has been closely followed by the return from South Africa of large number of Reservists and time-expired men, who are thrown upon the already overcrowded labor market. Where the ex-soldier does not himself drift to the ranks of the unemployed, he frequently throws another out of work. The Church army with its wide system of labor homes all over the country, is a most sensitive barometer in such times of depression. The number of deserving unemployed turning to us for temporary assistance is unprecedented, and already overtaxes our funds and accommodation. Must we turn them from our doors?"

OFFICERS ELECTED

Peterborough Hockey Club Organized for the Season

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Hockey Club was held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday night. There was a good attendance. Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, president, occupied the chair, and among those present were the following:—A. W. McPherson, secretary-treasurer, Jas. McCabe, P. O. Dumble, G. E. Revel, H. M., Morden, F. McGill, H Rush, Dr. Bradd, F. A. Clarke, R. Brown R. H. Kells, K. Watson, J. W. Metheral, C. G. Graham, Dickson Hall, Roy Armstrong, W. Cavanagh, A. A. Hollingshead, W. O'Brien, R F. McWilliams, G. Comstock and others.

At the opening the president read a very nice address and Mr. Jas. McCabe presented Mr. McPherson with a beautiful gold watch with a suitable inscription thereon.

The presentation was made amid the wildest enthusiasm, and Mr. McPherson, made an appropriate reply in which he thanked the boys for their kind remembrance of him.

The secretary's report was then received and adopted.

The Treasurer's report showed that $3,177.63 has passed through the treasurer's hands, and that there was a balance on hand of $46.38.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Patrons and Patronesses—Hon and Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Mr. and Mrs. A. P Macdonald, Mr. and Mrs. John Crane.

Hon. President—Dr., Bradd.

President—H. R. H. Kenner.

1st Vice-President—W. A. Sanderson

Hon. Members—Messrs. W. J. Montgomery, W. A. Buchanan, Lionel King and F. D. Kerr.

Representatives to annual meeting of the O.H.A.—Messrs H. R. H Kenner, and A. W McPherson.

The meeting decided, amid much applause to nominate Mr. J. Ross Robertson, as president of the O.H.A.

Votes of thanks were tendered to the retiring officers of the club, to Mr. W. A. Buchanan for his services to the club, to the press for their support, and the Mayor for the use of the Council Chamber.

TWO MORE WEDDINGS

One in Peterborough and the Other in Otonabee Township

On Wednesday evening, at No. 95 Hunter street, Mr. George H. Panter, took upon himself the solemn vow to love, honor and obey Miss Minnie M. daughter of Mr. Charles Chambo. The bride was attired in a gown of ladies' cloth, trimmed with white silk, and was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. A. Hamilton. Miss Olive Chambo, sister of the bride was bridesmaid, while Mr. Lewis Deyman, of Lindsay, acted as groomsman. Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, of Ashburnham, performed the wedding ceremony, after which those present partook of an elaborate wedding breakfast. Mr. and Mrs. Panter will reside at 201 Townsend street, and The Times wishes them a long life of prosperity and happiness.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kemp, Otonabee township on Wednesday evening, Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of the George street Methodist church, pronounced the words that made Mr. Wilbert McMillan and Miss Fanny Kemp, man and wife. The bride was robed in a gown of white silk trimmed with chiffon and pearl passementerie, and was assisted by Miss Edna Pratt, who also wore a white silk dress trimmed with chiffon and pearl passementerie, while Mr. Herbert McMillan assisted the groom. Miss Etta Kemp and Master Will Pratt acted as flower girl and page respectively, with little Miss Neuma Pratt as ringbearer. After the wedding ceremony guests to the number of one hundred partook of the wedding dejeuner. The groom's present to the bride was a cheque for a handsome amount, while on the bridesmaid he bestowed a gold brooch set with pearls. May Mr. and Mrs. McMillan enjoy life's brightest joys.

ASKED TO TAKE $40,000 IN STOCKS

Sugar Factory Promoters at County Council

By-Law Proposed—The Finance Committee Have the Matter Under Consideration

The session of the County Council was continued yesterday.

Messrs. T. E. Bradburn and J. W. Garvin addressed the council on behalf of the Peterborough Beet Sugar Factory.

Mr. Bradburn explained that they would like to get the assistance of the council in regard to the growing of sugar beets. They were before them as an organized company at the present time. He made reference to the Wallaceburg and Berlin factories, and the success they had attained. He asked the council to assist the company by way of a bonus. He suggested that they take stock in the company to the extent of $40,000. He was satisfied it would be a good investment. If the municipalities around Wiarton and Wallaceburg could give bonuses of thirty and forty thousand dollars, surely Peterborough could do likewise, besides they were getting more for the money, as they would have stock in the company.

Mr. Garvin began by saying that he was a farmer for nine years himself, and continued to take a deep interest in farming. He then went on to recite the progress of the sugar beet industry in Germany and the United States, and later in Canada. In Michigan, the average profit to the farmer on sugar beets was $40.00 an acre. There would be no difficulty in getting the farmers to grow the beets as they have had the successful experience of western Ontario to guide them. The Peterborough Sugar Beet Company is in the business, not so much for what there is in it for the promoters, as for the benefit it would be to the country. Mr. Garvin then went into figures to show that the interest on $40,000 of debentures would be more than met by the payment of profit on the capital of the company, which should yield ten per cent. In fact there should be a slight balance to the credit of the county.

The promoters asked the council to pass a bylaw to be submitted to the electors next January.

Councillor Peck asked what the whole capital of the company would be and was told by Mr. Bradburn that it would be $250,000, and that it was proposed to erect a factory of the same capacity as the Berlin factory.

Several members of the county council expressed their opinion regarding the factory, among which was Mr. Fitzgerald who thought they should pass a by-law and submit it to the people on Jan. 1st. He thought that they should not throw cold water on the scheme. If they turned them down in the matter it would be poor encouragement for them when they went to the Peterborough Town Council for assistance.

Finally the matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

WAS THE PRESS AT FAULT

The Portuguese Minister at Paris has risen to say that his country has no intention, as has been alleged, to give up her colonies to either Britain, Germany or any other power, on any consideration. The speech was doubtless intended in support of Mr. Balfour's Guildhall statement that the Kaiser's visit to England has had no more than a family and social significance. It would be strange, however, if the London press, led by the Times, in thunderous muttering of editorial, should prove so "far from the fire" as to hesitate dislike of supposedly impending events which had no existence out of fairyland. As a matter of fact, the Portuguese colonies and their eventual disposition have been the subject of discussion in diplomatic circles and in magazines and the press for many years past. In the light of parliamentary books, blue, white and yellow, and in the utterances of those continental newspapers which are more or less officially inspired, or on which the Foreign Offices have a convenient string, it is possible for those who watch the political currents to tell the course of affairs with almost the same degree of certainty that an experienced pilot can steer a ship. It is highly improbable, therefore, that the London writers were entirely misled in their sign-writing, although the importance of disentangling the Emperor's visit to King Edward from the semblance of secret projects in which His Britannic Majesty might, in the public mind, be thought to concern himself, can well be understood, although it is equally understood by the butler informed that the King would not permit himself to be compromised in a matter so foreign to His Majesty's duties and responsibilities as the exchange or barter of territories. That is the business of the government, and the King's personal annoyance and desire to be set right can easily account for the repudiation of alleged present designs made by Mr. Balfour at Guildhall, and by the Portuguese government through the legation at Paris. Yet the leading papers which sounded the note of warning must have felt the need of awakening British attention to a political situation that has liklihoods surrounded with many perplexities and perils. It illustrates a prevailing anxiety, and is partly a recognition of the fact the Europe has never stewed more intensely than at present regarding the maintenance of the balance of power, with its great double and triple alliances, and their ever recurrent intrigues, distrusts and jealousies, and greed for ascendancy; with the Balkans once more seething in half-smothered fires, with Germany and Russia in locked horns across Asia Minor, the Persian frontiers under triple menace, and the Austrian Empire dangling at the thread of its aged Emperor's life. All these are matters of current comment by the ablest diplomatic writers of the day; and inasmuch as the German Kaiser is reputed as a statesman who permits no opportunity of health or pleasure seeking to pass without some timely stroke of business, it must have been thought a seasonable time to startle the British ear regarding events and designs, passing or impending, farther reaching in their bearings and consequences than even the Education Bill. Was the press at fault in so doing? We think not.

WHY MEN DON'T GO TO CHURCH

"The average American business man has outgrown the average preacher," says the Chicago Inter Ocean, in undertaking to explain why men are not going to church in these days to the extent they did in former times.

The specifications of the Chicago paper are that, "in trying to formulate religion by the rules and in the terms of science, many preachers have cut loose the ship of faith upon a boundless sea of mental speculation;" that "many preachers appear to think that men can be led to do right without having any definite principles by which to do right;" that the "business man" "sees many preachers and churches repudiating all appeals to fear and trying to maintain themselves by love alone."

It may be true, nay, it is true that there are these deficiencies in modern preaching, but do they explain men's staying away from church? Is it not true, also, that the very churches in which there is this sort of preaching are those most largely attended, that is, of the churches in which the single element of attraction is the preaching?

Diminished church attendance, where there is such a diminution, is not fairly attributable to the preachers. If the people are earnest in their religious belief and crave spiritual food they are not critical of the preacher, so long as he is in earnest like themselves. When they set to carping at his sermons it is a sign that they are not hungry for the food. In times of religious revival the humblest, the plainest preacher inspired by an ardent faith, is eloquent enough for them. If there is in their hearts the demand the supply is sure to come. At the time of the Great Awakening in 1857 the preachers in New York were not abler men than their successors are now, and not greater pulpit orators, but the fire of religious belief in them kindled a responsive flame of religious emotion in the hearts of the people, for the crowds who listened to their appeals were already burning with a desire for the word of salvation.

As it is now, the churches which make their appeal to religious sentiment, to devout emotion, and hold up before men the ideal of religion are about as full as ever. It is only those pulpits which depend on insufficient intellectual ability simply to draw the people, or are not clever enough adepts in clap-trap, that have been "outgrown" by the "average American business man." When the clap-trap suits vulgar tastes, it is now a greater drawing card than ever, as the example we have mentioned illustrates.

The fault is absence of religious faith in the pulpit and in the people who otherwise would fill the pews. Wherever that faith is found the churches are full of people who have other thoughts and emotions than of criticism of the sermon and carping at the preacher. The fire that warms them is in their own hearts. The magnet which attracts them to the church is not the expected eloquence of the preacher, but the eloquent religious faith with which their own hearts are charged. Only when men really believe in the world to come and that all along profit is a snare and a delusion so long as they lose their souls in its pursuit, will the churches be as thronged as are the marts of trade and the stock exchanges.

was a beautiful young actress, with whom every man who saw her fell in love. Her name was German, for her father was a German nobleman who had married an Englishwoman against the wish of his family; but she had been born and brought up in England, and, as her name was so foreign sounding and so long, her admirers made a diminutive out of her three initials. She was always called by them, and as she grew famous they grew famous, too. She had the right to a title of her own if she had cared to use it, but she did not, and very few people in England knew much about the German family from which she was descended.

"When she was still quite a girl she had a very tempting offer to go to America and act, and the offer was accepted. On the ship she met a young man on his way to California to make his fortune, or rather to improve it, for he had about ten thousand pounds which he had just inherited, and wanted to invest in some profitable way. He had had a dreadful misfortune, shooting a friend by accident, and though it was more the friend's fault than his, and he had been acquitted of any blame except carelessness, he could not bear his old life, and had determined to begin again in a new country.

"There you have the hero and heroine on the stage together; for, of course, the young man fell in love with the actress, and, for the first time in her life, she found herself in love, too. He implored her to marry him and leave the stage, for he thought his ten thousand pounds quite fortune enough to marry upon. But the girl loved the stage, and she had been extravagant, and spent her money as fast as she had made it. Besides, she was under contract to the man who was her manager for two years more, and was decidedly afraid of him. He had taught her all she knew about the stage, and fancied he had a right to order her private as well as professional life, since her parents were dead and she was alone in the world. This manager disapproved of actresses marrying while they were in the heyday of youth and success, for he believed—as most managers do—that unmarried girls on the stage are more of a 'draw' than when they become matrons.

"She had someone else to be afraid of, too, poor girl, though she did not tell that to her lover. She knew he would laugh that fear to scorn. Only a man she had flirted with a little, because he was so horribly in earnest that he had been amusing—a Byronic sort of person with a handsome, fierce face, and a deformed foot. When it came to his insisting on marrying her she had refused, and he had sworn to kill any man she ever dared to make her husband.

"Somehow, the threats of this saturnine individual, who had followed her to England from Australia, where she played one year, had made a very strong impression upon her mind, and that impression revived when she fell in love with somebody else. Once in a while he sent her a souvenir of his continued existence; and the last packet she had received from him—a year ago—had been posted from some place, the name being indistinguishable, in America.

"So my heroine refused my hero, and really thought she should be able to part with him; but when they reached New York and she found that she couldn't keep him dangling about her, she relented. They were privately married, the secret not to come out at the earliest until her contract with her manager expired at the end of two years. After a week or so of stolen meetings she sent him away, as her love was interfering with her professional work; but they didn't expect their separation to be for long, as the company of which she was the star was slowly going west. Her destination was to be California; and when she came near enough they would meet again. Meanwhile, they wrote to each other.

"My hero didn't find any investment to suit him at first, so he put his money in a Californian bank, that it might be handy if he wanted it, and as there was a sensation about a newly-discovered gold region, he went out there and tried his luck.

"But his luck was not good. He saw others round him doing well, while Fortune kept a closed hand for him. Months passed, and at last a letter told his wife that he had found exactly the right thing. A man he had met—a splendid fellow, very clever, though eccentric—had bought land, and in prospecting had found gold. But he hadn't money enough to do anything with it, or he would have kept the secret to himself. As it was, he hadn't told a soul, except my hero, giving him the chance of a partnership in what would probably prove a tremendous fortune for both. One was the owner of the land, the other would be the financier; and they would share and share alike. The fellow had shown my hero some wonderful specimens, and they were already chumming together. At the end of the letter my hero told his wife the name of his new friend. It was that of the man who had loved and threatened her in Australia, and from whom she had heard a year ago in America.

"Here was a development; and, as you can see, Comtesse, the villain of the piece is on the stage.

"The poor girl was sick with forebodings. Her husband had a miniature of her which he always wore; and he had also a curious jewel which she had given him—an heirloom of her family. It was a blue moonstone, cut in the shape of a Sphinx's head, which had been given to an ancestor of her father's by an Egyptian princess. She had had it mounted on a small screw, with her famous initials engraved on a tiny flat piece of gold, and had made it a present to her husband before they parted, 'for luck.'"

CHAPTER XXXVI.

"Cloven Hoof."

"Oh!" exclaimed the Comtesse, "at last you have come to the moonstone."

She had laid the Sphinx's head on the table, and had been toying with it as she listened. Hope Newcome's eyes and hers were upon it now, and the spirit-light imprisoned within the stone sent up one of its elusive gleams, like an eye answering their glances.

"If I believed in ghosts I should believe that stone was haunted," Newcome said in an odd, low voice. For an instant he had lost the thread of his narrative, but quickly he took it up and went on again.

"My heroine knew that the man who had threatened her had seen the moonstone in old days. Even without the initials he would have recognized it as hers, for she had said to him laughingly on the day he had seen it that she was keeping the talisman as a wedding-gift for her husband—if she ever had one. This had been before any stormy scenes between them, but she believed that he

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are :—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey :—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4 05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5.23
	100.00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons of ore above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles ; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows :—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4 00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows :—

	ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902, to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2 70
July 1st, 1903, " " 1904	2.25	2.25

July 1st, 1905, " " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906, " " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows :—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6½ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000 00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000 00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to .... $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is .... $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalisation of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is...... $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

STOCK MARKETS

A Pointer on Rates and Wages

New York, Nov. 20—The railways generally are advancing their wages; the increased cost of living and their general prosperity leads them to share it in this manner with their employees. The roads, however, are going to make it up on their freight rates. Commodity values ruling as high as they are doing, there is consequently every reason to anticipate a higher range of freight rates, and no reason why they should be lower. An almost imperceptible advance in freight rates would more than make up to the companies the additional outlay in wages, for the recent advance. The rates have been uniformly more normal and staple since 1898. This had actually more to do in recording the additional net gains in earnings than the actual increase in business offering. They have actually improved; after falling one-third of a mill per ton per mile since 1898 they have since regained one half the loss. Put the figure back to that the roads were able to secure no longer since 1897, and there would be enough added to the freight revenues to pay all the increase in wages now ordered voluntarily by the roads and leave a very handsome surplus on top of past showings. Rates restored to the average of seven years ago would pay the increase in wages and upon the present volume of business almost double the net earnings of the American railways. Rates should not reach that old time level, however, but they will be firmer and more staple or steady than heretofore and sufficiently advanced to more than make up the present additional outlay in wages. Earnings are large and will be large, and the market whatever may be its immediate fluctuations will not wait to record its appreciation of actual events. One thing should be borne in mind all the time—wages never advance prior to a recession in the upward tide of business and values. When the roads voluntarily increase wages you may be certain that they see the actual business ahead of them to maintain their large gross and net earnings. Railway officials are unanimous upon this point; wages are the last thing, usually, to advance and the first to decline.

Summary—Manhattan again occupied the centre of the stage, fluctuating rapidly, and making new high figures. The story that accompanied the rise was that it had been leased to the Inter-Borough Rapid Transit Co., which is to operate the subway. The terms were said to be upon a basis of its earnings, for two years, and at the rate of 7 per cent. thereafter. In two years the underground subway is expected to be in complete operation, so the story seems worthy of credence. Another tale was that a prominent bear interest had settled privately on a large line of short stock at 160. Balance of the market was very strong. Copper and N.Y.C. advanced over three points each; sugar and St. Paul were up over a point and a half each. The entire market was buoyant. We are still bullish. Money closed 4 per cent. Sales 759,700.

Oil Strike in Kent County

(Press Despatch)

Chatham, Nov. 12—There is as yet little new in the oil situation, which is the one topic of conversation. Accounts of the Raleigh well's capacity have not been one whit exaggerated. Oil men are swarming here, some coming even from California and great expectations are entertained as to future explorations. A company which has fourteen wells at Northwood, six miles from here, on the line of the Grand Trunk, hold leases for lands adjacent to the gusher, and will begin to bore at once in their territory. The gusher is situated on the apex or crown of a sudden elevation or dome in the rock formation, and oil experts say this is a sure sign of permanency and the reason for the unusual pressure manifested.

Merchants & Traders Oil Company,

of Marietta, Ohio, will stand investigation through Mercantile Agencies or leading people. It has been successful in its operations so far, only drilling one dry hole in getting 12 wells, and one of its wells is a 25 barrel well in 100 acre tract, where there will be room for 100 wells. The company is NOW EARNING DIVIDENDS, and will start paying better than interest in January next, increasing thereafter as new wells come in.

The present price of shares is $25 for 100, but will advance to $50 as soon as some of its wells now drilling are completed.

Mining Investment Without Precedent

A SMALL SUM INVESTED NOW SHOULD PROVIDE COMFORTABLE INCOME FOR MANY YEARS

The LARDEAU Mines, Capitalized at Only $100,000.00, Should Produce $270,000.00 Net Revenue Per Year—These Figures are Based on the Reports of Well-Known Mining Engineers—Present Price of the Stock Only 10 Cents a Share, but Subscriptions Will Have to be Made Promptly, as the Price Will Soon Advance to Very Much Higher Figures.

We do not hesitate to say that in our judgment stock in the LARDEAU MINES LIMITED, offers a most magnificent opportunity for investment.

There is every reason to believe that the LARDEAU MINES will pay a profit of 270 per cent. PER YEAR, within a short time, and will continue to yield such profits for more than a lifetime.

These are stupendous figures, but we believe them to be absolutely conservative. Our reasons are based on these facts:

PROOF OF NO STOCK JOBBING

In the first place the capitalization is only $100,000. This low capitalization shows upon the face of it that the company is honestly organized—that there is no suspicion of stock-jobbing, which has too often ruined many otherwise honest companies.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY

The property is located in the celebrated Lardeau mining division of West Kootenay, British Columbia. The property owned by this company consists of three full claims, embracing an extent of 156 acres—mineral claims in British Columbia are 1,500x1,500 feet—equal to 52 acres in each extent. Three strong parallel ore veins run through the property from end to end, a distance of 4,500 feet. If placed end to end this would give us 13,500 feet, equal to a continuous ore body over two and a half miles in length. The values are in gold, silver, copper and lead, and run from $25.00 to $77.00 per ton of 2,000 pounds. These results show indications of permanent values of the most convincing kind.

GROSS VALUE OF SHIPMENTS.

The gross value of shipments of ore aggregating [illegible] pounds from twelve mines in the Lardeau, all situated near the property owned by this company, was [illegible], equal to a return per ton of over $146.00. The property owned by this company shows up equally as well as any of these more fully developed mines, and will, we are convinced, shortly rank among the best in the Lardeau division.

READ THESE FIGURES CAREFULLY

In a very conservative statement issued by the officers of the company, appears the following:

"In order to show why we are confident we are right, we will estimate our ore values at $50.00 per ton, a little over one-third of the average ore values of the entire Lardeau mining division. We will also base our calculations on a daily output of 30 tons—a small amount compared with the extent of our property and the size of its ore bodies. We will allow $10.00 per ton for mining, transportation (a few miles only) and smelting charges. The profits after making a reasonable reduction for incidentals and surplus, work out as follows:

30 tons at $50.00 per ton... ... ... $1,500
Less $10.00 per ton mining, transportation, and reduction charges 300
Net daily income..... 1,200
Say for 300 days per year..... ... 300
Total net yearly income... 360,000
Deduct for incidental expenses, $5 per ton... .....$45,000
Deduct for company's surplus account $5 per ton. 45,000 90,000
Total yearly net earnings..... $270,000

which sum is equal to 270 per cent. per annum on our capital stock of $100,000.

"This estimate is made on the basis of a small output compared to the extent of our property and the splendid facilities it affords for economical mining and on the operation of the mine for 300 days per year only, so that anyone can see at a glance that we are not overestimating in any particular, especially when the output of mines similarly situated, and with ore bodies of less extent than ours, ship hundreds of tons each day. There is no good reason why our property, when fully developed—which will be within six months to a year—should not ship several hundreds of tons of ore per year, but we are basing our calculations on the immediate future in presenting the above estimate.

"We are now within seventy to eighty feet of the main ore veins, and assays show values as high as $77.00 per ton. The average returns from twelve mines in our district, according to Government records, which are always conservative, run as high as $146.00 a ton in gold, silver, copper and lead.

HONEST, LEGITIMATE MANAGEMENT

We know the men connected with the management of the LARDEAU MINES, and have known them for years. We know that they never were and never will be connected with any but honest and legitimately conducted enterprises.

REPORT OF MINING ENGINEER.

The property has been thoroughly examined by well known mining engineers and their reports have borne out every statement that has been made by the company. Mr. H. O. McClymont, one of the last engineers to make a report says in conclusion:

The average assays are most encouraging, considering the great width and continuancy of the leads across the country with such great width and prominence of the surface, and judging from other properties in the near vicinity, some of which are on the same level and have developed very rich ore bodies The LARDEAU MINES are as good as any, if not the best, in the vicinity, and I verily believe with a nominal expenditure, they should be made dividend-paying in a short time, and I would strongly recommend extensive developments towards that end. Signed, H. O. McClymont, Mining Engineer."

SMALL AMOUNT OF MONEY NEEDED.

As Mr. McClymont says in his report, only a small sum of money is needed to complete the development work and put these mines on a dividend paying basis.

We want to raise about $10,000 from the sale of shares, this money to be used to complete the work just specified.

A very short time will be required to raise this amount of money for this magnificent property, and then the sale of stock will be discontinued.

READ THIS CAREFULLY.

The present price of the stock is 10 cents per share.

The price will be advanced to 15 cents per share very soon, and then 20 cents per share.

The company reserves the right to withdraw the stock from the market without notice.

TWO YEARS AGO—AND NOW.

We believe that there are 50 chances in 100 of the LARDEAU MINES proving a BONANZA. One property in the vicinity of the Lardeau was recently sold for [illegible] cash, and stock in addition. Two years ago it was not nearly as good a prospect as the Lardeau is today.

The LARDEAU MINES, LIMITED, is a small, close corporation and the profits will consequently be large to each stockholder.

Those who are fortunate enough to buy stock at the low price of 10 cents can calculate on an annual income of $135.00 from an investment of $50.00. In other words, you would get your principal back and $85.00 besides every year.

YOU CAN PAY IN INSTALMENTS.

Write us for further particulars.

We will allow you to purchase a block of stock and pay for it in monthly instalments. Before your stock is paid for you will see it double in value—perhaps more.

We urge prompt action, because of the approaching increase of 15 cents per share, which may occur any day. The safest thing to do is to send us $10, which will reserve the stock you desire at 10 cents per share. Then you can investigate the matter carefully and fully and if you are not completely satisfied we will return your money.

ANOTHER DEATH

Mrs. Patrick O'Keefe Yields to the Inevitable Thursday Morning

Yesterday morning Catherine Sheehan wife of Mr. Patrick O'Keefe, deceased, departed this life at the advanced age of 77 years. The funeral takes place on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock from the residence of her son-in-law Mr. D. Mahoney, Lansdowne street. Mrs. O'Keefe was a lady who commanded the respect and esteem of all her friends and acquaintances. Those who mourn for her departure have the comforting assurance that she has merely gone on before to await their coming on the golden shore.

DEATH OF LILLIAN DONNELLY

A Young Life Suddenly Ended—Remains to be Brought Here

Yesterday afternoon Mr. John Donnelly received the sad intelligence that Miss Lillian Donnelly, daughter of Thomas Donnelly, who formerly lived in Peterborough, had died in Detroit. Deceased had been ill for some time, but her death came as a surprise to her relations here, as word had reached them a few days ago that she was improving very nicely. The remains will arrive here by the C.P.R. noon train Saturday, when the funeral will take place. Miss Donnelly was only 23 years of age at the time of her death, and it seems sad to see a young life of such promise so suddenly terminated. The bereaved friends have our sympathy in their great sorrow.

POLICE COURT

A Merchant Fined for Giving Tobacco to a Minor

Charles Dickson was arranged at the Police Court yesterday morning charged with being drunk and using profane language on the streets on Tuesday night. He was fined $2.00 and costs, amounting in all to $6.50.

Mr. P. Collins was charged with selling tobacco to a young lad under eighteen years of age. It appeared from the evidence that the father of the boy had an account at Mr. Collins' store. The lad had been induced by some older boys to watch until Mr. Collins was out of the store and then went in and got several plugs of tobacco on his father's account which he gave away to the older boys. The police magistrate gave the boys a good lecture and ordered the chief of police to report the matter to the principal of the Murray street school where they attend.

Mr. Collins was fined 10 and costs, aggregating $12.75 all told. This seemed a great hardship considering the circumstances, but there was no other course under the provisions of the act.

Mrs. Perry's case was postponed until this morning.

AFTER MARRIAGE

Different Living Affects Some People

"I never drank coffee until after I was married," says a lady from Adairville, Ga.

"My husband drank coffee and I thought it was nice to drink with him, and we enjoyed it together. After a while I found that my digestive organs were much disturbed, but not knowing the cause, I went on drinking coffee and growing more wretched each day.

In due time, three little girls came to what ought to have been a happy home, but I was nervous and unhappy myself and could not make anyone else happy; to my great consternation, two of my little girls had spasms, and I, a nervous wreck, found it impossible to eat anything that did not hurt my stomach.

I finally concluded I had heart disease, my heart pained me so much after eating, and my head was so dizzy, I often thought I would fall when trying to walk across the room.

I tried every medicine I heard of, and had different doctors treat me, but with no benefit. I could not sleep half the night, and never slept sound—I would wake out of a frightful dream only to dove and wake again.

Finally, I read of Postum Food Coffee and my husband got a package from our grocer; I made some according to directions. I liked its flavor very much and the first cup seemed to help my stomach. I used it ever meal, sometimes making a whole meal on Postum and a bit of bread.

I improved so fast that I could soon eat anything I wanted. I began to look so much better my friends were surprised and said I looked as well as when I was first married. I could sleep as sweetly as a child. Of course the children quit coffee and drank Postum, and they all began to fatten and the spasms stopped.

I wish I would impress it on every weak, nervous person to abandon coffee and use Postum Cereal. If every nervous person could have seen me in my nervous affliction from drinking coffee, and could now see me and my little ones around the table enjoying our Postum, they surely would never indulge in coffee again, for there is no more nervous prostration; no more headaches; no more spasms, and I am able to do my own work and care for my children." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE BOGUS CHECK ARTIST

The Man Who Skinned Peterborough Merchants Still at Large

The fellow who worked off a number of bogus checks here, is still at large and has been getting in his fine work in Brantford, Guelph and other places.

The Brantford Courier says: The fellow of many aliases stepped on to the G.T.R. platform Saturday morning and at once commenced his plan of campaign. It is said he came from Harrisburg, for a man passing through on the train saw him changing his garb. At any rate when he arrived here he presented the picture of a quiet, unassuming agriculturalist, with small cap, sweater and blue overalls. Before he had left town Saturday night he had succeeded in doing up probably a dozen or more local merchants. Already six have confessed and likely many others have decided that in view of the circumstances silence is the wisest policy.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SURRENDER

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—Mrs. Eddy advises that "until the public thought becomes better acquainted with Christain Science the Christian Scientists shall decline to doctor infectious or contagious diseases."

But if there is no such thing as disease how can there be a contagious disease? If the head of the Church admits there are contagious diseases and forbids Christian Scientists to treat them, how are the "healers" who have had no training in the diagnosis of disease (there being no such thing) to recognize a contagious disease and to differentiate what they should and what they should not treat?

According to their teachings, so far as I understand them, the lesions perceptible to the ordinary observer are not, but are only errors of the mind. If they are errors and recognized as such, they are totally untrustworthy and must not be taken into consideration in distinguishing between a contagious and non-contagious disease, or, there being no such thing as disease, in distinguishing between what is not and what is not.

If physicians of large experience are unable at times to tell smallpox from chickenpox in its early stages or diphtheria from some forms of tonsilitis without a bacteriological examination, it will be a relief to the community in which such cases may occur to know that infallibility inspired Christian Scientists will diagnose correctly what does not exist and turn them over to a physician, thus "giving unto Caesar what is Caesar's," and helping protect the community from the danger of an epidemic, as well as saving valuable time in the application of material remedies.

It's Impure Blood.

"What is it?" asks the mother as she notices the smooth skin of her child marred by a red or pimply eruption. It is impure blood, and the child needs at once to begin the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the best and surest remedy for impurity of the blood. It entirely eradicates the poisons which corrupt the blood and cause disease. It cures scrofula, boils, pimples, eczema, salt-rheum and other eruptive diseases which are the direct result of impure blood. It enriches as well as purifies the blood.

"Dr. Pierce's medicine has not only benefited me greatly, but it has done wonders for my two sons," writes Mrs. M. Hartrick, of Demster, Oswego Co., N. Y. "Both had scrofula. I have lost two daughters in less than five years with consumption and scrofula. My eldest son was taken two or three years ago with hemorrhage from the lungs. It troubled him for over a year. He took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and has not had a hemorrhage in over a year. My younger son had scrofulous sores on his neck; had two lanced, but has not had any since he commenced to take your medicine."

THE SOUTH AFRICAN PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHT

The Country Settling Down to a Period of Peace and Plenty

What a Leading South African Newspaper Has to Say on the Situation

London, Nov. 22.—Judging from statements emanating from some Boer sources in South Africa, Britain's quondam adversaries will meet Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain half way in his efforts to mould the country into one harmonious whole. The Friend, the Boer organ of Bloemfontein, expresses itself in the following optimistic terms:

Speaking from the side of the ex-republicans—as we have every right to speak—we shall work for the prosperity and liberty of South Africa, sincerely believing that recrimination on either side can only lead to injury. Our great aim and object will be to weld the two nations peopling this land into one. We want it, to put it in the words of the Hon. Secretary for the Colonies, to be a happy abiding place for all to live in—not for one class alone, not for one section, for one race or for one political party, but for all.

A leading newspaper speaks of the reconciliation of the Northern and Southern States after a long and bloody war as an instance of what may be accomplished in bringing one-time enemies into friendly intercourse. "That reunion," says the New York World, "was the work of a little over ten years, and the method of it was simple—there was no attempt to treat the Southern States as conquered enemies, not to govern them, except for a very short time, as subject provinces and peoples. Along the same lines that effected the great American reconciliation, therefore, the quick and complete closing of all the wounds left by the war in South Africa is evidently not impracticable."

NEW ONTARIO BAILWAYS

CANADIAN NORTHERN PLANS TO REACH ONTARIO

Surveying an Extension to White River—The Algoma Central—The Grand Trunk Said to Have Franchises There

Toronto, Nov. 22—The railway developments of New Ontario are assuming an interesting turn. The Canadian Northern have just sent out two surveying parties from Fort William to locate a route from there to White River where their proposed extension easterly from Fort William will meet the Algoma Central. This route is intended to run considerably farther north than the Canadian Pacific road, which skirts the lake shore.

The Algoma Central, running north from the "Soo" is completed to within 25 miles of White River, and that small section will soon be finished. If, as is anticipated, the Canadian Northern pushes its line to White River, the work will be completed about the time Mr. Clergue announces his intention to have the North Shore & Manitoulin road finished. This would mean that by the junction at White River the Canadian Northern could get into Ontario over the Algoma Central.

Another interesting and well-defined rumor is that the Grand Trunk have secured a franchise which will enable them, to reach the "Soo" from the west and on to Sudbury, or join the Algoma Central, whose Manitoulin and North Shore road may run north to Sudbury after leaving Manitoulin, and before turning west to the "Soo." Whatever the outcome of present surveys and temporary arrangements, it is certain the railway developments New Ontario during the next few years will be on a most extensive scale.

BEET SUGAR MATTER STANDS OVER

Finance and Road and Bridge Committees Report—Valedictories of Dr. Jeffs and Mr. Wm. Anderson

The County Councillors wound up the business for the year yesterday, all the members being present, with Warden Strickland in the chair.

The Finance Committee recommended:

1. Ashburnham was allowed a rebate of taxes of $5.55, the Trent Canal lands, House of Providence and St. Joseph's Hospital, which are in that municipality being exempted from taxation.
2. Accounts amounting to $1,632.52 were ordered to be paid.
3. That communication from Ministerial Association be left over till January.
4. That the pay sheets for repairs to the Pigeon Creek bridge amounting to $147.25 be paid.
5. That Mr. Casement, Mr. Peck and Mr. Pierce, chairman of this committee, be a committee with the Warden, with power to dispose of the debentures issued under by-law 827.
6. After being discussed by the Council and the promoters of the Peterborough Beet Sugar Company, the matter to submitting a bylaw to the ratepayers of this county to take $40,000 stock in the said company was withdrawn.

The Roads and Bridges Committee reported as follows:

1. That the report of the Joint Committee meeting held at Pigeon Creek Bridge, on October 2nd, 1902, be adopted.
2. That County Engineer's report be received and printed with the minutes of the Council.
3. That Wm. O'Leary be paid $25.00 for extra work done on the Mud Lake Bridge.
4. That Wm. O'Leary be appointed caretaker of Mud Lake Bridge at a yearly salary of $250.00.
5. That account of Alex. Fitzgerald of $10.00 for repairs to and care of Ashburnham bridge be paid, and one-half charged to the town.
6. That clause 16 of the report of the Committee on Roads and Bridges adopted in January last be rescinded. That a grant of $25.00 be made towards the repair of the road in Ennismore, leading from Gannon's Ferry to the Bobcaygeon road.
7. That this county pay $4.94, being half of the extra expenditure made in cutting down the large hills on the side line between lots 10 and 11 in the 10th concession of the Township of Asphodel.
8. That a grant of $100.00 be made to the township of Galway to assist in erecting the new Kinmount Bridge.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn addressed the Council, requesting that the matter of investigating the beet sugar business in the west be left in the hands of the committee appointed for that purpose at last session, with power to visit the factories. This, he said, would be a favorable time, as the deputation would have the advantage of seeing the entire process of sugar manufacture, from the time the beet was delivered until the finished product was turned out.

It was pointed out that the committee had power to act as was suggested

Mr. Wm. Anderson, M.P.P., and Dr Jeffs, made farewell speeches as they both are withdrawing from the County Council.

Mr. Peck asked for three cheers for the retiring members, and they were heartily given. After several members had spoken on the retirement of the gentlemen named, the council adjourned.

STEALING MANY MILES OF TERRITORY

American Surveyers Encroaching on British Columbia

Vancouver Paper Says Thousands of Square Miles of Province Have Been Staked

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 22.—In the quietest possible manner, according to the Province, United States surveyors have encroached upon Canadian territory to the northeast of Cape Fox and appropriated thousands of square miles within the boundaries of British Columbia to the westward of Portland Canal.

"The line from Portland Canal," it says, "runs northwesterly for a short distance, and then turns nearly due west, and finally connects with the Ykoot River at the confluence of that stream with the Stikine river.

"At the same point there is to be found an old post supposed to be erected by the Hudson Bay Company, and by running the line to that post it is evidently the claim of the American Government that the post in question was placed in position by the Russians although the survey line is distinctly marked by square cut granite monuments.

"The monuments run to an apex and mounted on the apex of each is a copper rod, which the surveyors state were placed in position with a view of marking exactly the spot where the American surveyors placed their instruments when running the line.

"It is hardly possible to believe, in view of the presence of a British Columbia government official at Port Simpson, that Americans can have occupied this territory without such action having come to the knowledge of the government agent, and by him transmitted to the Provincial government, and thence to Ottawa."

Probably a Hoax

Quebec, November 21.—The finding yesterday of a bottle in the river at Hadlow containing a slip of paper recording the wreck of the Snow Bird is thought to be the result of a hoax. The pencilled writing on the paper reads as follows: "Schooner Snow Bird met gale opposite Pointe Des Monts, foundered with all on board, four men and myself lost, good bye. Captain Lawlor. Please communicate with my wife." It is not considered likely that the bottle floated from Pointe Des Monts to Hadlow, above Quebec.

MINING TROUBLE SETTLED

Pardee and Company Come to Terms With Employees

Hazelton, Nov. 22.—The trouble at the Cranberry and the Crystal Ridge Collieries of A. Pardee & Company, where the employes refused to return to work because they were asked to sign an agreement not to interfere with non-union men, was settled to-day, and operations will be resumed on Monday. Instead of signing the agreement individually at the mines, the men decided in a body to abide by its provisions. They empowered a committee of their "local" to make written promise that all of the employes will comply with its conditions. All of the men but three, who are accused by the company of having been unduly active during the strike will be reinstated. The only collieries in this district where the differences have not been settled are those of Coxe Brothers & Company, whose men will meet this afternoon to receive a proposition from the company, outlining a plan of settlement.

BIG BRITISH WARSHIPS FRIGHTEN THE CHINESE

Celestials Decide After Naval Demonstration to Punish Murderers of Missionaries

Victoria, B. C., November, 22.—Advices have been received here that the British naval demonstration against China as a result of the refusal of the Chinese Government to punish officials in Funan who refused to provide protection for Rev. Messrs. Bruce and Lewis, the missionaries murdered at Chen Chou, has resulted in an edict being made by the Empress Dowager on November 2 for the decapitation of the officials and the imprisonment of the minor officials. The Chinese Government refused to punish these officials as requested by the British Minister, and the Governor of Funan, in an official communication regarding the murders, used the term "barbarians" to designate the dead missionaries. This incensed the British minister, and he again called on China to punish the officials. The Imperial Government persisted in its refusal, and at the request of the minister, the British made a naval demonstration, in which the first class cruiser Amphitrite and the sloops Algerine and Espiegle took part, and the battleships Ocean and Albion, and the cruisers Talbot and Blenheim also started from Hong Kong, bound north. This brought the Chinese Government to time, and the officials were ordered to be executed.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER AT HOT SPRINGS, VA.

The Premier Already Benefited by the Change of Air

HE TOOK A LONG WALK

Distinguished Canadian Party are Receiving Social Attention From Society at the Springs

Hot Springs, Va., November 21. — Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier, Sir William Mulock, and Sir Wilfrid's brother, Mr. Henri Laurier, M.P., arrived at the Homestead Hotel, at the Virginia Hot Springs, on Wednesday morning, for a short visit, in order to give the Premier the advantage of a few weeks' rest and an open-air life among the mountains of the State.

Sir Wilfrid appeared in good health and spirits upon reaching his destination. Most travellers drive from the station to the elevated grounds occupied by this popular resort, but Sir Wilfrid and party walked up and much enjoyed the scenery.

Before luncheon he took a short walk with his brother, and in the afternoon quite a lengthy one with Sir William Mulock, covering a distance of about four miles, returning to the hotel with a jaunty step, showing that the mountain air agreed with him. He seems charmed with the surroundings, which "are certainly healthful and invigorating," according to Sir William Mulock, who has been here before. However, the latter is not here for his own health, but rather as a companion for the Premier.

The party left Ottawa on Monday night in a private car, and came by way of Baltimore and Washington.

Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier will be given an informal reception this afternoon by Mrs. S. Barton French, of New York, who owns the largest villa here. Mrs. French will be assisted by her mother, Mrs. Walker Fearn, widow of a late representative of this country in Egypt, and also at one time in Athens. Mrs. French has travelled much and was educated at Oxford, so that she and Mrs. Fearn have seen much of public life abroad.

The weather this autumn has been most remarkable, and continues good, so that many lingered in the country later than usual.

London, November 20.—Congratulations to Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his sixty-first birthday take the form in the London Daily Chronicle, of a series of quotations from Lamartine, Shakespeare, Cowper, Goethe, George Eliot and W. S. Gilbert, eulogizing Sir Wilfrid's wise dissimulation, eloquence and other qualities.

REWARDS FOR VIRTUE DISTRIBUTED IN PARIS

$750 Given for Helping the Poor--700 Divisions on German Tarriff

Will Occupy at Least Seventy Hours—Dissatisfaction in Hungary—Activity of Labor Societies in Russia

Paris, Nov. 21—The Montyon prizes for virture were distributed by the French Academy yesterday. The chief prize of $750 was awarded to Marie Desbat, who has established an asylum for eighty-four aged persons at Venissieux, near Lyons. In the earlier years she collected gutter children and taught them the catechism. Afterwards she devoted herself to visiting the sick. The sum of $300 was given to Jeanne Schneider, a blind lady, who has founded an asylum for sixty-seven blind children. Three Breton sailors received $400 for saving a shipwrecked crew. Among the literary prizes, Maurice Materlinck got $200 for his "Vie de L'Abeille."

London, Nov. 21—It is reported from Kieff that the governors of the principal manufacturing centres of South Russia has received instructions from St. Petersburg regarding the necessary for alertness against the increasing activity of labor and unlawful societies. Already steps have been taken to increase the police. In Odessa the cost of additional police is to be charged to the town's account.

Berlin, Nov. 21—The Clericals have issued an urgent whip to members of that party in the Reichstag, asking assiduous attendance during three weeks, as it is hoped to get through the tariff scheme by voting it by sections. There are nineteen sections, so that if the majority could fulfill its intention there might be a prospect of finishing the second reading the bill before Christmas. It must be remembered, however, that the social democrats mean to demand 700 divisions, which will occupy at least seventy hours, equivalent to thirteen entire sittings. Consequently the future of sittings. Consequently the future of the tariff scheme is altogether uncertain.

Vienna, Nov. 21—The proceedings in the Hungarian Parliament give a fair measure of the unsatisfactory situation in Hungary, pointing to an approaching storm, but Premier Deszell's confident tone shows that he still feels master of the situation. The extreme section of the party of independence contends that failure to bring to a successful issue the negotiations between the two governments gives Hungary the right to renounce existing economic arrangements with Austria and to establish an independent customs system. The independence party obviously considers that the present state of confusion and general dissatisfaction provides a favorable opportunity for promoting its object.

Canada the Slaughter Market

For Products of Teutonic Iron and Steel Works Cheap Rails from Germany

Ottawa, Nov. 21—Mr. Francis H. Clergue reached here yesterday from Toronto, and has been interviewing some of the Ministers.

His attention was drawn to the recent purchase of steel rails in Germany by Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann, and he was asked whether these rails could not be supplied in Canada. Mr. Clergue said that the German ironmasters kept up the price in the home market, but sold at a much lower figure in the foreign market, in order to get the trade.

"The German market," he said, "is protected by a duty of between $6 and $7 a ton. Consequently if you were to buy rails in Germany for use in that country the price would be from $30 to $32 a ton. The usual freight on those rails from the German port to Montreal would be $3 more, and from Montreal to Port Arthur, another $2, or a total of about $28 a ton. Now, Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann are reported to have purchased their rails for $27 a ton, delivered at Port Arthur.

"We cannot afford to produce rails at that figure. We have spent $15,000,000 in iron mines and in the construction of rolling mills and railways to connect with them, and if other railway companies are going to follow the example of Mackenzie and Mann, we simply cannot produce steel rails, that is all. The question is one for the people of Canada to decide. If they prefer to be at the mercy of foreign rail-makers, from whom they can at present obtain a temporary advantage, rather than have domestic manufacturers in their midst, it is for them to say. But they should understand that the closing down of our rolling mill would mean a loss of $3,000,000 a year to the people of Ontario. Moreover, Mackenzie and Mann should be the last people to encourage the importation of foreign produced rails, seeing that they have on their line of railway perhaps the largest iron deposits in all Canada, which, of course, can never be advantageously developed except in Canadian iron industries. If developed, these iron mines should in a single month pay more than the duty on any foreign rails they would purchase in several years. I cannot believe that the Government will continue to bonus railway companies that use foreign rails, or allow, in future, a bonus to be paid to railways that are now being laid with foreign rails.

Boston Preacher Declares That Then we Will Enter the Golden Age

Boston, Nov. 21—The Rev. E. Griffith, of No. 40 Dudley street, well known as a preacher throughout New England puts forth the revelation that the year 1903 is the beginning of the millennium, the area of peace and gladness, in which the earth undergoes a marvellous change and the prophecy of the Scriptures shall be verified

"I have made a life study of this all-important question," says Mr. Griffith, "and my argument is based on facts that convince even the most skeptical. That part of the Scripture that prophesies chariots of fire shall pass upon the earth is verified upon our streets today. We are now on the threshold of that time spoken of in Scripture, in which, for a period of 1,000 years, we shall enjoy the life that will be known as the golden age, the period that precedes the consummation of the earth. Darkness shall fade and the earth shall be blessed with eternal light.

ONTARIO SHOULD SUPPLY DOMINION OF CANADA

With Sugar If the Beet Sugar Industry were Procted Says Hon. Mr. Tarte

Montreal, Nov. 21—Hon. Mr. Tarte, continuing in La Patrie his campaign for a higher tariff, cites the magnitude of the beet sugar industry which is being established in Ontario. He forecasts that about 1905 the industry will have reached such a state of affluence that Canada will be able to dispense with the expenditure of the 20,000,000 sent annually to foreign countries for sugar. To arrive at this result, the industry must be protected, as it is in the United States, otherwise capital would not be invested. He points out that the American tariff on refined sugar is $1.95 a hundred pounds, compared with a Canadian duty of $1.36, and on the two other grades of sugar, $1.62 and $1.23 respectively, compared with 71c and 77c With the aid of a higher tariff, there is no doubt that the industry would prosper

THE NILE DAM

On his way to India to take the chief command there General Kitchener, being much interested in Egyptian affairs, stopped off to visit the new dam at Assouan. He crossed the river on the dam, which is twenty-one feet broad at the top and one and one-half miles long, and was much pleased with the great work. When full the dam will be a lake 140 miles long and sixty feet deep. Its object is to furnish water for the irrigation of a large area never before cultivated and to insure a larger and steadier supply of water for all lower Egypt. The cost of the new reservoir is nearly $25,000,000, but it will soon pay for itself by increasing the area of salable land. There are two other dams in the Nile, that near Cairo, long ago built by French engineers and recently restored and improved by English engineers and the dam just built at Assiout, 350 miles south of Cairo, which is one-half miles long and will bring 470 square miles into cultivation. The larger Assouan dam is 600 miles above Cairo, at the First Cataract.

ANARCHISM

Has anarchism started on a fresh campaign of violence: A few days ago the old French town of St. Pierre was burned to the ground, being fired by emissaries of this atrocious cult. The fire was started in the cathedral. On Saturday morning last, the King of the Belgians was shot at on his way to the cathedral at Brussels. The intended assassin was an Italian named Robino, a mental degenerate, who confessed that he was excited by seeing so many tired looking personages occupying grand carriages?

The persons guilty of these two latest outrages belong to the class of anarchists animated by benevolence, rather than to the class which in despair seek power that they may do some public good. They wish to destroy the most prominent symbols of order or government. They are impressed with the idea that were all authority destroyed things would right themselves, a prospect so hopeless that no sane person can ever accept such a wild, barbarous and blind solution of supposed wrongs. The French revolutionists tried it, but ruined their cause and perished by the hands of their own adherents and led to a worse despotism than that which they overturned. If the anarchists of the torch, the bullet or the dagger had their way, they would all be destroyed by their own disciples of more "advanced views," who would find them an obstacle to further progress. There would be no end to assassination.

According to George Jacob Holyoake, it was Bakunin who first in modern days proposed to end government by the knife. He was listened to because he was a Russian and belonged to a land where reason was not tolerated, and irresponsible ferocity ruled. Robert Owen, on the other hand, was an anarchist of the philosophical school, an advocate of progress by reason. These are against conventional government, not from malice, but because they think self-government nobler than the monarchical form. What they seek is unlimited freedom, which if they had would not last a month. There is a wide distinction between the anarchy of reason and the anarchy of violence. The former is of the harmless variety that is so freely ventilated in public places in many American cities, with an occasional display of rabid ferocity, suggestive of reversion to the savage state. So that of killing and burning there can be but one answer of society, that of sharp and stern retribution. Yet the danger has been often pointed out of inflating the self-importance of the insane anarchist and exciting the emulation of others by a display of public perturbation and resort to furious epithets. No doubt Robino's idea of his own heroism rose in proportion as the crowd clamored for his own life and rushed to tear him in pieces.

Some years ago the British Government was asked to enter into a European concert to repress anarchism, but the invitation was declined on the ground that the modes of procedure in some countries were such as would revolt the English people, and England, if it entered into the concert, would be committed to the approval and be understood the sanction whatever occurred, and this feeling it was doubtless that animated King Edward, who, as Prince of Wales, was shot at in Brussels by an anarchist, and yet desired that he be not executed, but used with mercy as a person of unsound mind.

Every country has means of dealing with this element, if it has prudence and patience; and in England as in other countries, every anarchist is known to the police, and in every group there is a spy, a fool, or a mad man. There is no trouble in dealing with them.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

House, etc

would not have forgotten.

"Her only hope was that the name might be a mere coincidence, and she wrote asking her husband to describe his new friend. But the description, when it came, brought no comfort. The man looked rather like Byron, her husband answered. He had a deformed foot, and the miners round about called him in their rude slang 'Cloven Hoof.'

"Quickly she wrote again, telling the whole story, which she had kept from her husband before, warning him to be careful; whatever he did he must not let the other dream that they were married, or even knew each other, if it were not too late for that. And she begged that in any event the partnership might be dissolved. She had a presentiment of evil to come.

"But many days passed, and she got no answer to her letter. She could not sleep at night for terrible dreams; and, at about this time, another great perplexity had come to her. She knew that she was to be a mother.

"All her anxieties made her ill; her tour had to be interrupted in the midst, and engagements cancelled. Then one night she had a dream more horrible than any which had tortured her before. She dreamt that she saw the man with the deformed foot digging a grave for the dead body of her husband, whom he had murdered, and hoped to hide away for ever, with all traces of the crime.

"She told me afterwards—for I heard this story from her own lips—that she must have been half mad. She hardly knew what she was doing until she found herself in the train traveling alone from Chicago—where she had been taken ill—on the way to California and the place where her husband was living with his 'friend.' Without a word to anyone she had stolen away in the early dawn. Had she confessed the truth to her manager, and told him what she wished to do, he would have tried to prevent her from going to her husband, and, in her weak state of health, would probably have succeeded. As it was, he would have followed, no doubt, had he guessed her destination; but she left a note which put him upon the wrong track, and not only did she contrive to disappear, but, as a matter of fact, the mystery which surrounded her disappearance was never cleared up. Circumstances which came afterwards made her desire to remain behind the veil she herself had dropped, and it was never lifted.

"The nearest railway town to the place my poor heroine wished to reach—we'll call it Caxton; it's very like the real name—was thirty miles away. When she got there the whole country was aflame with excitement, and hardly had she been five minutes in the small, rough hotel when she heard a strange story.

"It seemed that two young men who had come out from the East to this part of California had mysteriously vanished within six or seven weeks. They were both well off, and had had a good deal of money sent to them by their friends, who, anxious at not hearing from them for a long time, caused enquiries to be made. They were traced to the neighborhood of Caxton, but no further. Matters had reached this stage when another man also disappeared—the very man whom the poor girl had feared might murder her husband. Yet, judging from the tale she was told, her dream was a contradiction; for her husband had been arrested, and was now held on suspicion of having murdered his partner.

"He, her lover-husband, had been grievously wounded, lying unconscious when he was found; but in a pocket of his coat was a diary which coolly recounted in a cypher easily read by experts the details of the two murders already accomplished, even jotting down a memorandum of the spot where the bodies of his victims (the young men who had recently disappeared) were buried.

"Instantly the girl knew that there had been a terrible plot, but even she could not guess the whole. She had given in the office of the hotel a common name, calling herself 'Mrs. Smith,' or something of the sort, and her face, pale and haggard with illness, anxiety, and the fatigue of her long, hurried journey, was not as striking in its beauty as it had been before.

"She said that she was a distant relative of the suspected murderer, who had been brought to Caxton only that morning to lie in the infirmary attached to the town jail, awaiting his trial. She begged for an interview with the prisoner, and as there was little difficulty in the Far West in those days about granting such a request to a pretty woman, she obtained her wish.

"The poor fellow had been badly wounded, but he was conscious, and was between joy and sorrow at the sight of his wife. They were not allowed to see each other alone, but the thought that she had come to him and loved him, believing him, despite the evidence which others accepted almost without question, gave new strength and courage. He determined that when he had to stand his trial for murder he would make a brave fight for his life.

"But that very night an infuriated mob who believed him guilty and feared that he would not be hanged after all broke open the jail, and took the prisoner out to lynch him. His wife heard the noise, and learnt what was going on from the landlord's son, a reckless fellow who was for hurrying out to see the fun. She had brought with her on her journey several thousand dollars which she had saved, and she offered the young man half if he would save the prisoner and help him to escape. It was a big bribe for him; and by raising an alarm that the soldiers were coming from a military garrison not many miles away the trick was done. The mob was robbed of its victim, the rescuer let the lady know that her 'relative' was safe, and in a few days aided her to join him.

"But the great excitement and exertion brought on a relapse, and for weeks her husband lay at death's door. They lived in a rough cabin with scarcely the necessaries of life, much less the delicacies needed by an invalid; still, love and faithful nursing pulled him through to a pale semblance of returning health. And there at that little cabin their child was born—a son."

"You were the child!" exclaimed the Comtesse, all her affectations forgotten in her interest.

"Yes, you have guessed it. I was the child. And before I had lived a year my father was dead—but not before he had told the true story of the ending of that fatal partnership to my mother.

"His partner and he slept in the same room, and he could hear the other saying strange things in his sleep. His suspicions were roused against the man he had believed in, and he began to associate him with the mysterious disappearances which were so much talked of in the neighborhood. The man said something in his sleep about a 'grave under the red trees,' and my father hap-

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are:—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey:—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4.05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5.23
	100.00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons of ore above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows:—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4.00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows:—

	ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902, to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2.70
July 1st, 1903, " " 1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904, " " 1905	1.65	1.65
July 1st, 1905, " " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906, " " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows:—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6½ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000.00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000.00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to .... $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is .... $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is ...... $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

Wild Animals I Do Not Want to Know.

In the days of the Ark, they of the animal kingdom were admitted, two by two, on suffrance. In Paradise, they sported at harmless, mythical ease, untroubled by man and his theories. But the antediluvian days passed by. The animals became as man, knowing good and evil, and having, moreover, ways of their own. It all began with the flood. Up to that time they were roughly classed as "cattle and everything after their kind." They were to be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth, and man was to rule over them. So went they into the Ark, two by two; but so, alas, came they not out. They have been fruitful; they have multiplied, and filled the earth; and to-day man, their master, is prostrate before them. He studies their ways, prowling through underbrush, on all fours, to observe them sporting on their native heath. He wriggles on his stomach. No position is too humble for him, no attitude too cramped. He is gathering material for the next new popular book on animals.

One cannot help wondering a little how it has come about. Hints of it crop out in the Old Testament—after the flood. The animals are no longer creeping things and cattle after their kind. They are found taking on names and a certain individuality. There is the ram caught by its horns to serve in place of Isaac on the altar of sacrifice, and the bears that eat up bad little children, and the Ass that speaks, and the Lions of Daniel, and the Whale of Jonah. All these are historical personages, with David and Saul and Noah—with the strange winged creature of Ezekiel, and Apocalyptical visions of beasts with heads and horns and crowns and candlesticks and Scarlet Women.

The biblical writers did not hesitate, it would seem, to draw on the animal kingdom when necessary to make clear the ways of God to man. With a fine disregard of zoology and fact, they drove home the truth. And their words live even to this day. But animal lore has changed. We are asked to give up Jonah and the whale, as being a tax on credulity. We are offered, in place of it, either "Wild Animals That I Have Known" or "The Outcasts." The bears of Elijah the prophet are replaced by "The Bears of Blue River" by the author of "When Knighthood Was in Flower." And Balaam's Ass becomes a Coyote whose favorite message is "Yip-ki-ki—Yah!"

Imagination, like Jerushun, has waxed fat and kicks.

Perhaps the Jungle Books did it. Aesop is too far away and too excellent to be held responsible for the hordes let loose on us. Like the biblical animals of old, the animals of Aesop existed for a purpose—flashlights on the heart of man. The cunning fox and the brave lion and the foolish wolf existed to point a moral and adorn a tale. This done, they disappeared once more in the brushwood of fancy whence they came. The Jungle Books too have their master-word—the Law of the Jungle. It shines through them.

But these newer animals—what shall one say of them?—the deer and the caribou and the buffalo and the horse and the bull-terrier and the fawn and the doe and the moose and the buck and the spike-horn and the fox and the wolf-dog and the canary bird. They bring neither the nutty kernel of Aesop nor the fresh, sweet smell of the Jungle. Made up in equal parts of fact and straining imagination, they have no message of beauty or of truth.

Who that has once known him will forget Kaa, the wise old serpent, or Bagheera, leaping with light paws at the time of the spring running, or Mowgli, crossing the moonlight with Gray Brothers at his heels and the skin of Shere Khan poised deftly on his swaying head? But who shall hope to remember the new ones?—Jennette Barbour Perry in "Critic."

The Sons of Poets.

The "Lancet," the well-known English medical weekly, has been enquiring into the question of the transmission of genius from father to son, and has found that the sons of great poets are generally dull dogs. Poetic fervor is evidently a spiritual flame that burns itself out in the generation wherein it is kindled. Indeed, it often seems to burn out the very aptitude for paternity; or is it that the poet is generally too poor to permit himself the delight of fatherhood? However it may be, many eminent English poets can never be accused of having "dull dogs" of sons, because they never had any sons at all. Cowley, Butler, Otway, Prior, Congreve, Gay, Phillips, Savage, Thomson, Collins, Shenstone, Akenside, Goldsmith, Grey, Johnson, and Keats all died without leaving offspring, and Pope, Swift, Watts, and Cowper were never married. Dryden's, Addison's and Parnell's descendants did not pass into the second generation, and the descendants of Shakespeare and Milton became extinct in the second and third generations. Sir Walter Scott's baronetcy expired with his son.

A Weather-Man's Invention.

Partly, no doubt, in recognition of the obduracy of climate, Professor Moore, chief of the United States Weather Bureau, has invented and patented a cold-air stove, of which the newspapers give descriptions. Being charged once a day with some sort of composition, the stove works automatically. The air inside of it getting cold, sinks and passes out through a pipe in the bottom. Warmer air runs in at the top, and so a current of air keeps running through the machine. The air comes out at a temperature of about 36 degrees. The warmer the room, the faster the machine works. It will reduce the temperature of a room to about 64 degrees. If the room is cooler than that there is no current, and the stove doesn't work. Besides cooling the air, it takes the dust out of it, and delivers it not only chilled, but clean. A stove twelve feet high turns out 125 feet of cold air a minute, which is enough to cool a hospital ward.

The inventor thinks his stove will be of great use to hospitals, which find serious difficulty in keeping sick patients comfortable in hot weather. No doubt, too, if it turns out well, it may be used in office buildings, and possibly in hotels and restaurants. It is possible that it may prove more satisfactory than the fans which are used so much, and, if so, there are commercial prospects for it.

A Complete Rest.

Tipton shut down the roll-top desk in his private office with a bang, threw a last derelict envelope into the waste-basket, and turning with smiling face to the clerks who had gathered in a little group to bid him good-bye, said:

"Well, boys, I'm off. Keep your end up while I am gone, and remember this: I don't want to hear a word from you. Don't send me any mail. Don't try to reach me by wire or telephone, even if the building burns down. I'm going away for a real vacation, where I won't be disturbed."

Then he shook hands all around, and hurried off to join his wife at the railway station.

The usual excitement incident to the departure of a train was successfully lived through. As they sped out into the open country, Tipton looked at Mrs. Tipton with a fond, exultant look.

"There, my dear," he said; "we're off at last! For the first time in years I am going to do the sensible thing. I'm going to lose myself. No mail. No messages. Complete rest. I wonder why I never thought of it before?"

"I'm so glad," said Mrs. Tipton, "that you've come to your senses at last. This will do you a world of good, I know."

In the course of a few hours they alighted at their station. Then they were driven miles and miles—it seemed almost interminable—until they came in sight of the quiet little hotel—or rather inn—on the mountainside, where they were received with all the splendor of courtesy that only a rural hotel-keeper knows how to bestow.

Tipton could scarcely wait to get into his outing clothes. An hour later they were strolling down through the quiet woods to the bank of the stream that chippered away to the music of the breeze.

"Could anything," murmured Tipton, "be finer?"

He pressed his wife's hand. "This is rest. This is true solitude. When I think of that maddening city, I wonder how I could ever have lived there. I never want to go back again."

The next morning after a fine breakfast—for our friend had made sure of his place—Tipton strolled out and said good morning to the proprietor.

"Well, sir," said the proprietor, "how do you like our little view?"

"Great!" exclaimed Tipton. "It certainly is a charming spot. By the way, you don't happen to have any of the New York papers here, do you?"

"Not regularly," said the proprietor. "You see, this is a place where folks come to rest, and we don't have much call for 'em."

"Certainly not," said Tipton. "Precisely. Thought I would just like to glance over the head lines, that's all."

He joined his wife, who was walking in the near view.

"This is a great place to rest," he observed, somewhat tritely, as they walked off toward the stream. "Never was in a place quite like this. Couldn't even get a morning paper."

Mrs. Tipton looked at him suspiciously.

"Now, dear," she said, "that isn't fair. You must forget the world."

At noon Tipton sought the proprietor once more.

His face wore a shade of anxiety. He clutched his cigar nervously.

"You don't happen to have a telegraph or a long-distance telephone near here, do you?" he asked. "Fact is, I came away yesterday and forgot an important matter."

"No, sir!" said the proprietor. "We haven't such things around. This, as you know, is a place for complete rest, as advertised."

"Very well, sir," said Tipton, "you can make out my bill."

He glared fiercely around him, and walked upstairs to his room.

"My dear," he said, "would you mind if we got out of this prehistoric place on the first train?"

Mrs. Tipton gazed at him blankly for a moment, and threw her arms around his neck.

"Mind!" she exclaimed. "Why, I was only staying here for your sake. I didn't dare say how lonesome I was! I am afraid, my dear, we have never lived in the country long enough to appreciate it."

Two hours later they were in the dining car of the Long Branch express, with the remains of a feast and a cold bottle between them.

"I've wired the boys to send me the mail," said Tipton. "I will talk with the cashier over the wire as soon as we get in. I see the market opened up strong this morning. And now, if you will excuse me, I'll step into the smoking room with this bundle of papers and catch up on twenty-four hours' lost time."—Tom Masson, in "Life."

Herbert Spencer on "Americanisms."

Mr. Herbert Spencer's recent protest against what he called "Americanisms" concludes thus: "Perhaps a little might be done if in return for criticisms on Americanisms like those passed above, Americans were systematically to expose deteriorations in the language as spoken here. They might, for example, mercilessly ridicule that vulgar misuse of the word 'awfully,' which has now continued for more than a generation."

A correspondent of the London "Spectator" adds: "This reminds me of the following rather good story told to me by a friend now deceased. A certain distinguished philosopher happened to be staying at a country house in which my friend was also a guest, and one morning a youngster looking out of the window, observing a large flock of rooks alighting on the grass, cried out: 'What an awful lot of crows!' upon which the philosopher, in a tone intending to convey a gentle rebuke, enquiringly said: 'Well, my young friend, are crows really so very awful?' The boy quickly answered: 'I didn't say, "What a lot of awful crows," but "What an awful lot of crows!"' The philosopher remained silent, and the boy whispered to my friend: 'Had him that time, I think, sir!' This is a true story."

"Do you believe in heredity?" "Certainly; I know a barber who has three little shavers."—Ex.

Now is the Last Chance to Buy the St. Paul & Sunset Oil

COMPANY'S STOCK AT 35 CENTS

California Oil Stocks Have Paid Millions in Dividends

KERN COUNTY (SUNSET DISTRICT) OIL COMPANIES PAID

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS IN AUGUST ALONE

MORGAN IN THE OIL INDUSTRY--NEW YORK FINANCIER AT THE HEAD OF A $20,000,000 COMPANY TO EXPLOIT CALIFORNIA FIELDS

Bakersfield, Cal., Sept. 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan is about to identify himself with the oil business in California. On October 12, or a few days later, surveyors will be put into the field, and will run lines to the ocean from Sunset, Coaling, McKittrick, Midway and Kern River fields to determine by which route it is most feasible to transport oil to tide water. The surveys will run over the coast range at a number of points, and also will go down the San Joaquin valley parallel with the line of the Standard.

A company having a capitalization of $5,000,000 has been organized for the construction of lines, pumping stations, storage tanks, and the like. Mr. Morgan and his associates have also formed a separate company, capitalized at $30,000,000, half of which will be invested in proven ground and the other half turned into a reserve fund.

It is stated that the Morgan syndicate will be prepared to handle 2,000,000 barrels the first year, and will increase that amount at the rate of 1,000,000 a year until the whole demand of the market is met.

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY own and control a large tract of absolutely oil proven asphalt land in the very heart of the best oil producing land of Kern County, California, the district where flowing wells are situated. We have a bed of Liquid Asphalt underlying a portion of our lands. Our property is situated right at Sunset Station. A new line of railway is surveyed and will be constructed in a very short time, putting us not only in touch with Eastern cities, but in touch with tide-water. This, in addition to the railroad facilities we now have. Remember that we own our land—it is paid for and entirely free from debt.

ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL CO.'S GIGANTIC TRACT

will be developed and should prove a formidable rival for the new company.

PROFESSOR DR. RUD J. SCHIMPER, Analytical and Expert Chemist, of St. Paul, makes the following statement relative to the composition, what can be produced and the estimated profits of the Sunset Crude Oil. A copy of the original certificate can be seen at the office of the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co., which is in substance as follows:

"This is to certify that the undersigned, Dr. Rudolph J. Schimper, Chemist expert, member of Parisian Academy, according to analysis made from the crude oil furnished me by the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company, I find the following valuable products and with each beg to submit my estimate of its value:

1. LIQUID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 1,800 lbs. of liquid rubber, value of which is from 25c. per lb. and up. (Estimated value $450.00.)
2. SOLID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls) will produce 1,700 lbs. of solid rubber, value of which is from 50c. upwards. (Estimated value $450.00.)
3. FUEL BRIQUETTES—2000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 2,000 lbs. (1 ton) of fuel briquettes, which, according to government tests made, is equivalent to two tons of best anthracite coal. (Estimated value $22.00)
4. ASPHALTUM—2,000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce ½ ton of asphaltum, value $25 to $35 per ton. 25 gal. of lubricating oil, value 50c. per gal. and upward. 40 gal. illuminating oil, value 10c per gal. and up. 60 gal. of distilled oil. value 5c. per gal. and upward. (Estimated value $64.50.)
5. SOAP—2000 lbs. (1 ton) of crude oil and filling will produce over 2,000 lbs. of soap, value 3c. per lb. and upward. (Estimated value $60.00.)

In my opinion many other valuable products can be obtained from the oil of that famous field.

Respectfully, DR. R. J. SCHIMPER, Chemist Expert."

THIS goes to show the immense profits that will accrue from our products when refined. We expect to commence Building Our Refinery in the very near future. The sale of the next allotment of stock will be made for that purpose. The largest flowing wells in California were brought in adjoining our property and their stock was taken off the market. We employ the best drillers who report rapid progress on our wells and we expect to bring in gushers equal, if not to excel any in the Sunset field. Our General Manager, Superintendent and Drillers, all are experienced oil men. The officers of our company are all thorough, competent and efficient men who have always made a success of their undertaking in life and who will see that the welfare of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company is furthered, portected and promoted to the most advantageous extent possible.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS SHOULD BE PAID STOCKHOLDERS.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS should be paid to the stockholders of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company when their property is fully developed, their refinery equipped and in full operation. ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS was paid by Kern County Oil Companies during the month of August alone.

SIX MILLION BARRELS is the consuming capacity of the Southern Pacific Railway engines, which are now equipped for burning oil. Outside of this consider other railway lines, smelters, factories, steamships, stationery engines, which are all heavy consumers of fuel oil and last but not least, hotels and private dwellings are falling in line with the procession in the use of fuel oil.

A GOOD REASON WHY YOU Should invest in the stock of St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company. More fortunes have been made in oil than any other business. Consider the immense amount of money the Standard Oil Company has made for its fortunate stockholders, and the California oil companies have done better in proportion to their capitalization than the Standard Oil Company. Here is what $100 has accomplished for those who invested that amount in the following California companies in the beginning of their career:

Home Whittier $1,000 on an investment of $100.
Kern returned $2,200 on an investment of $100.
Peerless returned $1,800 on an investment of $100.
Dillon returned $2,500 on an investment of $100.
New York returned $30,000 on an investment of $100.
Union returned $150,000 on an investment of $100.
Home returned $50,000 on an investment of $100.

THERE is no reason in the world why the St. Paul and Sunset Company's oil holdings and property, when developed and handled, should not bring like returns.

CONTRARY to the general supposition the earth is the repository of all mineral wealth. When it is known and demonstrated beyond a question of a doubt where its wealth reposes and you put your money up to take it out, your money is invested. Hence you are an investor, not a speculator. A proven oil producing property does not draw its profits from the people but creates new wealth. It is therefore an investment.

Wonderful Increase in Value of Oil Stocks.

The rapid rise in the value of shares in some oil companies will be seen from the following table:	Original price per share	Present Market price
Black Mountain Oil Co	$ .05	$ 1.50
Central Oil Co	.30	1.50
Home Oil Co. Whittier	.25	2.00
Monte Cristo Co	.10	2.00
West Shore Co	.50	4.00
Twenty-eighth Oil Co	.50	2.50
Fullerton Consolidated Oil Company	.50	1.90
Sterling Oil & Development Company	.50	2.25
Dillon Oil Co	.25	3.00
Peerless Co	.30	9.62
San Joaquin Oil Co	.50	16.00
Kern Oil Co	.35	10.00
Thirty-three Oil Co	.35	11.50
Kern River Oil Co	.50	26.00
New York Oil Co	.50	30.00
Oil City Petroleum Co	2.50	34.00
Hanford Oil Co	2.00	120.00
Kreyenhagen Oil Co	.10	250.00
Columbia Oil Co	100.00	400.00
Union Oil Co	1.00	1200.00
Home Oil Co	300.00	2000.00

The time will come in the near future when stock in St. Paul and Sunset Oil Co., should bring prices equal to the last.

WE CLAIM NOTHING WE CANNOT PROVE TO BE TRUE

BRIEFLY, OUR PROPOSITION IS THIS: THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY

owns its immense tract of proven Oil Land—without a penny of incumbrance. The property is located in the most wonderful and richest oil producing section in the world, in the famous Sunset District of Kern County, California. Other Oil Companies in Kern county have paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in dividends—and today their stock cannot be bought at any price. These companies in many instances have less property, and in some cases are only lessors, not owning refinery, tanks, lines, etc.

A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THIS STOCK WILL BE SOLD AT 35c. PER SHARE, PAR VALUE $1.00.

BUY NOW. THIS STOCK WILL BE ADVANCED TO 50c WITHIN THE NEXT 30 DAYS

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY

will erect their own refinery, etc. are now owners of the property they are developing, employ the best drillers in the whole State of California. The manager is an old and experienced oil man who has been connected with large California companies. The officers are all successful and reliable business men, who are investors—the same as every other stockholder. And the company, with plenty of ready capital, proposes to make the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co. a leader in the field and to develop their property to the fullest extent that money and brains will permit.

The first orders received will be the first ones to be filled. In case we are unable to fill your orders at 35c. your money will be refunded. Send Orders and Remittances to

NOT TO TAKE OVER RHODESIA

Official Denial That This Is One of the Objects of Chamberlain's Trip

London, Nov. 21.—The Exchange Telegraph Company says it has been officially authorized to state that the reports that one of the main objects of Mr. Chamberlain's visit to South Africa is to arrange for the Government taking over the territories of the British Chartered Company and also for the administration of Rhodesia as a Crown Colony are unauthorized and untrue. Mr. Chamberlain does not expect to be able to visit Rhodesia in the time at his disposal.

LORD SHOLTO SAYS SHE'S INSANE

Has His Mother-in-Law Arrested for Trying to Burn His Home

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—Mrs. Margaret Mooney, mother-in-law of Lord Sholto Douglass, has been arrested for insanity at the instance of her son. He says she tried to burn the house down and has also threatened to exterminate her family.

Mrs. Mooney gained much notoriety when her daughter married Lord Sholto, as she gave reporters very picturesque interviews. Lord Sholto tried the saloon business in Spokane, but when his father, the Marquis of Queensberry, died, he was recalled to England. He celebrated his departure by inviting the public to his saloon and setting up free drinks until all the liquor was consumed. It was a red-letter night for Spokane bummers.

GREAT BRITAIN'S DEBT

One Hundred and Thirty Million Pounds on Account of War

London, Nov. 21.—An official return issued by the British Government shows that the national debt on March 31 last was £768,442,386, of which £130,000,000 represented the cost of the South African war. Since 1836 war has added nearly £300,000,000 to Britain's debt. In 1836 the debt was £852,172,847, a far greater burden then, when the national wealth, population, etc., are taken into account, than it would be now. The debt reached its lowest point in the last sixty years in 1899, when it totalled £635,040,-968. An interesting fact gleaned from the return is the multiplication of the value of the Suez Canal shares, that splendid investment of the late Earl of Beaconsfield. Purchased in 1876 for £3,-632,046, they are now valued at £27,936,-000.

Mr. James Dolan has a hen that has been working overtime during the present year, and has just brought out a third batch of chickens, having hatched them under the verandah. Mr. Dolan says that his hen is of Irish descent, and believes in raising large families.

MANY CHOLERA VICTIMS

Fifty Seven Deaths in Three Days at Gaza and Lydda

London, Nov. 21—Despatches from Constantinople says a proved case of Asiatic cholera ended fatally at Jerusalem yesterday. The disease is spreading with great virulence at Jaffa. There have been fifty-seven deaths in three days at Gaza and Lydda, where the population is being decimated. The authorities are fleeing in all directions.

TO MINE MOLYBDENITE

A $2,000,000 Company Being Formed to Operate in Haliburton

Toronto Star: It is probable that a year will see the establishment of another branch of mining in Haliburton county. The new branch is the production of molybdenite, which is used in tempering steel, and which effects a great saving on the usual process of using silver. Mr. C. M. McArthur, of Fenelon Falls, was in the city on Wednesday on his way to Chicago, accompanied by C. E. Taylor, of the Windy City, and these two gentlemen expect shortly to float a company capitalized at $2,000,000 to work their claims in Haliburton. Their claims number 23, covering about 3,000 acres.

PLENTY OF COAL

Canada to be Taken Care of Says the Railway Company

Buffalo, Nov. 20.—J. J. McWilliams, local sales agents for the D., L. & W. whose office is in the Dun building said this noon:

"While coal consumers cannot get all the coal they need, there is no need of anyone suffering for want of it. At present the lake trade is unusually heavy. The coal must be delivered to the lake ports before the close of navigation, as there are many that are not reached by railroad at all. When this trade is over, more coal than ever will be thrown into Buffalo for local consumption. But of course Canada will have to be taken care of just as soon as the lake trade closes."

Free to Our Subscribers

Subscribers to the Daily and also to the Weekly Times who will pay up arrears and also pay a year in advance, will be presented with a magnificent picture of the Coronation of Their Majesties, King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra—(size 22x28, printed in 14 colors). They are splendid prints, and will serve as mementos of that great historical event. The picture is now to be seen at The Times Bookstore.

DUST CLOUD IN AUSTRALIA

ONE RESULT OF THE SEVEN-YEAR DROUGHT THERE

Gale Sweeps Over the Parched Land Carrying Up Large Quantities of Red Dust—Day Turned Into Night—Lightning Accompanies the Storm but no Rain

Sydney, N.S.W., Nov. 21—The southern parts of Australia have been visited by unprecedently violent dust storms, the dryness which has prevailed for seven years reaching its climax this year. The terribly destructive drought has destroyed the herbage in large areas, laying the land bare.

A heavy gale yesterday raised immense quantities of dust from these tracts and drove vast clouds of red powdered earth far and wide. The atmosphere was oppressive and it was hardly possible to breathe. The darkness was intense while the dust clouds were passing.

The inhabitants of numerous towns were badly frightened by the darkness and hid in their houses. Artificial light was necessary in the streets of Melbourne, where there was also much ball lightning which ignited several buildings.

It was very dark in Sydney. The clouds extended twelve miles seaward. The railroads in some places were blocked by heaps of dust. After the wind subsided the atmosphere was brilliantly pink and the temperature fell suddenly. No rain has fallen.

MANDARIN LOSES HIS HEAD

He was Responsible for the Death of Two English Missionaries

Pekin, Nov. 21—The Military Mandarin Lien Lian Yu of Chenchou-fu, in the province of Honan, who was responsible for the murder of the English missionaries, Bruce and Lewis, last August, was put to death yesterday at Chenmha, in the presence of the British consular representatives.

BOER GENERALS NOT COMING.

Brussels, Nov. 21—Gens. Botha and Delarey are apparently not going to the United States. The Petit Bleu prints an interview with Gen. Delarey to the effect that he and Gen. Botha have decided to return to South Africa, where they will meet Mr. Chamberlain, the British Colonial Secretary, at Pretoria, for the purpose of explaining the situation to him.

SPECULATORS IN OIL

$2,300 of Lakefield Money Floated in Oil

There is some anxiety in certain speculative quarters of the progressive village of Lakefield regarding a recent investment made in the Texas Oil Wells. It seems that Mr. T. H. Benson, late manager of the Linton Bank, was the chief promoter of the scheme. Two gentlemen were sent down to Texas where the oil wells, which the Company had in view of purchasing, were situated. Dr. Baker, one of the gentlemen who went south on the inspection, advised the purchase of the property which was to cost $2,300. This amount was raised by Lakefield subscribers and supposed to have been paid to the owners of the oil wells. It is now alleged in Lakefield that only $1,100 of this was handed over and that the remaining $1,200 is not accounted for. Dr. Baker, who will be able to throw some light on the matter, is in the back country shooting, and his arrival home is anxiously awaited, when it is expected that all matters will be satisfactorily explained.

—St. Mark's Church will have a fowl supper in the Forester's hall, Otonabee, tonight.

THE BOGUS CHECK ARTIST

The Man Who Skinned Peterborough Merchants Still at Large

The fellow who worked off a number of bogus checks here, is still at large and has been getting in his fine work in Brantford, Guelph and other places.

The Brantford Courier says: The fellow of many aliases stepped on to the G.T.R. platform Saturday morning and at once commenced his plan of campaign. It is said he came from Harrisburg, for a man passing through on the train saw him changing his garb. At any rate when he arrived here he presented the picture of a quiet, unassuming agriculturalist, with small cap, sweater and blue overalls. Before he had left town Saturday night he had succeeded in doing up probably a dozen or more local merchants. Already six have confessed and likely many others have decided that in view of the circumstances silence is the wisest policy.

On Saturday Night

Mr. Bradburn, manager of the Opera House, received the following telegram from Dunlop & Hutcheroff, managers of the Opera House, Guelph:—

"Osborne Faust gave satisfactory performance. Scenery and electrical effects superb.

Your Hair

"Two years ago my hair was falling out badly. I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and soon my hair stopped coming out."
Miss Minnie Hoover, Paris, Ill.

Perhaps your mother had thin hair, but that is no reason why you must go through life with half-starved hair. If you want long, thick hair, feed it with Ayer's Hair Vigor, and make it rich, dark, and heavy.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

If your druggist cannot supply you, send us one dollar and we will express you a bottle. Be sure and give the name of your nearest express office. Address, J. C. AYER CO., Lowell, Mass.

DISTRICT NEWS

KEENE.

—Miss Susie Campbell, of Peterborough was calling on friends here on Wednesday.

—We are pleased to learn that Mr. Wm. Pullyblank has secured a situation in Strathcona, N.W.T., and hope he will be successful in his new home.

—Mrs. Thomas Mather died at the family residence, Otonabee, on Sunday. The deceased was 81 years of age at the time of her death and resided in Otonabee all her life. The funeral on Tuesday to the Pine Grove cemetery was very largely attended.

—The farmers are drawing large quantities of grain to Mr. C. Leith's elevator at the station.

—Mrs. Roach leaves for Buffalo in a few days, where she will spend the winter.

—The temperance people in this section are working hard to secure the passage of the referendum.

—It is rumored that there is a movement on foot to have street lamps in the village. We trust that it will be successfully carried out.

—Mr. Crowly, of Peterboro, was visiting at Mr. Edward Foley's for a few days this week.

—Pig killing is nearly over in the village for this fall. Mr. P. Roach does the job quickly and neatly.

—The roads in this section are in bad condition on account of the frequent rains.

INDIAN RIVER.

—Mr. Edward and Michael Fitzgerald, of Peterborough, visited with his brothers here on Sunday last.

—Mr. William McManus and Miss K. Marquis drove through the village on Sunday last.

—Mr. Daniel McKenty, of Vancouver is here at present to celebrate his wedding on Tuesday next.

—A number of our sports took in the wedding of Miss Fanny Quinlan on Tuesday, the 11th inst.

Miss Annie O'Keefe of Havelock, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. John O'Grady.

—The citizens of Indian River are glad to see Mr. A. Whibbs progressing rapidly from his recent sickness.

—A story told by our three deer hunters, Messrs. Launergan, O'Leary and Leahy:—They arrived at Longford, their hunting grounds, on the 1st of November, and cast their tent in a cosy spot. Mr. O'Leary, who is a mighty hunter and woodsman, set out the first afternoon in search of rabbits, partridges and such. Luckily he killed many of the same and returned to camp. Mr. Launergan, who was chief cook as well as butcher and ripper, stewed the rabbits and partridge which had been killed, and all three partook of a hearty supper. The second day they left very early in the morning, Mr. Leahy taking the hounds as he was the most experienced at putting them on the trail. When evening had come they failed to find Leahy. They searched for three days but all in vain. They finally came to the conclusion that he had captured a deer and made his escape to New Ontario; but to their great surprise he arrived in camp after the two had partaken of a very hearty supper. This is the most important event in their story, while the two deers which O'Leary and Launergan had captured in past years were very glad to see their two Johns, and have them tell of this pleasant hunting trip.

W. J. PEARSON

Simla, Nov. 21—The British expedition under Gen. Egerton against the rebellious Wazaris on the Afghan frontier entered the Kabul Khel country yesterday.

A large section of the Waziris became alarmed and sent representatives to the British commander to ask for terms of peace.

The fourth column on the Waziri expedition has met with determined opposition. The commander of the column, Col. Tremocky, has been badly wounded. Major Beresford, the second in command, has asked for reinforcements. The Political Officer at Gumatti has promised to send all available assistance to him.

Reporter Wanted

A young man, with a good education, wanted as reporter on The Times. Apply at the business office.

—Writing paper, only four cents per quire at The Times Bookstore.

Mainly About People.

"What can we do with Rosslyn?" Disraeli once asked of Salisbury. "Make him master of the buckhounds, as his father was," suggested the latter. "No," replied the Premier, "he swears far too much for that. We will make him high commissioner to the Church of Scotland."

Senator Proctor of Vermont says the finest speech he ever made consisted of only four words. It was a retort to Senator Hoar's sarcastic little thrust in a speech directed at the Green Mountain senator. He said: "No man in Vermont is allowed to vote unless he has made five thousand dollars trading with Massachusetts people." Whereat Proctor said: "And we all vote."

The principal of a high school tells the following anecdote: One day at school I gave a bright boy a sum in algebra, and, although the problem was comparatively easy, he couldn't do it. I remarked, "You ought to be ashamed of yourself. At your age George Washington was a surveyor." The boy looked me straight in the eyes and replied, "Yes, sir; and at your age he was President of the United States."

A good story comes from the Davidson Theater, in Chicago, and runs to the effect that a man from up the State went in to see the opera the other night, pulling his money from his pocket before he reached the box-office window. "I want tew git a good seat," he said, loud enough to be heard all over the lobby of the theater, "and I want it right down the middle lane, and close up tew the exercises." He got it.

A hunting party of ladies and gentlemen were detained by a storm at the hut of a Virginia backwoodsman. Dinner being served, there was an embarrassing paucity of knives. The mother, wishing to impress her aristocratic guests, called in a commanding tone to her young daughter, "Fetch some more knives, Sairey; you know we've got thousands of 'em." "Law, no, ma'm; they're all thar! Thar's 'Big Butch,' and 'Little Butch,' and 'Razor-Back,' and 'Bunty.'"

David Lloyd-George, a member of Parliament from Wales, tells a good story on himself in connection with a Disestablishment meeting in which he has been taking part in Wales. A few days previous, it seems, there had been a Church Defence meeting held in the same place, at which a certain prominent dignitary of the Establishment had spoken, referring to whom Mr. Lloyd-George's chairman observed: "In my opinion that Churchman is one of the biggest liars in North Wales, but, thank goodness, we've got a match for him here to-night!"

"Chums" tells of a certain wild beast tamer who had been on bad terms for some time with one of his neighbors, and the other day, as the result of a violent quarrel, the latter, with a friend, attacked the former just before he was timed to give his performance. The tamer, unwilling to make a scene, took refuge in the lion's den. Judge of the amusement of the spectators when they beheld the two men standing in front of the cage and shouting through the bars at regular intervals: "Come out of that, you big coward; come out of that!"

Some little while ago a rather eccentric cotton manufacturer, owning large mills not a score of miles from Halifax, England, and who was familiarly known in the district round about as "Owd H——," overheard one of the lads in his employ remark to somebody: "Aw wish Aw hed 'Owd H——'s' brass, an' he wor i' th' warkhause." Quickly retiring, "Owd H——" sent for the offender into his office, and asked him what he would do with the money, supposing his wish were to be fulfilled. The youngster was quite equal to the occasion, promptly replying: "Whoy, th' furst thing Aw'd do wod be ta fotch yo aat (out), maister." This clever reply so appeased the old gentleman that the boy was sent back to his work with half a sovereign in his pocket.

The other afternoon, says the New York "Tribune," when President Roosevelt reached Dupont Circle, a "seeing Washington" electric car hove in sight, and the guide continued his lecture through a megaphone in this way: "On the left we see the elegant residence of Mr. George Westinghouse, the millionaire inventor and electrician, formerly the home of the late James G. Blaine; a little to the left of front we perceive the palatial mansion of Mr. L. Z. Leiter, the Chicago millionaire, and father of the famous beauty, Miss Mary Leiter, now Lady Curzon, the wife of the Governor-General of India; in the park in front we are confronted by the statue of Admiral Dupont, and also in front we see the President of the United States on horseback." The crowd looked, and one woman said, "Whose statue is it, McKinley's?" "It's Roosevelt," the guide responded. "He ain't a statue yet."

Something Wrong With the Shammy.

There is a prominent doctor in Germantown who is busy telling a little joke on himself, says the Philadelphia "Evening Telegraph." It appears that he employed an Irish servant who had just arrived from the "ould sod." Starting out one morning, he noticed his office windows were rather dirty, and calling Bridget, he instructed her to clean them before he returned. At the same time he told her that he would stop and purchase a new chamois skin and send it home, and with this she was to clean the windows. After he had gone his rounds he found them thickly streaked with grease. He called Bridget, and the following colloquy took place:

"Bridget, didn't I tell you to clean the windows?"

"Yes, sor."

"And didn't I tell you to use the new chamois?"

"Yes, sor."

"Well, did you use it?"

"Sure I did, sor."

"Let me see the chamois," said the doctor, and Bridget promptly brought it. Then for the first time he learned that his wife had left the house a half hour before he did in the morning and had sent home some tripe. The doctor declines to say what happened to the chamois skin.

Little gobs of powder,
Little specks of paint,
Make the little Freckle
Look as if it ain't.

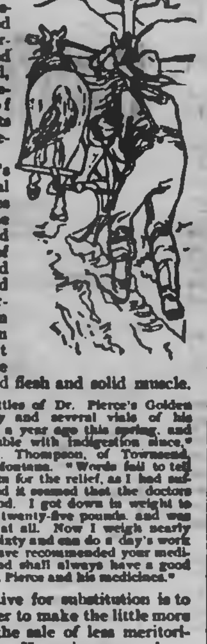
Jack—It is mighty hard to be the son of a self-made millionaire. Tom—Why so? Jack—A fellow can't decide whether to go into business and live up to his father's reputation, or go into society and live it down.—"Town Topics."

A Fine Photo

A very large sized photo of the Ketchecum Hunt Club, of Peterborough, adorns the window of the Kingan Co's Hardware Store on George street. Seventeen members of the club, eleven fine deer, some deer skins and three hounds are brought plainly to view in the picture, which is a credit to the artist, Mr. Roy's photographer, who was one of the party.

THE FARMER FAILS

In health just as does the city-man, and he fails commonly from the same cause, "stomach trouble." The farm is a wholesome place to live; the farmer's life is a healthy life; but no external advantages can overcome the effects of a diseased stomach. When the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition are diseased, the food eaten is imperfectly digested and assimilated, and the consequent loss of nutrition results in physical debility.



Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food. It builds up the body with sound flesh and solid muscle.

"I used ten bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and several vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' a year ago this spring, and have had no trouble with indigestion since," writes Mr. W. T. Thompson, of Townsend, Broadwater Co., Montana. "Words fail to tell how thankful I am for the relief, as I had suffered so much and it seemed that the doctors could do me no good. I got down in weight to one hundred and twenty-five pounds, and was not able to work at all. Now I weigh nearly one hundred and sixty and can do a day's work on the farm. I have recommended your medicine to several, and shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Pierce and his medicines."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose, therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

TENDERS FOR SUPPLIES. 1903

The undersigned will receive tenders up to noon on MONDAY, 24TH, INST., for supplies of butchers' meat, creamery butter, flour, oatmeal, potatoes, cordwood, etc., for the following institutions during the year 1903, viz:—

At the Asylums for the Insane in Toronto, London, Kingston, Hamilton, Mimico, Brockville, Cobourg and Orillia; the Central Prison and Mercer Reformatory Toronto; the Reformatory for Boys, Penetanguishene; the Institutions for Deaf and Dumb, Belleville, and the blind at Brantford.

Exception—Tenders are not required for the supply of meat to the asylums in Toronto, London, Kingston, Hamilton and Brockville, nor for the Central Prison and Mercer Reformatory, Toronto.

A marked cheque for five per cent. of the estimated amount of the contract, payable to the order of the Honourable the Provincial Secretary, must be furnished by each tenderer as a guarantee of his bona fides. Two sufficient sureties will be required for the due fulfillment of each contract, and should any tender be withdrawn before the contract is awarded, or should the tenderer fail to furnish such security, the amount of the deposit will be forfeited.

Specifications and forms of tender may be had on application to the Department of the Provincial Secretary, Toronto, or to the Bursars of the respective institutions.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Newspapers inserting this advertisement without authority from the Department will not be paid for it.

English themes.

Mr. Max Beerbohm, in a recent review, writes that he has codified, as it were, all the English comic papers, and finds the following list to comprise, in the order of their importance, all of the subjects discussed:

Mothers-in-law.
Hen-pecked husbands.
Twins.
Old maids.
Jews.
Frenchmen, Germans, Italians, niggers (not Russians or other foreigners of any denomination).
Fatness.
Thinness.
Long hair (worn by a man).
Baldness.
Sea-sickness.
Stuttering.
Bloomers.
Bad cheese.
Shooting the moon (slang expression for leaving a lodging-house without paying the bill).
Red noses.

Questions and Answers.

Here are some answers to questions in examination papers:

What religion had the Britons? A strange and terrible one called religion of the dudes.

What caused the death of Cleopatra? It was because she bit a wasp.

What can you tell of Johnson? He survived Shakespeare in some respects.

What is the spinal column? Bones running all over the body. It is considered dangerous.

Name a domestic animal useful for clothing, and describe its habits. Ox. Doesn't have any habits, because it lives in a stable.

What is the function of the gastric juice? To digest the stomach.—New York "Tribune."

A Clue That Failed.

Deductions in the manner of Sherlock Holmes do not always work out successfully. They did not, as it was reported by the Washington "Post." A group of reporters were talking together, and one of them, who liked to play the amateur detective, devoted part of his time to watching a man standing some distance away.

"That man used to be in the army," he said.

"How do you know?"

"See how he puts his hand into his trousers pocket. He lifts up the side of his coat—look! he's doing it now—instead of pushing the coat back as we do. He acquired the habit from wearing a fatigue coat in the army. A fatigue coat, you know, is cut square about the body. To put the hand in the trousers pocket, one must lift up the side."

Some discussion followed, with the result that one of the reporters volunteered to lay their speculations before the stranger. He proved to be a worthy real estate dealer. After listening to the reporter's question, he displayed much amusement.

"I'll tell you why I put my hand in my pocket in that way. I used to be a butcher in New York thirty years ago, and I got that habit wearing my butcher's apron to make change."

STOCK MARKETS

Stock Market Shorts in Danger

New York, Nov. 21.—The spectacular upward movement in Manhattan the past three or four days and the rapid but to a less degree rise in B. R. T. and Met., illustrate most powerfully the dangers of being in too much company on the short side of the market at present. The bear campaign has created a very large short interest in many other stock also, notably copper, sugar, Southern and Union Pacific and St. Paul. An immense borrowing demand both in the loan crowd and privately is existing at present. It would not be at all surprising if in many instances it is treated as were the shorts in Manhattan. An extended bear campaign in which considerable declines were recorded has created this vast short interest. Several days ago we in these letters cautioned our readers that the larger bears would probably cover some of their commitments through purchasing stocks from the timid bears and frightened bulls and warned speculators not to be the last persons to dispose of stocks, especially shares that they did not have. What we expected came about. The position at the moment is in our opinion dangerous. The bears are for the moment flushed with success. Their courage has consequently increased and their caution diminished. While a couple of months ago you could scarcely find a bear in any broker's office, to-day there are many of them. When the public become inclined to bearishness the market as a rule is close to lowest prices, as the public are not naturally bears, that position usually being taken by professionals only. The professionals usually abandon the bear side of the market when he finds the public coming around to it. He knows the extreme danger of having too much company on the bear side and the likelihood of resultant advances engineered by the pools. The market is down, while bullish conditions are as existent as heretofore. Ultimately they must, as they always do, influence prices. After a decided and sharp movement in either direction with conditions favoring the opposite side, it is advisable to go with the conditions and not with the trend of the then immediate market.

Summary—St. Paul assumed market leadership, opening at 173 1-2 and selling up to 180. New York Central and Rock Island issues were greedily absorbed as Missouri Pacific which rose over three points. The Pacifics were in heavy demand also, and are cheap intrinsically. Balance of the railway market followed the leaders closely, save Traction shares, which were most naturally reactionary after their tremendous recent activity and advances. The Gould contingent were pronouncedly bullish. Manhattan fell from 184 1-2 to 150, then recovered over 1-2 loss. Copper was taken in hand and advanced to 69. Sugar crossed 121. Both issues as well as other industrials look like doing better. The market looks well and will we believe most immediately sell higher. Money closed 4 per cent. Sales 1,083,500.

GEM
CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY

Sparta District, Eastern Oregon

It may be equalled but never surpassed—and, frankly, we doubt, all things considered, if it has an equal. And here is

WHY:

1—A producing mine.
2—Over 200 acres, rich mineral land.
3—Title perfect.
4—No debts.
5—No high salaries paid.
6—Equipped with up-to-date mill and machinery.
7—Between 8000 and 9000 feet of underground workings.
8—Management in the hands of experienced miners.
9—No treasury stock has ever been sold and perhaps never will be.
10—Two hundred and fifty thousand shares in the treasury.
11—Capital only $1,000,000.
12—Par value of shares—one dollar; fully paid and non-assessable.
13—Experts and intending investors permitted to examine the mine.
14—Daily mail. Complete telephone facilities.
15—All conditions favorable for cheap mining and reduction of ores.
16—Ore averages more than ten dollars gold per ton.
17—Total expenses mining and treatment per ton not over four dollars.

☞The stock we are selling is private holdings upon which we have secured a limited option. To make it go quickly we are only asking FIFTY CENTS A SHARE, and will sell as small a quantity as TWO HUNDRED SHARES—of course, as much more as you wish to buy as long as we have any for sale.

Recollect this property is producing a profit to-day of not less than $60,000 annually. By "profit" we mean over and above all expenses.

References back of the mine and its managers are the best in the State of Oregon where the property is located.

We personally examined this property thoroughly, and believe it to be one of the coming heavy producers of the Eastern Oregon Gold Fields.

Send for prospectus and learn how a well-equipped producing mine looks.

GOLD Is the World's Wealth!

YOU WANT IT

We have it. The property of the ORO RICO MINING SYNDICATE located in San Bernardino County, California, consists of THREE GREAT GOLD MINES, a total of 30 mining claims, comprising 600 acres, which under several years operation and development have reached a state of profitable production. For the purpose of erecting a suitable mill and plant for treating the ores we offer a moderate block of stock (par value $1) at 20 cents a share. This Mill we expect to have in operation early in 1903, at which time we expect to commence the payment of Ten Per Cent. Annual Dividends on the PAR VALUE. We solicit an opportunity to place before you the prospectus, reports of mining experts and actual facts regarding this great gold property. We believe in our mines. The 8 Hour Day

Which the working man has fought for and succeeded in obtaining is something the wife has no share in. Her day begins before his and ends long after it, as a rule, and many a night her rest is broken by the baby's fretfulness. The healthiest woman must wear out under such a strain. What can be expected then of those women who are weakened by womanly diseases?

Women who are weak, worn-out and run-down will find new life and new strength in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Sick people are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I suffered with female weakness about eight years—tried several doctors but derived no benefit until I began using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. John Green, of Danville, Boyle Co., Ky. "This medicine was recommended to me by other patients. I have taken six bottles and I feel like another person."

The dealer who offers a substitute for "Favorite Prescription," is only seeking to make the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines. His profit is your loss. Refuse all substitutes.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Favorite Prescription" whenever a laxative is required.

Application for Fenian raid medals of 1866-70 who have not made their applications may find the door closed against them with the last day of December, 1902. The order granting the medals was issued on June 8, 1899, and it was then expected that ten thousand would prove to be outside figure that the applicants would reach, even if all applied who survived. There have been actually issued 14,544, in Canada and 1,500 in Great Britain, the later covering the regular troops. Notwithstanding that it is over four years since the order calling for applications was issued, seven applicants came into the department at Ottawa the other day from different Canadian points.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—A new opera house capable of seating 1,200 is one of the possibilities of the near future. It is said the plan has already been prepared.

—The concert given by Court Stanley, A.O.F. in the Sons of England Hall on Thursday night was well attended, and all present enjoyed themselves immensely.

The hogs were picked up at the Falls and the cattle at Kinmount and Haliburton. Mr. McIlihargey also shipped a load of hogs to Peterborough paying $6.00 per 100 lbs. for the lot.— Lindsay Post.

—Millbrook Reporter:—"The sermon by the Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Peterborough, at the preparatory service in the Presbyterian church on Friday evening last, pleased the congregation very much."

—A public meeting was held in Lindsay this week at which it was decided to submit a by-law to the ratepayers proposing to spend $40,000 on the streets of the town.

—It is claimed that more than 10,000 licenses to kill deer were issued by the Ontario Government this year. Each license cost two dollars and allowed the killing of two deer. As every man would on the average get his two deer, there will be at least 20,000 killed during the season. At this rate there are grave fears entertained that this species of game will soon be extinct.

BAND CONCERT

In the Opera House Last Night a Decided Success

The band concert and entertainment given by the 57th Regimental Band, assisted by Miss Emma T. Irons, elocutionist, Toronto, and Mr. Bert Harvey, comic vocalist, Toronto, was one of the best ever given in Peterborough. A most excellent programme was given, and the large audience showed their appreciation by the hearty encores to those taking part in the entertainment and to the band. Miss Irons and Mr. Harvey were compelled to respond several times to the repeated encores of the audience.

The music rendered by the band was excellent and great credit is due Mr. Gliddon for the careful training and high efficiency which the band has attained.

POLICE COURT

Found Guilty of Stealing an Apron—Released on Suspended Sentence

Mrs. Perry came up for trial at the police court yesterday. She was charged with stealing jewellry, a number of articles of clothing, etc., from a lady at whose house she was boarding. No evidence was adduced to show that she had taken anything that did not belong to her except an apron and that she had left at another house in town before taking her departure. She claimed she had borrowed the apron and forgotten to return it to the owner. The case occupied considerable time, and the magistrate finally found Mrs. Perry guilty but allowed her to go on suspended sentence.

ORO RICO

A Mining Syndicate That Will Surely Succeed

Elsewhere in this issue we publish the advertisement of the Oro Rico Mining Syndicate, and we urge all our readers of a speculative turn of mind, to read it. The Syndicate has a capital stock of $3,000,000, par value shares of $1, full paid. The officers are men well versed in mining operations and the Broadway Bank and Trust Company, of Los Angeles, California, have given permission to allow their names to be used as references as to the financial reliability of the Syndicate. The property of the Oro Rico Mining Syndicate consists of three great gold mines, of 600 acres. The mines are developed and as soon as the mill for mining the ore is put in operation there is little doubt but that the shareholders will receive handsome dividends. Vast ledges of ores, showing values from $4.00 to over $800 have been opened and the mines are located in a very rich mining section near the Vanderbilt, Old Province Silver, Goldstone Bonanza, a King, Silver King, etc. The later was purchased by Philadelphia people for $400,000 and has since produced $1,800,000. With all these favorable conditions investment in Oro Rico stock should prove a bonanza.

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION

Meeting of the Directors Called for This Afternoon

Mr. W. J. Green, Secretary of the Peterborough Central Exhibition, has issued a call for a meeting of the directors and others interested in the society, to be held in the Town Council Chamber this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

The directors have paid no prizes or accounts in connection with the late Exhibition, using the money which was taken in at the gate to discharge the former debts of the society.

We hope that some way may be found of continuing the exhibition and straightening things up. We are sure funds could be obtained if proper steps were taken, to put the society in good financial shape.

MR. HULLETT'S DENIAL

He Writes That He Bought No Lennox Votes with Pigs

Mr. J. S. Hulett, photographer, of Napanee, writes, on Nov. 19:—"I notice in your paper re Lennox election my name is conspicuously mentioned therein, purporting to give pigs away in order to bribe voters for Mr. M. S. Madole. These statements are entirely false from beginning to end, and I must, therefore, ask you to retract the statement at once.

The statements which Mr. Hulett denies were contained in affidavits filed on an application by the cross-petitioners in the Lennox election case. The cross-petitioners sought to obtain summonses on charge of bribery against four men of Lennox, but the application was refused.

THE LIFE OF
The Man Behind the Desk

"Coffee coaked me hard for about three years and I was troubled with indigestion, headaches and drowsiness; I had no appetite and could not sleep and I was steadily losing flesh all the time.

I had spent a small fortune on medicine and doctors' bills; I consulted several doctors, one told me that I had liver trouble, another told me that I had kidney trouble, others prescribed remedies for numerous complaints, but none help me and I finally looked upon my bad stomach as a part of my miserable existence, giving up all hope of ever being myself again.

I knew that the cause of it all was due to office work, which precluded sufficient bodily exercise and the eating of non-nourishing and non-digestive food, and the drinking of tea and coffee. I had to quit my work as I lost my mental and physical strength.

A friend of mine, who weighs about 240 lbs. and who looks the picture of health advised me to use Grape-Nuts as a food and drink Postum Cereal Coffee. He said that his perfect health was due to the use of these two pure cereals. He said that they would build up the delicate cells of the brain and body, and restore me to health.

I acted on his advice and have no cause to regret it. I have now been using Grape-Nuts and Postum Coffee for some time and am in perfect health and weigh 10 lbs. more than I ever did.

Grape-Nuts Food is the crystallized essence of all cereals. I eat it four times a day, prepared with cream, and also by pouring some out of the box into my hand and then eating it. Postum Coffee has also helped me greatly." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

WEDDING IN DOURO

Mr. Felix Lynch and Miss Josie Sullivan Married

St. Joseph's Church, Douro, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday morning. The contracting parties were Mr. Felix Lynch and Miss Josie Sullivann and Rev. Father Kelly performed the ceremony.

The bride was attired in a suit of blue ladies' cloth, trimmed with silk applique, and wore a picture hat to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Esther Carveth, was tastefully gowned in a similar suit. The groom was ably supported by Mr. J. E. Sullivan, brother of the bride.

The wedding party at the conclusion of the ceremony drove to the former home of the bride, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. The many beautiful and costly presents showed the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Lynch drove to their new home on Union street, town, accompanied by the good wishes of their many friends for their future joy and happiness.

HOSPITAL OPENED

Mr. James Ross' Gift to the Town of Lindsay

The Ross Memorial Hospital at Lindsay, was opened on Thursday. The Hospital is a gift to the town by Mr. Jas. Ross, of Montreal, who formerly resided in Lindsay. Mr. and Mrs. Ross were tendered a hearty reception. Mr. Ross made a very appropriate and eloquent reply.

Other guests present from a distance were Mr. Jack Ross, of Montreal; Dr. Chamberlain, Inspector of Hospitals for Ontario; Drs. O'Rielly, Ross, Temple, Bingham and Ryerson, and the Hon. F. R. Latchford, of Toronto.

All these gentlemen made short addresses and the medical men present pronounced the hospital to be one of the finest and best equipped institutions of the kind in Canada. It will be a standing monument to Mr. Ross' generosity, and the people of Lindsay are justly proud of both Mr. Ross and the building.

THE CHEQUE SHARP

Every Effort will be Made to Catch This Menace to Public Safety

The check swindler, who got ahead of a number of local merchants recently, is likely soon to be caught.

One of the cheques from Woodstock, where he operated lately, was sent to the Attorney-General's Department at Toronto, the authorities having telegraphed for one. The provincial detectives will keep a close watch for the slick young chap who has been so successful in defrauding so many merchants in different centres of Ontario.

About six years ago a similar scheme was worked by a sharper with equal success. He commenced operations at Montreal and worked his way through Ontario to Port Arthur. From Port Arthur he paid a business visit to Windsor and then started on a tour eastward. When he reached Brantford he was caught and convicted of forging cheques. Telegrams from all over the province poured in on the Brantford police, and the man was finally sent to prison to serve a lengthy term.

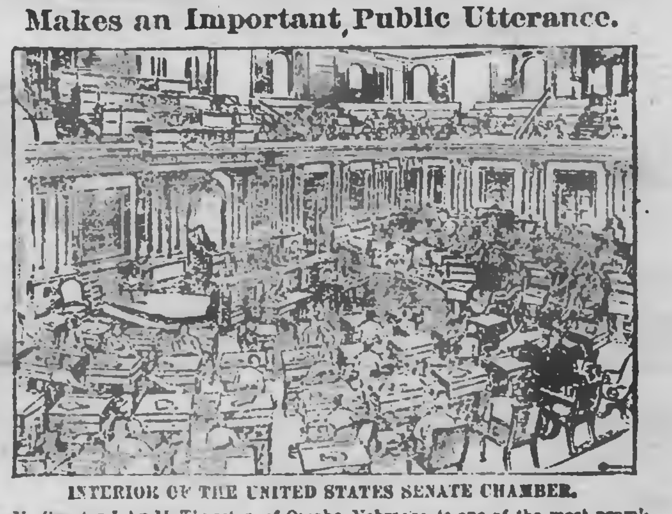
UNITED STATES SENATOR THURSTON,

The Brilliant Statesman from Nebraska, Makes an Important Public Utterance.



INTERIOR OF THE UNITED STATES SENATE CHAMBER.

Ex-Senator John M. Thurston, of Omaha, Nebraska, is one of the most prominent and influential men in the country. He made the speech nominating President McKinley at the St. Louis convention, and was made permanent Chairman of this convention. He was also made Chairman of the convention that renominated the late President McKinley at Philadelphia. He was appointed by President McKinley to be Chairman of the St. Louis Exposition Commission.

This prominent gentleman recently wrote the following letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio:

Washington, D. C., April 6, 1901.

"I have used Peruna at various times during the past year or two with most satisfactory results.

"It entirely relieved me from an irritating cough—the result of excessive effort in the presidential campaign, and I am a firm believer in its efficacy for any such trouble."—Jno. M. Thurston.

Catarrh has already become a national curse. Its ravages extend from ocean to ocean.

More than one-half the people are affected by it. It has become such a serious matter that it has passed the boundaries of the medical profession and become a national question. Senators are talking about it; Congressmen are discussing it.

They are not only considering the extent and chronic nature of the disease, but the possibility of finding a national remedy to meet this national calamity.

The catarrh remedy, Peruna, seems to be the main expectation in this direction.

Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, devised the remedy, Peruna, over forty years ago, and the remedy as a catarrh cure has been growing in favor steadily all those years.

It stands to-day before the nation as a thoroughly tested, accurately scientific internal remedy for catarrh. There are practically no medicinal rivals in the field.

Peruna is not a local application or temporary relief; it is a permanent cure. Peruna is a systemic remedy. It eradicates catarrh from the system. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures are radical and lasting.

Fritz Vollmer, President Schwaebischer Saengerbund, Chicago, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., says:

"My voice was so badly affected from catarrh that I was afraid I would lose it entirely. I read of some of the wonderful things your Peruna would do and thought it advisable to try some myself.

"I am pleased to state that in a very short time I was cured."—Fritz Vollmer.

Big Run on Paris Savings Banks—Withdrawals Since the Beginning of the Year Amount to $20,600,000

London, Nov. 22—According to a telegram from The Hague, says a Brussels correspondent, permission to return to South Africa has been refused to Boer delegates Wessels, Fisher and Wolmarans.

London, Nov. 22—The Times states that Dr. Parkin, who has been at Oxford for a few weeks, arranging the conditions under which candidates for the Cecil Rhodes Scholarships are to be admitted to the university, will sail today for New York. Consulting authorities throughout Canada and United States are to be named, with a view to furnishing the Rhodes trustees with information necessary for the selection of scholars.

London, Nov. 22—The run on the ordinary savings bank continues, says a Paris correspondent. The withdrawals since the beginning of the year amount to $20,600,000. No satisfactory explanation of the run on the banks has been given and the correspondent remarks that the theory that it is in revenge for the expulsion of nuns in untenable.

London, Nov. 22—It is denied, says a Paris correspondent, that the members of the Patrie Francaise League will contain two parties, even if there is no actual split.

IN A BLOCKHOUSE DURING THE WAR

Interesting Letter From a South African War Veteran

HOW THE BOYS KILLED TIME

The Hours Spent Off Duty was the Longest in the Day

The Times is in receipt of the following interesting account of life in the South African blockhouse during the war, written by Pte. Waddel, of the Canadian Scouts:

The answer to the question: "How did you spend the time in a blockhouse?" depends largely on the position of that blockhouse on the line of communication. By this I mean that more frequent attempts were made to cross the line in certain "sections" than in others, consequently the inhabitants of the former "houses" had a much more exciting time than those of the latter.

However, I take it that an account of the routine and methods of pastime obtaining in any one of these miniature strongholds will apply, generally, to the whole. The one I occupied for a period of four months, previous to leaving for England, was a unit in the series taken up by the Seaforth Highlanders and extending from Bethulie bridge to Burghersdorp.

Each was composed of two parallel walls of corrugated iron, having a circumference of about forty feet and an inner diameter of twelve feet. The space between the walls—about one foot, six inces—was filled with a mixture of shale and gravel, thus rendering it bullet-proof. The roof, of the same material, was conical, and the whole painted khaki, to coincide as nearly as possible with the color of the surrounding veldt.

The walls were pierced by twelve loopholes, which commanded every possible approach, while the whole was surrounded by a deep circular trench, strengthened by a double fence of barbed wire, and immediately above it on its outer edge, the second at a radius of about fifteen yards. Each of our houses contained a non-commissioned officer and six men, though I may say here that the blockhouses commanding important positions, such as the ends of bridges, etc., where square or hexagonal towers of stone, and, of course, manned by a stronger force.

In the average blockhouse the occupation of "time-killing" was by far the most onerous the soldier had to perform. In a detachment consisting of six privates, four hours of each twenty-four would be occupied by "sentry-go;" the remaining twenty had to be "killed." The modes of encompassing this "murder" were various, but I must confess that frequent repetition made them, to a great extent, wearisome. For a few weeks after taking possession we were occupied in strengthening the existing defences by means of additional strands of wire, but when this task was completed, we were, in the main, left to our own devices.

Generally speaking, a portion of the time "off duty" was spent in tending the garden, situated between the inner and outer defences and which was at once productive of much mirth, comparison and friendly rivalry. For the gardeners were, in many cases, decided amateurs and the questions whether peas should be sown in a deep trench or potatoes planted more than three inches apart elicited many sarcastic remarks from the better informed. In most instances the appearance of these plots of cultivated ground was enhanced by ornamental rockeries, scrolls legends, etc., composed of small stones and setting forth a host of expressions, familiar, yet not to be found in the "Army List."

Washing days, where water was plentiful, were frequent, and here again, as in gardening, the methods, like those of the heathen Chinee, were "peculiar." Occasionally when the "boys" possessed a gymnastic tendency, horizontal and parallel bars were improvised, affording at once recreation and physical development. Here, also, the eccentric gyrations of Smith on the bar, or thefrantic efforts of Jones to strangle himself with the clubs, were the source of endless merriment. Almost without exception, the detachments sported at least one musically-inclined member, who, at intervals, would treat the house to the "Washington Post" on a melodeon "made in Germany," or invite tears by his pathetic rendering of "The Lost Chord," on a wheezy mouth-organ, which, by the way, was retailed at the ridiculously low price of 3s. 6d.

Literature (light and heavy) thrown from passing trains by sympathetic passengers, was in great demand, and, after being read and reread, was passed on, until it eventually resembled the pulp from which it was originally manufactured. Many of our evening hours were spent in card-playing, which took the place of whist and "crib" tournaments, each player subscribing a nominal sum to lend interest to the game; but, after much practice, this became a certainty rather than a chance, for we could guage, with a fair amount of accuracy, the strength of Smith's hand by the breadth of his smile, and realize the number of aces McFadden held by the tone of his whistle. The red-letter incident of a passing column invariably "drew" all hands, for then the latest news was exchanged, opinions were ventilated, inquiries after chums instituted, and, for the nonce, the monotonous routine of blockhouse life was utterly forgotten.

The arrival of the "ration" train on alternate days was eagerly looked forward to, as then not only did we obtain water, rations, and previously ordered luxuries, but were informed of the march of events by those in charge, and in this connection, I may safely say without contradiction, that the day on which this train bore the "English" mail was the brightest, cheeriest, andmost eagerly anticipated day of the week.

Such, on the whole was our everyday blockhouse life, but it must not be forgotten that there were times of acute depression, a craving for change, long intervals without tidings of any definite success or material advantage towards the desired goal; and, added to these, the strains imposed by continual watchfulness and the ever-present possibility of the unexpected turning up in the shape of DeWet "on the fly."

Will Mines' Employers Agree?

No Developments To-Day—Negotiations in Indefinite Shape?

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 22—The proposition to have the anthracite mine workers and their employers try to come to some agreement without the direct aid of the Arbitration Commission, which became publicly known yesterday, remains in the same indefinite form as it was when the development first became known. Both sides waited for the commission to adjourn, and as such action was taken by the commissioners today it is probable that conferences will be held early this week. Where these meetings will be held it has not yet been decided upon, nor is it known who on each side will conduct the negotiations. While most of those interested express the belief that the two parties will be able to agree among themselves, there are some who can see no good in the new move. It seems almost certain that the miners will insist strongly upon a contract with the United Mine Workers of America, instead of yearly contracts and conferences between each company and the men it directly employs as proposed by the operators. On two of the other demands, increase in wages and a shorter workday, a compromise, it is thought, can be readily reached. The commission adjourned today until December 3rd

ADRIFT ON RAFT IN WILD SEA

Thrilling Experience of Which E. L. Chilbourgh, Seattle, Boasts

Denver, Nov. 22—E. L. Chillbourgh, of Seattle, Wash., is here on his way to New York. Mr. Chillbourgh is connected with the Puget Sound & Pacific Navigation Company, and although a young man he boasts of an experience which comes to but few men.

In the summer of 1896 Mr. Chillbourgh was sent to Guatemala by his company to purchase a vessel which had been repaired there, and was to be sold at a nominal figure. He bought this vessel, the Salvator, and gathered a crew to take her to Seattle, where she was to be used as a freighter between that port and San Francisco. On the fourth day out from the Central American port the Salvator ran into a furious storm. Many vessels were lost during the storm, among them being the Salvator. During the height of the gale the vessel slipped one of her propellors and in this crippled condition was a mere plaything for the wind and waves.

"The vessel," says Mr. Chillbourgh, "was literally torn to pieces, and we had but a few minutes warning before we were plunged into the ocean. Two other men and I had prepared a raft and when we saw that there was no chance we jumped overboard with the raft. To this frail float we clung with desperation, and saw the vessel founder and sink. The twenty men comprising the crew were all thrown into the water.

Clung to Wreckage.

Some of them clung to bits of wreckage and others tried to save themselves in row boats. This was more than useless, as a craft was the only thing that a man could cling to during that furious storm. In less than ten minutes we had lost sight of everything that had belonged to the vessel and we were clinging with all of our waning strength to the little raft. The oars were strapped to the sides but we made no attempt to use them. It was all we could do to keep our hold. In this manner we floated until the next morning, when the storm slackened. One of the men was washed overboard during the night, and I did not miss him until the comrade who was left called my attention to the fact that he was gone.

"As the sea quited down we unstrapped the oars and began to row. We had not the least idea where we were rowing, but we tried at least to keep the raft going straight with the wind.

"We were two whole days without anything to eat or drink. Both of us were so exhausted that at the end of the second day a little wind or a heavy sea would have thrown us from the raft. Just at dusk on the second day mycompanion thought that he saw land. We began to row again. My hands were so swollen that I wanted to let go of the oars to get rid of the pain. That night the tide took us near the shore of the land which my companion had seen. It proved to be an island and when we got to the shore we fell with pain and exhaustion. Our hunger and thirst gave us no rest, and we dragged ourselves over the beach and found some bushes on which berries were growing. We ate a few of these and then lay down to rest. After eating berries and resting here for several days we regained some of our lost strength and decided that we must find out where we were.

HAS BEEN LIVING A DOUBLE LIFE

Brooklyn Lawyer Who Stole $30,000 Passed as "Judge" Stone

ANOTHER EXTRAORDINARY CARE

Abroad He Consorted With Gamblers, Played the Races and Promoted Pugilism

New York, Nov. 23.—"Judge" Franklin Stone, of Philadelphia, who organised the Kentucky Mutual Sweepstakes Association, and was recently reported to have bought 28 yearlings from Col. Milton Young, for $50,000 turns out to be Frank C. Martin, who was a bright young lawyer and rising politician, when he fled from Brooklyn eight years ago, accused of fraudulently obtaining $30,000 from a client. He went to South America, but returned five years ago, and has since lived in Philadelphia under his new name. He owned Daffy-down-dilly and San Andres, which raced at the Buffalo meeting last September. He is now in custody in Brooklyn.

Stone declares the culprit was a clerk in his office on whom all the duties devolved because he himself was so engrossed with horse racing that he slighted his business. This clerk, whose name he refuses to divulge, was in ill-health, and when he was thought to be dying he confessed his sin to Martin, first extracting a solemn promise that his revelations would be held secret. Because of this promise to the man, who died soon after he had fled, Martin says he has sacrificed all his brilliant prospects, sacrificed all his brilliant prospects, has been forced to hide his head from those who knew him, has been compelled to take an assumed name and to begin his battle with the world anew.

But in Philadelphia he led a dual existence. To those who knew him and his wife and two sons socially he was the ideal family man, his occupation being that of a capitalist, a broker or a banker. A church member he was liberal in his contributions to charity, and was believed by some to be a millionaire. In the directory he was put down as a lawyer, but he had no office, and never was he known to appear in court.

Away from home he was intimate with gamblers; he owned horses and made heavy wagers on their racing; he was the leading spirit in a club which offered purses for pugilistic contests, and it is said that at one time his money was behind a notorious poolroom. He also organised and put into operation a scheme to sell pools on the races to the public, using the postal facilities as the medium for their distribution.

Even though he shouldered his dying clerk's burden, he says he had decided to make restitution to the swindled woman, even though he had not profited one cent on her losses. To that end, he says, he opened negotiations with her, hoping some day to reimburse her in full and then reveal himself to the world as Frank C. Martin.

Results of the Vote for Mayor And Alderman

MAYOR DENNE STILL LEADS

With Ald. G. M. Roger an Exceedingly Close Second

Ald. Best, A. W. Cressman, Ald H. Rush and Wm. Madill Head the List for Aldermen—No More Labor Candidates Have as Yet Been Named

Saturday's voting for Mayor and Aldermen was not very large, but it had the effect of bringing Alderman Roger up into second place for Mayor and A. W. Cressman into second place for Alderman with Alderman H. Rush, a very close third. Each of these candidates are very capable men in whose hands the municipal business of the Town of Peterborough for 1903 would be perfectly safe. There are also many desirable candidates in the following list, and before nomination day, other names worthy of the fullest consideration will undoubtedly be added. No more Labor candidates have as yet been named, but The Times learns from good authority that there are several men amongst the leaders of the labor party, who would undoubtedly fill the position of alderman with credit alike to the town and the citizens they represent.

FOR MAYOR.

A summing up of Saturday's voting for candidates for Mayor gives the following results:

Mayor Denne	105
Ald. Roger	90
Ald. Best	85
R. F. McWilliams	70
Ald. Rush	60
H. LeBrun	60
Ald. Shortly	50
J. H. McClelland	36

Three Plots to Kill Rosevelt

Converted Anarchist Alleges that She Frustrated Them

New York, Nov. 21— Disclosures of three alleged plots to assassinate President Roosevelt since he has taken office were made in Hoboken yesterday by Mrs. Lena Dexheimer, a parishioner of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, who says she is a converted Anarchist. Mrs. Dexheimer is the mother of six children, and the Rev. Charles Meade, pastor of the church, says he is in a position to know that her story is reliable. According to Mrs. Dexheimer the clergyman helped her to frustrate one of the attempts on the President's life. Pastor Meade admitted that this was so, but refused to discuss the part that he had played, saying that he preferred to allow the story Mrs. Dexheimer told of it to suffice. Mrs. Dexheimer alleges that she was connected with Emma Goldman, and was converted by attending a service at which the pastor preached. Owing to threats she continued an unwilling member of the Anarchistic body. The woman says:

THE PLOTS.

"Shortly afterward I received a letter in German cipher saying that an attempt would be made to assassinate President Roosevelt at the bi-centennial celebration of Yale at New Haven. The date selected was November 15, 1901, and the man selected to do the deed was a Frenchman named Melov. He arrived on a Red Star liner, and I met him on the pier, with other Anarchists. I became friendly with him, and after meeting him several times tried to persuade him not to commit the deed. In the meantime I let pastor Meade into the plot and he got the letter in cipher from me and forwarded it to the New York branch of the Secret Service. Melov was continually tracked and was several times on the point of being arrested. My treaties won him over eventually, and he told me that he was going to return to Paris and kill himself, as his Anarchist associates had told him that either he or Roosevelt would have to die. He kept his word, and returned to Paris and killed himself, pretending to accidentally fall under a horse's hoofs. The record of his death is in the possession of the Paris police.

SECOND MAN SELECTED.

"The second man selected to kill him lived at either 143, 1445, or 147 Avenue B., New York. He committed suicide by taking poison. The third person to draw the lot for the same purpose was a Mrs. Schroeder, who lived somewhere in Harlem. She ended her life in the same manner as Mueller. I only got general announcements of these two plots, and was not told the dates when the attempts would be made on the President's life.

"The Anarchists began to suspect me after the Schroeder woman did away with herself, and spies were kept watching my house in Hoboken. I became fearful of my life, and applied to Pastor Meade for assistance. He communicated again with the Secret Service and detectives followed me every time I left the house to go to church or do marketing. I am no longer afraid of anything, because I have come to the conclusion that the Anarchists regard it unsafe to interfere with me."

Mrs. Dexheimer said that the group of Anarchists to which she belonged kept constantly changing their meeting places. They met in New York, Brooklyn, and Jersey City, she said, and rarely kept a rendezvous established longer than a month at one place. Her husband knew nothing of her Anarchistic relations, she said, until after her conversion.

WATER OF DEATH

FIND SPRING SURROUNDED BY SKELETONS

Bodies Supposed to Be Those of Party of Prospectors—Cause of Death Unknown Until Discoverers Drink of Spring Become Violently Ill

San Bernardino, Nov. 23.—A party of prospectors, headed by Henry Arnell, who is well known in the desert mining district, has arrived here, bringing word of the discovery of several persons supposed to have been a party of prospectors. The exact number is not given.

They had apparently been poisoned by water from a spring, around which the skeletons lay. The cause of death was soon revealed.

No sooner had the members of Arnell's party drunk from the spring than they were seized with cramps, some of them suffering intensely.

Samples of the water brought to this city and analyzed have been found to be heavily charged with arsenic.

C. P. R. Circulars

The C.P.R. has issued a circular to their freight agents announcing that after to-morrow all freight destined to Port Arthur, Fort William and points west must be forwarded via the "all rail" route at the "all rail" rates. Another circular says that charges on freight for Temiskaming and routes behind must be prepaid. In connection with shipments for points reached via Temiskaming, agents are to have shippers sign indemnity, releasing the company from respinsibility in the event of shipments arriving at Temiskaming after the close of navigation, or of the steamship company being unable to make delivery of property at its destination.

WILL NOT LOSE ALL

Lakefield Investors in Oil Partially Re-Embursed

The Lakefield men who speculated in the Canadian Osago Illuminating Oil Company's stock have been very anxious lately. They have had every reason to feel that the money invested was lost forever, but they are not so bad off as they thought. As we understand, Dr. Baker, one of the gentlemen who went south to purchase the stock has, returned from the hunting grounds, and has paid over a considerable sum in discharge of his responsibility in connection with the transaction.

LIVE ASHBURNHAM LOCALS

What is Going on in the Village Over the Otonabee

—Interest in the lift lock is now increasing as the work of erecting the steel superstructure proceeds. The canal should be in operation next year.

—The brewery is doing a large business these days, the lager made by the company being everywhere regarded with favor.

—It is expected that the Water Lily will go into winter quarters this week.

—The question of, who will run for next year's council is again before the people. All the members of the present council will, it is said, again seek re-election, excepting Mr. Pollock, who has moved over to town, therefore will not be eligible. Mr. Allan McCarthy has been urged to accept nomination and has consented to do so. He will make a good councillor, and doubtless will be elected. The other names mentioned are—Messrs. Ed. Conroy, John Craig, Archibald Weir and Wm. Porter.

AN AMERICAN VIEW OF ONTARIO'S RICHES

The Great Possibilities in Store for our Fair Province

The Development of Our Natural Resources Has Now Began in Earnest

Ontario is an immense province in what may be termed for convenience sake middle Canada. Its southern and eastern boundaries are portions of New York and the great lakes. It has an area of 222,000 square miles, and a population by the last census of over 2,000,000, mostly in the southeastern portion. In years gone by the great unoccupied spaces north of Lake Superior have been deemed hardly fit for human habitation But Ontario is like a great many other portions of the North American continent. As it becomes better known it is found to be bettter than its former fame. Climates thought to be too cold and bleak, have been found tolerable, and areas reputed to be fit only for scrub growths of timber and the lairs of wild beasts have been found arable. It seems now that exploiters have been able to discover such attractions in hitherto neglected regions to enable them to offer inducements to thrifty and intelligent American families to seek it for home building.

With what irrigation and improved methods of cultivation and building and development, it looks as if untimately there will be very little of the North American continent left unoccupied. The arid plains and deserts of the Southwest are being turned into gardens by artificially supplying water to the soil. The denuded timber lands of our Northwestern states are found to make fine grazing lands and farms. In Northwester Canada settlement is rapidly pushing northward to the plains of Athabasca. Southern Alaska is already being exploited as a region of vast agricultural possibilities—and now emigration is turning even to the northern part of central Canada, a region hitherto shunned by all but trappers, hunters and timber cruisers.

Who can estimate the population and wealth of the northern part of this continent when it is fully occupied and its resources developed? The possibilities are so great that it will take a very vivid imagination to grasp them.

FATHER COTY'S TRIAL

His Sister Dies While on a Visit to Friends in Peterborough

Hamilton, Times, of Thursday:—This morning Rev. Father Coty sent word to the city from Peterboro that his sister, Annie, who had kept house for him in Hamilton, and who left the city recently on a visit died yesterday afternoon from typhoid fever contracted while away. Father Coty was with her at the end. This is the fifth death in Father Coty's family within a very few years — two brothers, a mother, grandmother, and now a sister. The sympathy of his many friends will go out to him in this last sad bereavement.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at Oakville, where the faminly burying ground is located.

WILL SEE AND TASTE

The Products of Ontario Beet Sugar Factories

The members of the Board of Trade have been summoned to meet tomorrow evening to discuss the beet sugar question. A committee will be appointed to join with representatives from the town and county coincils to go on a visit of inspection to the leading sugar factories of Canada and procure all possible information as to the working and revenues of these industries. The joint deputation will likely leave town on Thursday morning and return on Saturday. It is expected that the delegation will number about twenty, and some parties have suggested the chartering of a special car so that due importance may be given to the town and county.

OLD RESIDENT GONE

Honora Cahill Passes to the Great Beyond Friday Evening

After an existence in this world, of seventy-five years, Honora Cahill, relict of the late John Cahill, departed this life at her home, No. 17 Elm street, on Friday night. Deceased was an old resident of Peterborough, and her life was as full of good deeds as it was full of years. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. John Weir and one unmarried, both of whom live in Peterborough. They mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother, but they find comfort in the blessed assurance of meeting her on the bright resurrection morning. The funeral took place yesterday to Ennismore cemetery.

TEMPERANCE

The Ministers Advise the People to Vote for the Referendum

At Charlotte street Methodist church yesterday the pastor, Rev. W. J. Joliffe, chose for his subject the "Forgiving of Injuries," and in the evening he dealt with the Referendum.

At St. Luke's church Holy Communion was administered at 8 a.m., and at the usual hour Rev. E. A. Langfeldt discoursed on "Mercy to All." Rev. W. L. Armitage, of All Saint's and Rev. Mr. Langfeldt exchanged pulpits in the evening. Miss Bertha Symonds sang at the service at St. Luke's in the evening, and added very much to the pleasure and solemnity of the service.

At All Saints' church in the morning Rev. W. L. Armitage gave an account of the work done at the recent Archdeaconal Conference. In the evening the Rev. E. A. Langfeldt preached an excellent sermon. The Senior Guild of this church give an 'At Home' this evening.

In Murray street yesterday morning Rev. J. Bastow gave a very interesting dessertation on "God's Present Mysterious Dealings Hereafter Explained," and in the evening he discoursed on "Absolom or the Fast Young Man." The Rev. gentlemen gave some pointers to young men that, if remembered, will be a great benefit in all their after life.

"The House We Live In," was the subject of Mr. H. E. Ayers, at the Y.M.C.A. meeting yesterday afternoon. He handled it ably and well.

In George street Methodist church yesterday, Rev. J. P. Wilson preached on the Referendum, and of course advised all to vote for it on Dec. 4th.

In St. Paul's church yesterday Rev. J. A. Wilson devoted his time to a talk on temperance and in the evening Rev. Dr. Torrance did likewise. Both discourses were listened to with interest by the congregation and will have a good effect on the vote on December, 4th.

The mass meeting held in Mark street Methodist church, Ashburnham, was a success, and the arguments advanced by the different speakers in favor of temperance and the referendum produced a good effect

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL

Waterway from Peterborough Through to Lake Simcoe to be Finished in 1903

Ottawa, Nov. 22—Hon. Mr. Blair and Mr. Schreiber, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, returned last night from an inspection of the Trent and Welland Canals.

The latter says: "This season we were simply finishing up contracts let the previous season, but in 1903 we can have the waterway finished from Peterboro' through to Lake Simcoe. There will then remain the stretch from Lake Ontario to Peterboro' and from Lake Simcoe up to Georgian Bady, the most important part of all."

POLICE COURT

A Union of Young Men in the Toils—Will Appear on Monday

Charles Geraite, Douglas Lernis, —— Mitchell, Samuel Brener, Walter Miller, Walter Tighe, Aaron McColl, P. Kempt, Thomas Brownlee, Edwin Daly, N. E. Millar and Cecil Success were arrested on Saturday charged with waylaying and assaulting Joseph Stewart on Thursday night last when he was on his way home. Stewart is employed by B. F. Ackerman & Son, harness manufacturers and the reason assigned for the alleged assault is Stewart's refusal to join the harness makers' union.

The boys appeared before the police magistrate at three o'clock on Saturday and bail was given for their appearance at ten o'clock this morning.

Another young man appeared before the P.M., and was fined $2 for drunkenness, but was given a stay of proceedings for ten days.

—The Men's Guild of St. Luke's Church will meet to-night at 8 o'clock to elect officers.

CANADA'S RESOURCES

Are Canadians so dull of apprehension that they do not know a good thing when they see it? Are they dependent upon outsiders for a proper appreciation of the resources of their own country? It was Philemon Wright from New England who first ascertained that money could be made in the lumber trade of the Ottawa Valley, and our good friend E. B. Eddy, the match and paper man of Hull, is also a Yankee by birth. Nearly all the agricultural implement factories in Canada were started by men from the United States. Sault Ste. Marie was a dead town until Mr. Clergue came along from Maine and established the great industries which now utilize the grand water power of the St. Mary's River. A Minnesota Congressman, now visiting Winnipeg, declares that Canadians had only a faint idea of the value of the Northwest wheat country until "Americans" came there to convince them that they had a good thing. He goes on to say that there is untold wealth in lumber and minerals in the Hudson Bay basin, enough pulp wood around the Bay to supply the world's market for two centuries, and more timber just around James Bay alone than there was in Michigan and Minnesota. This sort of talk is enough to set the sleepiest Canadian to thinking.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

South Africa is favorable to giving a preference to Great Britain and the colonies. That is good news. It will afford Canada a decided advantage over the United States which is our chief competitor in that market in the goods we desire to sell.

A man has made a continuous journey from Chicago to Boston in trolley cars with only five gaps covering short distances. This shows the extent to which the Northern States are being covered with a network of trolley lines. Ontario may expect a similar development in the near future.

The shoplifters are very industrious these days and merchants and clerks have to be watchful. In Detroit, last Tuesday, the fraternity got away with two sealskin coats and two Persian lamb coats, worth $1,500 in all, and the police are powerless to discover the thieves. The goods were stolen during the day time, when the clerks were busy with customers.

When the Kaiser's yacht landed at Port Victoria the English papers say that her crew cheered lustily. But it was only the Hohenzollern.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture have prepared a supplementary bulletin, giving statistics of farm live stock in the province on July 1, 1902. We observe by this bulletin that horses have increased by about 6,000; cattle by 56,000. The increase of cattle is largely in milch cows, showing the extent to which the dairying industry is progressing. A decrease of 46,000 in the number of sheep is more than offset by the increase of 198,700 in the number of hogs, which, however, is still 57,000 behind the figure of 1899. Poultry show an increase of some 6,000. There is a net increase of over 200,000 in horses, sheep hogs and cattle.

During the fiscal year ending June 30th last the consumption of spirits per head was .796 gallons, or the largest amount since 1885, when the per capita consumption was 1.136 gallons In 1869, or two years after we had started on our career as a nation, the people consumed 1.124 gals. Beer, however, appears to be the popular intoxicating beverage. According to statistics the consumption was at the rate of 5.102 gallons, which is altogether unprecedented in our history. Beer drinking seems to have been rising steadily since 1895. In that year 3.085 gallons went to each Canadian's credit. The following year 3,300 gallons, in 1900 4.894 gallons, and in 1901 4.727 gallons. The consumption of wine is small and fluctuates greatly. Last year it was .09 gallons. The consumption of tobacco was equal to 2.494 pounds, which was the same as in 1901. This rate was exceeded in 1874, 1876, 1884 and 1885. The rates of duty per head were; Spirits, $1.148; beer, $.133; wine $.063; tobacco $.55; The cigars of all kinds produced last year numbered 156,686,795, a gain of 15,256,341 as compared with 1901. The total production of cigarettes was 138,214,384, a gain of 14,623,350. The manufacture of stuff is falling off. Last year 173,182 pounds were produced, a decrease of 26,807 compared with the previous year.

WEDDING BELLS

Nuptials of Miss Fanny Kemp to Mr. W McMillan

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday evening, November 19th, at 8 o'clock, at the residence of Mr. J. C. Kemp, Otonabee, when his daughter Miss Fanny, was united in marriage to Mr. Wilbert McMillan, by Rev. J. P. Wilson. As the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Miss Maude Curtis, pealed forth, the bride descended through an aisle formed by two prettily decked bridal chains held by Miss Eddie Kemp and Master Will Pratt, and took her position under an evergreen arch from which was suspended a floral wedding bell. The bride was assisted by her cousin, Miss Edna Pratt, and Mr. Herbert McMillan, brother of the groom, acted as best man, while little Miss Nouna Pratt acted as ring bearer

The bride was elegantly attired in a gown of cream silk, trimmed with chiffon and pearl trimming, and carried a bouquet of cream roses. The bridesmaid was also gowned in cream silk, with chiffon and pearl trimmings, and carried pink roses. After congratulations were over one hundred guests proceeded to the dining room, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served. The groom's gift to the bride was a cheque for a handsome sum, and a cheque of $100 from the groom's aunt, Mrs. Dickson. The groom presented the bridesmaid with a handsome gold brooch set with diamonds. To the flower girl he gave a stick pin set with rubies. To the little ring bearer he gave a souvenir spoon. To the pianist a stick pin set with pearls. The bride received a numerous and handsome lot of presents. Mr. and Mrs. McMillan will be at home to their friends on or about December 3rd.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers Fortune's Spor Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc

pened to know that in a lonely spot not far from the mine which was yet to be worked there was a group of pines with peculiarly red trunks. He determined that he would go to the place one day and make a search.

"Perhaps it would not have occurred to him to do this had he not begun to fear that his partner had lied to him about the gold discovered on his property. Gold he had seen, but he had reason to believe it had been brought from a distance and placed where he had seen it for the purpose of tricking him into putting down his money. But it was not yet too late to dissolve the partnership.

"One day 'Cloven Hoof' went away, and my father took advantage of his absence to pay a visit to the red trees. Close by there was a cave, and in a hole in the cave, under a great bank of sand and debris, he found not one body, but two. The skulls had been broken in behind with some heavy, sharp instrument, like an axe, and the bodies had been huddled into the hole dressed exactly as they had died. Their bloodstained clothes had not mouldered away like their flesh. Probably the murderer's courage had failed him before emptying his victims' pockets, or else he had felt so certain the bodies would not be discovered that he had not thought it necessary to do more than hide them; for (determined to be sure that the accusation he meant to make was well founded) my father searched the pockets of the dead men's coats. It must have been a grim task, but it was rewarded by the finding of letters from the murderer upon one of the bodies, proving beyond doubt that he had been the man to lure the young stranger from the East to his doom. Just such promises as the fiend had held out to my father had he given to his predecessor.

"My father took the letters and thrust them deep into a pocket of his own coat. Then he went back to the house, where he meant to confront the murderer with his knowledge of the double crime. But his partner's journey had been a pretense The wretch had only gone a short distance, meaning to return unexpectedly, and, taking my father unawares, kill him as he had killed the others. Afterwards my mother found that all my father's money had been withdrawn from his bank by means of a forged letter; and this having been accomplished, the sooner he was out of the way the better. No doubt the murderer meant this to be his last crime, and intended in any event to fly with the spoils, throwing suspicion on his latest victim.

"As my father was walking back to the house, someone leaped at him from behind, but he sprang aside in time to avoid the full force of the blow. He told my mother that somehow he felt no surprise at sight of his partner, with the lust of murder in his eyes; and they fought together a desperate fight, each man for his life.

"Once my father got his enemy down, and panted out what he had learnt; but the fiend wriggled himself free, and struck my father with a knife, which pierced his breast, touching the lungs. It was this wound that finally resulted in his death.

"While he was unconscious his enemy must have placed in his pocket the diary in cipher, which had evidently been prepared expressly for the purpose. My father knew that he had wounded his would-be murderer, nevertheless, the wretch escaped; and it was supposed that my father had killed him and hidden the body before falling down in a faint induced by his own wound.

"As for the letters, which must have shown conclusively who was guilty, they had disappeared—my father and mother believed that they had been stolen by the murderer. The moonstone Sphinx and my mother's miniature were also missing, and it was not difficult to guess where they had gone, though the treacherous brute had no means of knowing what his victim had really been to the girl they both loved.

"The letters being lost and the murderer gone, there was no absolute proof that my father had not committed the crimes of which he had been accused, and my mother begged that he would remain with her, hidden and safe, while he lived. Such an existence must have proved impossible for a man of spirit, had he not died within a year; but I think that, in spite of all, they must have known some hours of happiness together.

"When he was gone my mother lived only for me, and the hope—not ideally Christian, but natural—that one day I should seek out the man who had robbed and killed her husband, and avenge their wrongs. While I was a boy I was left in ignorance of her sorrows, and we lived somehow on the little money she had left. But when I had grown to be a man she sent for me one day (we had moved from California to Colorado by this time), and I found her pale and quivering with passionate excitement. She had made an astonishing discovery."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

The Winning of the Wager.

"The moonstone Sphinx!" broke in the Comtesse.

"No," Hope Newcome answered, "the letters which my father had taken from the body of the murdered man. All those years she had kept the coat he had worn in jail and when he escaped, for it was stained with his blood. And sometimes she took it out and wept over it, recalling the past. The letters had not, after all, been stolen by the murderer. He could not even have seen them, for when my father thrust them deeply into his pocket they had been pushed down between the coat and the lining, which was ripped—not torn; and somehow the opening and the letters had remained undiscovered till that day.

"It was then that my mother told me the story, and made me promise that I would give my whole life to tracking down the murderer, if he still lived.

"She believed that he would be found in England under an assumed name, and that with the money he had stolen from his three victims he would have made himself rich. Long ago, when they had known each other in Australia, he had told her that his great ambition was to be a millionaire and spend his money in London—the 'capital of the world,' he had called it. My mother was certain that he had realized his ambition, and now that I was armed with the letters I should be able even at that late day to bring him to justice—if I could find him. I was to know him by the description she gave, and above all by his deformed foot; for whatever else was changed by time that could not change. And she was certain also that he would have kept the Sphinx's head.

"But to find him was the great task, and to do so I must live in the world of rich people. I must get money enough

Total Capitalization	$6,000,000 00

PREFERENCE STOCK

This Stock is preferred both as to Capital and Dividends.

The shares are entitled to cumulative preferential dividends from the net earnings of the Company, at the rate of 7 per cent per annum, payable half-yearly on the first days of April and October. They may, at the option of the holder, be exchanged for common shares. They are subject to be called in, in whole or in part, by the Company, at $115.00 per share, at any time on or after 1st January, 1909.

The total issue of Preferred Stock is only $1,000,000.00, the whole of which is now offered.

Subscriptions for 10,000 shares of $100 each of the 7 per cent Preferred Stock of the CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY will now be received at par, that is, $100 for each $100 share as follows:—

5 per cent on application. 20 per cent on allotment. 25 per cent each 30 days thereafter.	One share of common, par value $100.00, given with each share of preferred.

The whole of the instalments remaining unpaid at any time may be prepaid in full. A discount of one per cent will be allowed upon the par of each share if prepaid at time of allotment.

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company.

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are:—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey:—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4 05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5 23
	100 00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons of ore above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows:—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4.00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows:—

	ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902, to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2 70
July 1st, 1903, " " 1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904, " " 1905	1 65	1.65
July 1st, 1905, " " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906, " " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows:—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6⅔ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000 00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000 00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to .... $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is .... $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is...... $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

STOCK MARKETS

Something Doing in Copper

New York, Nov. 22.—Copper again shows unmistakeable signs of heavy accumulation. Its downward movement was preparatory to a good advance, and was brought about to aid in gathering in the stock, and was also in the nature of a club used by the Standard Oil interests to shake down the balance of the market to the embarrassment of certain prominent Wall street interests which have been antagonistic marketwise to the interests of the great oil interests. This heavy and comparatively new speculative interest has been pretty well liquidated, while a heavy short interest has been created in many of the active stocks, notably copper, which will more than likely prove to be a most excellent leverage for furtherance of an advance. The copper situation is materially better, while the copper shares are selling pretty close to the lowest prices on record. These facts ought to make the stock a most attractive purchase. We recently called attention to these shares, and yesterday warned people against being caught at the low level, short of certain stocks, one of which was copper. A round of the commission houses brings to light the fact that the public are at present but little interested in the shares, where as when they were very much higher they were heavily long. Their holdings have again drifted back into the hands of the insiders, who at persent hold more of the stock than ever before, while the public owns less than at any time since it sold at 130. When such conditions exist it is usually the proper time to buy the stock. We are confidently bullish upon the property at present, and strongly advise its purchase. Apropos of railway rates, two days ago we had something to say in these letters about the likelihood of their being advanced shortly. The roads are always moving in the matter, as you can see in the newspapers. Inside of thirty days they will be so advanced that they will more than make up for the additional outlay in wages. The market is in a better condition than it has been any time since the first or last of September, while stocks are selling at most attractive prices.

Moving a House

Mr. Allan McCarthy, the well known house mover, has a big job on hand. He is taking a large strip house, which stands on Charlotte street, opposite the Methodist church to a lot in Bolivar street, a distance of 1500 feet. The house weighs about 200 tons.

Coming Home

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Miller, who reside on Water street, received the welcome intelligence that their son, Sergeant T. Miller, of the First Scots Guards, stating that he was receiving his discharge and that he would sail shortly from the Country upon the S. S. Pretorian, reaching here in good time to spend Christmas with them. Sergeant Miller will probably remain in Canada.

A Belated Hunters Joke

"There's a thing that's bound to occur," said Mr. Harry Winch one day out at camp to a member of the hunting party.

"What's that?" asked an unsuspecting comrade.

"Your dog's tail."

Hit with a Brick

Mr. E. Webb, who is assisting in the erection of the new rink, met with an accident on Saturday that not only gave him a pain, but inflicted a nasty cut in his head. In some way a brick fell, and struck Mr. Webb on the head making it necessary to secure the services of Dr. Scott to do some sewing and dressing of the wound. It is hoped Mr. Webb will be able to resume work in a few days

Got Lame Back or Lumbago

No need of that now. That sort of pain can be knocked out in short order, for Polson's Nerviline, which is five times stronger than any other, penetrates at once through the tissues, reaches the source of suffering, drives it out and thus gives relief almost instantly. Not magic, but strength that gives Polson's Nerviline this power. You will think it magic however if you try it, pain goes so quickly. Sold by dealers everywhere, in large 25c. bottles.

Faust at the Opera

Tabors "Faust" was produced in the Opera House Saturday night. It was a mixture of goodness and badness. Some of the scenic effects were of the best but in certain parts the actors lacked dramatic power and forgot their lines. But on the whole the entertainment pointed a moral that the devil is always active to gather into his kingdom the innocent, the susceptible and the ambitious, and he stops at nothing to obtain his end. "Faust" is a realistic rehearsal today and there is much to be learned from it.

The Christmas Globe

We have been furnished with advance sheets of the Christmas number of the Toronto Globe. The stories are the production of men and women of high literary attainment and afford excellent reading. The illustrations are the best ever produced in Canada, and there will be a Canadianism reflected in this coming issue of the Christmas Globe that must commend itself to Canadians, irrespective of politics. The Globe is a great newspaper and its Christmas number will be a reflex of the greatness of Canada. This great production of newspaperdom should find a place in every Canadian home.

Dogs Poisoned

William Logan, 221 Brock street, had four dogs poisoned on Saturday morning by some unknown party. Two of the animals were black spaniels about five or six months old, while the other two were sent from South Africa, and they were about eight months old. The dogs came into the house between eight and nine o'clock and all died within fifteen minutes. It is hoped that some clue will be found that will lead to the punishment of the person who did the cowardly act. Mr. Logan valued the dogs very highly.

A TUG OF WAR

Coffee Puts up a Grand Fight

Among the best of judges of good things in the food line, is the groceryman or his wife. They know why many of their customers purchase certain foods.

The wife of a groceryman in Carthage, New York, says:—"I have always been a lover of coffee, and therefore drank a good deal of it. About a year and a half ago, I became convinced that it was the cause of my headaches and torpid liver, and resolved to give it up, although the resolution caused me no small struggle, but Postum came to the rescue. From that time on, coffee has never found a place on our table, except for company, and then we always feel a dull headache throughout the day for having indulged.

When I gave up coffee and commenced the use of Postum I was an habitual sufferer from headache. I now find myself entirely free from it, and what is more, have regained my clear complexion which I had supposed was gone forever.

I never lose an opportunity to speak in favor of Postum, and have induced many families to give it a trial, and they are invariably pleased with it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A SUDDEN DEATH

Thos Geo. Harper, Blacksmith, Died Yesterday

The late home of Thos. G. Harper, Charlotte street, is filled with sorrow at the death of the head of the house. Thos. G. Harper, laid his earthly sceptre down and joined the innumerable caravan that moves through the realms of eternal bliss, from whence no weary traveler never returns, at 9.30 yesterday morning. He had only been ill a short time and his death was unexpected. He was born in Peterborough and has lived here for the past 51 years. He was a member of the English church and a good citizen. He leaves a wife and daughter, Mrs. C. Earls. In life he was right, in the great beyond he will be right, and those who are now grieving over his sudden demise may find a comforting balm in knowning that all's well with his never-dying spirit. The funeral takes place on Tuesday, at 2.30 p. m., to the Lakeside cemetery. We extend our sympathy to the sorrowing relatives.

SATURDAY'S MARKET

Lots of Offerings in the Face of Inclement Weather

The market on Saturday was a very large one. There was lots of produce offered and good prices obtained. Apples brought 45c to 60c a bag; potatoes were scarce at $1.15 to $1.25 per bag, or 25c peck; pork 7 1-2 to 8c lb, onions, 15c peck; carrots, 40c bag; celery 5 to 10c bunch; cabbage 20c dozen; chickens, 40 to 75c pair; turkeys, 85c to $1.25 each; geese, 50 to 90c each; ducks 50 to 70c pair; butter 19 to 23c lb; eggs 20 to 22 cents a dozen.

Gun Found

All our readers are familiar with the details of the drowning of Samuel Courrier in Rice Lake a few weeks ago. At the time it was asserted that his gun had been accidentally disharged, causing a hole in the boat. Now his gun has been found and it proves conclusively that it did not cause the accident, as both barrels were loaded when the gun was found. Mr. Talbot, who was with deceased at the time of the accident, says that he really believed that it was not his gun, but Mr. Courrier's which met the accidental explosion which led to the accident; but if the statement is true that Mr. Courrier's gun, when found, was loaded then he admits that he was mistaken and that in the excitement attending and following the accident, his recollection of details might easily have been at fault to that extent. But he asserts positively that it was not due to any carelessness or action on his part that whichever gun was accidentally discharged was so discharged.

Ignorance

Blows out the gas and furnishes the newspapers with a jest and an obituary notice. "Didn't know it was loaded" may be an honest plea, but it never brought a victim back to life. Those who let a cough run on, in ignorance of the danger, find no escape from the consequences when the cough develops into lung trouble.

The best time to kill a snake is in the egg. The best time to cure a cough is when it starts. Ordinarily, a few doses of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure a cough at the beginning. But even when the cough is deep-seated, the lungs bleed and the body is wasted by emaciation, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will in ninety-eight cases out of every hundred effect a perfect and permanent cure.

"My husband had been coughing for years and people frankly told me that he would go into consumption," writes Mrs. John Shireman, of No. 265 25th Place, Chicago, Ill. "He had such terrible coughing spells we not only grew much alarmed but looked for the bursting of a blood-vessel or a hemorrhage at most any time. After three days' coughing he was too weak to cross the room. The doctor did him no good. I stated the case to a druggist, who handed me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. My husbands recovery was remarkable. In three days after he began using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery he was up and around, and in two more days he went to work. Two bottles cured him."

THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY QUESTION A SEMI-OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

Canadian Side Presented by a Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce

A STRONG CASE MADE OUT FOR DOMINION

The Arbitrary Conduct of the Republic Strongly Denounced—Canada will Maintain Her Rights

New York, Nov. 25.—F. C. T. O'Hara, secretary of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, writes to the Tribune concerning the Alaskan boundary. He says in part: All that Canada asks is that this question, year by year, growing more serious, and year by year becoming more difficult to settle, be laid before an impartial tribunal, to decree of which is to be final and forever binding upon both countries. Why, does the United States refuse arbitration? Canadian statesmen, having their past sufferance in view, have made a stand for their rights, and are firmly intrenched by sound documentary evidence, and would welcome arbitration could the American government be induced to agree to such a course.

POOR CANADA

Unfortunately for Canada, Great Britain would consider long before she risked a war (which God forbid!) with the United States over the Alaskan dispute, and, unfortunately, Canada has not the strength within herself to force her right. The American government knows this well, and is playing an ungenerous waiting game, meanwhile colonizing the disputed territory. What does ex-President Cleveland say upon this point? "An extension of settlements in the disputed territory would necessarily complicate the situation and furnish a convenient pretext for the refusal of any concession respecting the territory containing such settlements." He was probably not thinking at the time that broad statements, full of sound diplomatic reason, often come home to roost. But the day must come when a settlement must take place, and Canada cannot stand by and see herself despoiled of territory which she firmly and honestly believes is part of her rightful domain. Why does the American government refuse arbitration, I ask again, to determine the boundary, as intended by the Anglo-Russian treaty of 1825? For therein lies the point of difficulty. What interpretation is placed upon the action of the American government in thus refusing to Canada a course she practically forced Great Britain into during the Venezuelan trouble? The reasons for refusing are obvious.

The question at issue is plain and simple. Does the third article of the Anglo-Russian treaty mean that the line of demarcation be drawn at a distance of ten marine leagues, or thirty marine miles, from the Pacific Ocean's coast, or does the line go around the headwaters of the Lynn and other canals into the Canadian interior, keeping always ten marine leagues from their waters? The former is the British contention, the latter the American.

During the negotiations over the treaty of 1825, Russia, through Count Nesselrode, the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, said; "We limit our requirements to a mere strip of the continent, and, so that no objection be raised, we guarantee the free navigation of the rivers." This guarantee is incorporated in the treaty. If the American contention be the correct one, there would be no need for this, as the rivers in question are taken into American territory in a body. By the British contention the headwaters of these rivers are within British territory and the Russian statement thereto would hold good.

The point is. Does the line, the base line from which the ten marine leagues are measured, follow the rough coast and thereby cut across the mouth of the Lynn Canal, or does it follow the devious winding of the canal itself into the interior for seventy miles? If so, then the three mile sea limit, as recognized by the law of nations as being the possession of the adjacent country, should be measured from the headquarters of the Lynn Canal. Then why did the Russians guarantee to the British the free navigation of these inlets? Of what use would it be to the British to land upon Russian soil? No! the headwaters of these inlets were recognized as being in British territory, and free passage from those waters was guaranteed through Russian waters to the Pacific Ocean. A converse line also proves the fallacy of the American contention, for the claim sovereignty over the ocean for three miles from the mouth of the Lynn and other canals. Are there two lines? Each, I presume, is for convenience or argument.

LAND IN DISPUTE.

The British territory claimed by the United States beyond the treaty strip of coast is more than three hundred miles from north to south and from fourteen to seventy miles wide, and completely bars Great Britain's free access to the Pacific, which was guaranteed by the treaty of 1825. And again, how are these indisputable figures reconciled with the statement of Mr. Secretary Blaine in writing in 1890 to the British Ambassador; "A strip of land, at no point wider than ten marine leagues, running along the Pacific Ocean, from 30 degrees 40 minutes to 60 degrees was assigned to Russia by the IIId Article of Russia's Treaty with Great Britain." It is the same strip of land which the United States acquired in the purchase of Alaska.

In 1867 Alaska was ceded to the United States, but not until the following year did Congress enact the necessary legislation to complete the treaty. Three years elapsed, and in July, 1871, Canada became territorially a party to the boundary difficulty. Only eight months elapsed, viz., until March 12, 1872, when Canada drew attention to the question, and asked the United States to join her in delineating the boundary. Mr. Secretary Fisher replied in November, 1872, that the matter would be laid before Congress. From that date for several years Canada officially brought the matter to the attention of the American authorities, to be met with the same indifferent reply. In more recent years the United States has shown more interest in the matter and has entered into discussions, yet refusing any fair agreement for submission to arbitration. Why? Canada asks that the rules of the Venezuelan boundary reference be applied, as Great Britain was practically forced by the United States into that now historic arbitration and rather than let the dogs of war loose, consented to it. Is it not fair to suppose that the United States should accept the same mode of settlement.

A GREAT FUTURE FOR NEW ONTARIO

As Great an Attraction for Colonists as the Canadian Northwest

THE GOVERNMENT HAS CONTROL OF SETTLERS

What the Recent Deal With the American Syndicate Means to the Province of Ontario

Toronto, Nov. 25.—New Ontario would appear to be as great an attraction to colonists now as the North-West, judging from the bigness of the scheme published a few days ago. A syndicate from the United States, represented by Mr. J. F. Egan of Rock Island, Ill., and Mr. W. H. Utt, of Chicago, has been making arrangements with the Ontario Government to colonize 2,000,000 acres of land within ten years, which means the location of something like 50,000 people all told. They will pay the Government the ordinary rate of 50 cents an acre, the patent to issue direct to the settler, the company having the right to sell their right to the land at a price to be agreed upon with the purchaser, but not to exceed $2 per acre.

The Government have absolute control as to the class of settlers to be brought in to be placed upon the lands, the quantity of land which may be handed over each season, and while the maximum amount of land is stated to be 2,000,000 acres, the agreement will provide that at any time the Government may discontinue giving land when it seems to be in the public interest so to do. They agree to construct certain leading roads and to afford other advantages for the opening up of the country. The company bind themselves to pay the settler's transportation to his location, and loan him money to help in the erection of buildings and improvements. They cannot get land until they get settlers on it. The proposition is to give them townships where the public interest will be served by so doing, and not interfere with the ordinary inflow of settlers under the present Colonization Bureau.

The proposition is to bring in English speaking white settlers, who are able to read and write, and who are of good character. In case the Government consider it advisable, some Scandinavian or German settlers may be offered; their acceptance, however, will be optional with the Government.

While it is the intention of the company to bring the great mass of the settlers from the United States, it should be understood that Canadian settlers will be welcomed on the same terms, he concluded.

So far as meets the eye, at any rate, the plan seems to be a very good one, more particularly respecting the company's intentions with regard to settlers from other parts of Canada. There is ground for reproach against our Government immigration departments, that all their efforts are used to bring in foreign settlers, while all the time there must be numbers of sturdy young Canadians who would go out on the land, to their own and their country's good, if they had the means. This company's project looks as if it may fill this want.

CRIME DUE TO HER JEALOUSY

Further Details About the Murder of Miss Florence McFarline by Mrs. Lula Youngs

The Murderess Desperate Because of Her Husband's Intimacy With the Dead Girl

Rochester, Nov. 25.—Jealousy appears to have been the cause of the murder of Miss Florence McFarlin by Mrs. Lulu Youngs. Mrs. Philip Saint Louis, an old lady, was the only person in the house besides the murdered girl. She started for the front of the house. As she entered the hallway she was knocked over by Miss McFarlin, who came dashing into the kitchen streaming with blood. After her was a woman with a knife. Miss McFarlin stumbled and fell just inside the kitchen door, and the other woman threw herself on her and plunged the knife into the fallen girl's breast.

As the assailant arose she cried, "You will come between me and my husband, will you, you hussy?" Mrs Saint Louis was too overcome by shock and terror to rise. Miss McFarlin lay dead on the floor. The muderess left the house. Before she went the old woman cried to her:

"Why did you kill this girl?"

The question seemed to stun the woman for an instant. She stared at the body on the floor, and putting her hands to her face, she moaned:

"Oh, what have I done, what have I done? She ruined my home."

Truman E. Miller, father of Mrs. Youngs, made the following statement:

"My daughter was married to Youngs about two years ago, and they have not lived happily. He has been running around with this woman for some time, and my daughter has been heartbroken over his actions. She has pleaded with him to no avail, and then she thought, I suppose, the only way to end the matter was to attack this woman who came between them.

"She told her mother and her sister at the house that she went to this girl's house and stabbed her, but she did not know that she had killed her.

"She told us that the girl took her into the parlor, and that while there, Lulu, my daughter, upbraided her for her actions. The woman did not deny my daughter's accusations, she said, but, instead, began to abuse and berate her. Angered beyond control, Lulu pulled out the knife and stabbed her. She admitted that much to me. I don't think she went there to kill her."

Mrs. Miller, mother of Mrs. Youngs, said this afternoon: "When Youngs left my daughter this morning he said he would shoot her this noon if she said any more about his actions with the McFarlin woman. He had often threatened to shoot her when she expostulated, and drew a revolver on her and her sister Hazel one evening. Youngs came here this morning after he had heard of the affair, and I wouldn't let him in."

Lulu Miller Youngs is about 28 years old, and has been married to Mr. Youngs about two years. She was formerly married to a man named Sanders, and had been divorced from her first husband. She was married to Youngs by an alderman.

John Van Hoorhie & Sons have been retained to look after Mrs. Youngs' interests, and acting upon the advice of her counsel she has refused to make any statement.

NEW "HOLY GHOST" JAILED IN NEW YORK

He Pulled a Preacher From the Pulpit and Got Into Trouble

AND THE DEACONS SAT ON HIM

A Free Fight in one of the Churches of the City

New York, Nov. 25.—Helge G. Nelson, a religious enthusiast, who has proclaimed himself as "the Holy Ghost," from California to this city, was a prisoner yesterday in the Harlem Police Court, charged with having twice during the last week disturbed services in the Church of the Seventh Day Adventists, of Harlem, in 11th street, near Lexington avenue. He was arrested on Saturday after making a sensational descent on the church, accompanied by a long-haired bodyguard and a woman whom he calls his "spiritual wife."

The trio ejected the pastor of the church, the Rev. E. M. Sell, and his assistant, the Rev. Elmer Frank, from the pulpit, and were only overpowered when the entire Board of Deacons, with several of the heavy men in the congregation, literally sat on them.

In court Nelson insisted that he was the Holy Ghost, and that he left his seat on the "right hand of the Lord" to come to New York to redeem those who have strayed away from the true path of virtue and dogmatic rectitude. The magistrate nevertheless held him for examination to-day, and in default of bail sent him to the Harlem prison.

HOW IT ALL HAPPENED.

Shortly after the services started the trio again appeared at the church and tried to enter. Two of the deacons stopped the woman from going into the edifice. Nelson and Bergendahl managed to force their way past those who tried to obstruct their passage, and, rushing into the church, dashed at once for the pulpit. This time the two clergymen of the church were occupying it. They prepared to resist any attempt to dislodge them. A fight, in which the two ministers, half a dozen deacons, and other members of the congregation, took part, followed. Nelson managed to reach the top of the platform by sprawling under the legs of a deacon, and began to address the congregation.

"I am the Holy Ghost," he yelled. "I am here on a mission of God. In my home, at the left side of the Lord, I am supreme. You are a lot of heretics and I have come to save you."

With this he was seized by the collar and pulled down, despite the efforts of Bergendahl to protect him. The fight extended all the way down the pulpit steps and along the aisle. The women members of the congregation screamed and fled.

The "Holy Ghost" was floored in a minute, but was quickly on his feet again, and succeeded in reaching the foot of the pulpit, where he was caught again. This time he was swept off his feet and thrown to the ground. Before he could rise five deacons sat on him. Others took care of his bodyguard and policemen were called.

A BIG VOLCANOES AWFUL HAVOC

Five Thousand Natives Reported Killed

BY SANTA MARIA'S ERUPTION

Coffee Plantations Utterly Ruined—Refugees Said to Have Been Waylaid and Robbed

San Francisco, Nov. 27. — W. J Campbell, who has just arrived from Guatemala, brings additional details of damage caused by the recent volcanic disturbances. He said:—"There is no clear idea yet of the loss of life resulting from the eruption on Santa Maria, but I believe five thousand natives have been killed. There was some talk at San Jose too, of some refugees having been waylaid by robbers, but I saw no instance of this. I took the first means of getting back to this country, having been impoverished. At San Jose it was said President Cabrera was trying to suppress the news, but evidence of ruin was apparent to everybody. Some of the coffee fincas that have been nearly ruined were worth more than $1,000,000. The plantation of Albert James, which was wiped out, had machinery upon it worth $300,000, all of which is destroyed. Some months ago James refused an offer of $1,500,000. Adolf Meyer's finca, worth $75,000 in gold, was ruined. Both of these places lay from twenty to forty miles west of the volcano.

DEPUTATION TO BERLIN BEET SUGAR FACTORY

Consisting of the Town and County Councils Mr. Wm. Collins and Others

The Town Council met last night in special session last night to discuss the advisability of sending a deputation to Berlin to inspect the large Beet Sugar Factory in operation there, with a view of securing all the information possible regarding this new and rapidly growing industry in Canada. The Peterborough Beet Sugar Company propose to establish in town a similar institution to that of Berlin, at a cost of about $600,000, in which event they will expect the Town either to take stock in the concern or aid them by way of a substantial bonus.

There were present at the meeting Mayor T. H. G. Denne, presiding, and Alderman Batten, Clinkscale, Shortly, Corkery, Best, Roger, McGregor, and J. J. Turner.

Mayor Denne in calling the meeting to order said he thought it advisable for a deputation to join the County Council in a trip to Berlin, in order to learn what what kind of an industry that of manufacturing beet sugar is, and the benefit such an institution is likely to prove to Peterborough.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn, one of the Provisional Directors of the Peterborough Beet Sugar Company, addressed the Council. He would not, he said, go into details, as the question had been pretty thoroughly discussed before. Since the last meeting, however, three Beet Sugar factories have been started in the west—one at Berlin, and one at Wallaceburg and Dresden. His object in being present was to request that a deputation consisting of the whole council, if possible, be appointed to go with the County Council, the President of the Farmers' Institute, and possibly a deputation from the Board of Trade, to Berlin on Thursday morning next, at 8.20, via the Grand Trunk Railway. If a party of 20 can be secured a special through car will be engaged at the rate of $5.70 each return ticket. Mr. Bradburn said that he had himself visited a beet sugar factory in Michigan which has proved to be a very paying concern, and of great benefit to the locality in which it is situated. It consumes about $250,000 or $300,000 worth of beets a year, and it pays out for labor $25,000 per annum. He thought this a highly satisfacory exemplification of the possibilities of such an institution. The Peterborough Company have already sufficient promises to raise the amount of stock required for its proposed factory, in which they are going to ask the town to take stock. The corporation can be empowered to do this by legislation, and he felt confident that it would prove a paying investment. Berlin and Wiarton gave $25,000 and $30,000, respectively to their Beet Sugar Factories, while Dresden appropriated $40,000 for a like purpose. The latter town's by-law provided that the amount could be either used in bonusing the institution, or invested in the factory; this was subsequently legalized by the Legislature.

Ald. Best moved that Ald. Roger, the Mayor and Ald. McGregor, (the latter representing the labor interests) be a deputation to go to Berlin.

Mr. Bradburn here remarked that it will take 26 factories like that of Berlin to supply sugar for Canadian consumption alone.

Ald. McGregor thought it advisable that all the council should be a deputation as it is desirable that they should become thoroughly conversant with the question before taking any active steps in the direction suggested by Mr. Bradburn.

Ald. Clinkscale moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. Batten, that as many of the council as possible be a deputation visit Berlin and that they take Mr. William Collins and a representative from each of the local press with them.

The amendment was carried after which council adjourned.

The Ontario Political Situation.

It has been clear since the general elections took place that unless another general election should be held the fate of the government would be decided at the bye-elections. Counting North Renfrew, the government had, when the elections were over, a majority of three, or of two not counting the speaker, but a majority of this size is not sufficient to enable any government to carry on public business. To retain office it is therefore necessary for the government to carry, not only all the seats which it secured last May, but to win some of the seats then captured by its opponents.

The seats now vacant are North Renfrew, North Perth, North Norfolk and North Grey. In East Middlesex the protest has been heard and judgment reserved. In South Oxford the protest has been partly heard, and the trial adjourned until next month. The particulars in some cases have been delivered, and the dates of trial fixed, but it seems doubtful if the trials will ever come off. Should there be no more trials the battle will be fought out in the vacant constituencies, and in East Middlesex and South Oxford, should these districts be opened. Should the government hold its own districts and win the vacant seats that were formerly held by the Conservatives, it would probably have a working majority; should it win only one seat, it might be able to pull through a session, but should it suffer the net loss of one seat it would have to give up the fight. This is exactly how matters stand.

QUAKER OATS ADVERTISING

How the American Cereal Company Sell Their Products

Advertising Schemes Which Produce Big Results—Sampling the Ontario Cities

Advertising schemes that produce big results quickly are usually strikingly new and original. Many original advertising methods have been tried and have turned out successful, often more so than their devisers anticipated.

A new scheme of advertising that is working well is that adopted by the American Cereal Co., of Peterborough, in introducing their Quaker Oats, says the Printer and Publisher. Besides advertising extensively in the daily and weekly newspapers, this company give away samples of their products to the public, furnishing a package to every house in the cities and towns of the country. Usually, in distributing gratuitously samples of their products, the manufacturer only gives away small samples of the article he is advertising, but, in this case, the American Cereal Co. generously give away as samples large and handsome packages containing enough of their oats for a meal for five or six persons. And not only is each free sample large, but it is delivered in a strikingly unique way. To impress firmly the idea "Quaker" upon the mind of each person they come in contact with, this company has adopted a novel plan. It is this: The handsome wagons with which they deliver the samples as accompanied by four nice looking young men, all dressed as Quakers in the drab clothes and peculiar hats adopted by those people. The young men hand the samples in at every house, and of course the fame of their approach goes before them, and the cry of "The Quakers are coming" creates in the minds of all a curiosity to have a look at them, which is only satisfied by acting on the impulse. Thus, everyone becomes acquainted with the "Quakers."

Besides advertising by means of these rigs, the company have put all over the city a large number of illustrated posters, and at night have thrown on a screen put on the side of some large building in a leading thoroughfare stereoptican views, including interesting pictures and advertisements of Quaker Oats and other products. Kites, also bearing inscriptions advertising their product, are flown by day, altogether making a complete system of advertising.

The above methods of advertising and introducing the products of this company have been successful in Chicago and other large cities in the United States and in London, England, and are now being employed in Canada for the first time, the larger cities being first worked, then the smaller cities and towns. The promoters are already much pleased with the success that is following their efforts in Canada.

The Critical Time of Life

Is between the age of fifty-seven and sixty-two. Nature's power slows down, vitality becomes less, and the process of decay sets in. A means of extending old age and renewing decreasing vigor is to take Ferrozone after meals. Ferrozone keeps up the appetite, and in the formation of red, vitalizing blood, imparts clearness to the tiring brain, force, energy and spirits just when they are needed most. To take Ferrozone regularly means adding from ten to twenty years to life. Large boxes 50c., or 6 boxes at $2.50, at Druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

IS CZAR INFLUENCED BY SPIRITUALIST?

Report Says He Takes no Important Action Without Consulting Philipp

London, Nov. 24—A Vienna correspondent of the Neue-Freie Presse, which previously reproduced from a Berlin periodical an account of the alleged extraordinary influence exercised by a Spiritualist named Phillip, at the Russian court, now publishes fresh particulars from a well-informed source. The paper says that Philip was presented to the Czar at the House of the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicolaievitch, the Czar's cousin. He now occupies a quite exceptional position at the court as an occulist, and hypnotist. It is even asserted by persons closely connected with the court that the Czar takes no important decision without consulting Phillip who advises his Majesty in regard to matters affecting his family life. Philippe' "phychic" treatment is said to have had an unfavorable effect on the Czarina last May.

London, Nov. 23—A Constantinople correspondent says that the heads of the non-Mussulman communities attended the Sultan's birthday levee and made congratulatory speeches to His Majesty. The latter, in replying, said: "I make no distinction between my Mohammedan and my Christian subjects. They are all alike to me, and all stand on the same level in my estimation." The correspondent says that this was the first time that the Sultan had thus expressed himself in public. The declaration has attracted considerable attention, especially as its tenor does not harmonize with the ideas which his Majesty is known to hold on the subject.

A GOOD DEBATE.

Another Successful Entertainment at the T. A.S. Hall.

The debate and concert announced for the T.A.S. last night was a brilliant success. The principal feature of the evening was a debate on the subject—Resolved "That the trial by jury shall be abolished." After able addresses by Messrs. C. Murty and F. McAuliffe for the affirmative and Messrs. J. and T. Begley for the negative, the arguments were summed up by Rev. Dr. O'Brien and gave a decision in favor of the negative.

The following musical numbers were presented during the evening—Duet by the Misses Doris; vocal solo by Mr. Turner, and recitation by Miss Carrie Waite previous to the debate and afterwards solos by Mr. Jas. Brown and recitations by Miss White.

Before the close of the programme the chairman announced the usual social evening in the rooms next Thursday, an entertainment under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid, in the Opera House on December 1st, and the postponement of the next entertainment in the hall to three weeks instead of the customary fortnight.

The accompanists for the musical part of the programme were the Misses McCabe and Doris.

DEFICIT IN GERMANY.

Reichstag to Be Asked to Increase Taxes.

Berlin, Nov. 25.—The Secretary of the Treasury declared in the Reichstag today that the financial situation in Germany at present was unfavorable. The estimates which would be brought before the Reichstag after the Christmas recess would show a deficit of 150,000,000 marks.

The Secretary said that some taxes would have to be increased in order to provide for the deficit in the budget.

Thousands of Women Are Kept in Suffering and Many Die Owing to False Treatment

Paine's Celery Compound

Never Fails To Banish Disease and Re-Establish Lasting Health

Thousands of women are kept in sickness for months and years owing to false treatment and the use of worthless medicines, and we are inclined to believe that Milton thought of this class of almost dying women when he said:

"The angelic guards ascended, mute and sad."

The common sense treatment of today for weak, rundown, and suffering women, is Paine's Celery Compound. This marvellous medicine is spoken of in every part of the civilized world, and men and women of all classes find a new life from its use. A glorious example of the curing powers of the great compound comes from Winnipeg, Man.; Mrs. H. Harbour writes as follows:

"A month ago I was very sick and happened to see one of your publications, in which I read of others being cured. I concluded to try Paine's Celery Compound myself, and I now thank God for the wonders it accomplished for me. I was suffering from heart disease, kidney trouble and general weakness, and some days was not able to stand without experiencing great pain. Since I used the compound I am able to get about the house and work, and can now eat anything put before me."

CAUSES OF POTATO FAILURES

One of the most destructive diseases of the potato is Rhizoctonia solani Kuhn, and in bulletin No. 70, Prof. F. W. Rolfs gives a preliminary chapter on this trouble and suggests treatment. Being a fungous disease which permeates every part of the affected plant, it is very difficult to control. There is no practical method of checking it after it is once introduced into the soil. The only method to control is by preventive means. The disease may be carried on seed, on beet roots, dry potato stems, etc. Consequently great care should be taken to get rid of all rubbish by burning as soon as the potatoes are harvested, and also to prevent their getting into the manure heap. It is believed that the fungus remains in the soil three years, consequently a diseased field should be cropped with clover or alfalfa for at least that length of time.

Treating the seed with a corrosive sublimate solution, one ounce of the sublimate to eight gallons of water, soaked one and one-half hours, is fairly satisfactory. Dissolve in an earthen or wooden dish. This is a rank poison, and must be kept away from animals. Formalin, one-half pint to fifteen gallons of water, is also a fungicide, and the potatoes should be soaked in it for two hours. These treatments recommended not only tend to kill the germs on the potato, but seem to increase the vigor of the seed. They reduce considerably the ravages of the fungus.

As the success of the crop depends upon the vigor of the seed, Professor Rolf makes the following suggestion concerning its treatment;—After digging, it is stored in a dark shed or barn until about November 10. Just before freezing sets in, the potatoes are sorted, and those showing the slightest signs of decay are rejected. A layer of straw eight to ten inches thick is placed upon the ground and the tubers placed upon this. The piles should not be made very large. The best results are usually obtained by moulds three feet at the base and piled up in ridges as high as convenient. A pile of straw is placed over the potatoes, and this is in turn covered with soil to a depth of six to eight inches. More is added when the weather becomes severe. This method of storing potatoes seems to winter them much better than when placed in cellars. About the last of April they are taken from the pit and stored in a dark shed or barn until a few days before planting time, when they are given the treatment suggested above.

ELECTRIC LIGHT BATHS

Each year adds to the modern improvements in the house. It is not sufficient now to have the house heated by steam, lighted by electricity and furnished with certain up-to-date conveniences.

The well-appointed house of the immediate future is to have its electric apparatus for the purpose of giving light baths. Not every house has the requisite amount of air and light, or if these are furnished in abundance when the sun is bright and the atmosphere clear there are days, not to say weeks, when the sun does not shine and the air is heavy with noxious vapors. The human system feels the lack of sunshine, and the result is heaviness of spirits, to say nothing of positive illness.

A substitute for the good effects of sunshine is now provided by electric rays. Numerous well-equipped institutions on the continent are found where the "light-room" is a part of the establishment.

Queen Alexandra has just finished an electrical therapeutic hospital in London where invalids, nervous women and delicate children have the benefit of this vitalizing light. It remains for Americans to follow suit and to devise a way not only to have these electric rays in hospitals, but to have them a part of the ordinary outfit of a well-ordered home.

Then there will be no need of seeking a sunny clime in winter or of avoiding the melancholy days of November. Light and cheer will be provided in the home as easily as is the glowing fire — or rather as the fire did glow before the days of the coal barons.

PROPOSE TO BEAT NATURE

PURE DIAMONDS WILL SOON BE MADE IN CANADA

A Factory Now Being Built at Niagara Falls to Make the Pure Article

Niagara Falls, Nov. 24.—The manufacture of artificial diamonds has long been regarded as an impossibility. A score of men learned in chemistry and skilled as lapidaries have spent years in a fruitless endeavor to equal the product of nature in this direction. Now however, the prospect of the manufacture of diamonds by scientific means is considered so likely as to be predicted in a Government report. T. G. Martin, an expert special agent of the U. S. census office, has written a long and very interesting report on the electrical industries of the United States, in which he incidentally refers to the attempts that have been made to produce diamonds artificially. He recalls the fact that Moissan, the Frenchman, pushed the employment of the electric arc so far as to produce minute fragmentary diamonds in his furnaces. Moissan also noted the production of graphite from a diamond heated in the arc and from the similar treatment of sugar charcoal purified by chlorine and of purified wood charcoal.

"In fact," says Mr. Martin, "it was due to his investigation in this field that he was led to his celebrated observation on the formation of diamonds by the sudden cooling in mercury or mud of molten iron saturated with carbon. Out of all such work it was but natural that fanciful speculations should arise as to the possibility of establishing factories for the regular manufacture of genuine diamonds at Niagara Falls, where the cheap current and other essentials would be available, but nothing has resulted within the period under consideration from these plausible and sanguine theories. The fact remains, however, that in our modern electrical furnaces diamond dust has been produced, and the steps leading to the manufacture of larger crystals will be but sequential."

Are you going to vote for whisky or water—or both?

The new steel elevators at Fort William lie about one and a half miles straight along the river bank, west and look like so many gasometers. The first sixteen are sixty feet high, and about the same width. The more interesting ones, those being built, are made of half-inch steel plates, five feet wide, and sixteen of them, laid in widths, form a tank. Its dimensions being 80 feet in hight and 28 feet in diameter, with a wheat capacity of 41,000 bushels. They rest on a concrete foundation, upon which cement pillars and walls 18 feet in height are first built. None of these tanks will be ready for wheat this year.

to live upon, so that I should have my time to myself for the search.

"When my mother told me this story of the past she was already an invalid. She would have no nurse but me, even had we been able to afford it. She suffered continually, and could not be left alone for long, so that my ways of earning a living were precarious. A few months after she died I took the first step towards keeping my promise to her. I sailed for England—a steerage passenger. Exactly what my life was after that adds no interest to my tale, but it had its ups and downs, mostly downs, until a fortunate whim of fate tossed into my hands what once would have seemed to be a great fortune. I made a queer bargain, with a clause at the end of it which was left vague; but I was ready to do almost anything, not dishonorable, for money.

"Only for one brief interval of madness did I lose sight of my object; but, though I thought of nothing else, worked for nothing else, I never seemed to be nearer to my goal. Often I followed false clues, but they always led me back again to the starting place, until one day I met a shabby fellow in the street who begged of me with an American accent. He was near the house of a rich man whom I knew very well, and had been there hoping to see the millionaire, whom he stated that he had known long ago; but as the master was abroad he was turned away by the servants, who refused to believe in the alleged friendship.

"I gave the fellow something, more because he was an American than for any other reason, but a few words he carelessly let drop interested me for another more selfish one. I stood him a dinner, with a little good wine, and he poured out confidences. He had lived in one of the Western States, and had owned a little land thirty years ago with several houses upon it. One of these houses was unlet and had stood empty for some time, when it began to have the reputation of being haunted. People in the neighborhood heard queer chattering noises at night, and were afraid to go near the place. But the owner was not afraid. He went in and found a terrible wreck of manhood there—a poor wretch with his face so burnt with vitriol that it was more like a piece of raw meat than a face; and, still more horrible, he lacked a foot, which had been lately amputated, literally hacked off, as if by the hand of an amateur.

"The sufferer was raving with fever, and almost dead. How long he had been there or how he came the owner of the house could not tell, but he was more than half starved, and in his delirium said strange things—the strangest of all, that he had deliberately worked the evil upon himself for motives untold. He was tended and cared for as well as possible in that lonely neighborhood, where there was not a doctor within thirty miles, and a marvelous constitution pulled him through, horribly disfigured and lame though he must be to the end of his days.

"When he was able to speak coherently he told a story of a fire in the nearest town, in which he had all but lost his life, saying that, as his foot was nearly burnt off, he had himself cut bone and flesh away, lest mortification should set in. After that he professed to have no recollection of anything which happened; and as he had plenty of money in a belt he wore next his skin, the owner of the house was not too pressing in his curiosity. He was well paid for his care, and it was not until after his mysterious guest had vanished as unexpectedly as he had come that he found out there had been no fire of importance in the town mentioned for many months.

"Years passed on and brought troubles to my American friend. He lost his money and had various mishaps, finally going out to South Africa. There he heard of the great millionaire with the scarred face and hobbling limp, which his intimates whispered was caused by an artificial foot. The American tramped up country to find him, only just in time to see the man getting into a train at the railway station. But he recognized the hideous face, and was bitterly disappointed at losing the chance of claiming help as a reward for what he had done in the past.

"Somehow he managed, after a few months more, to get to England, and determined to make a good sum out of his former services, perhaps get a start in business. But he only arrived to find his quarry had slipped away again.

"You can imagine, Comtesse, that this story set me thinking. If a man had the fearful courage to disfigure himself in a way so horrible, so painful, it could only have been because he must choose between losing his identity or his life. Such grim pluck, such iron self-control might almost win admiration, were it not the desperation of a moral coward, ready to sacrifice all that makes existence precious for the sake of the bare chance of escaping death.

"Needless to tell you that I have the American where I can put my hand upon him when I want him. When I had arranged this, I followed the millionaire, with whom I had actually been on terms of friendship, feeling as if I had dreamt the months of intimacy with him, months which I had wasted in vain search, my eyes everywhere save on the one man who should have held them.

"Fate had already played me some strange tricks, but none stranger than that which put me on the track of the moonstone Sphinx in the very moment of reaching the end of my journey. He had had it for years, and the clue seemed complete; but the moonstone was gone out of his possession for the first time. I could neither hope to find it with him nor to obtain it myself and confront him with it in the hour of his downfall, unless——"

"Unless I give it back to you!" exclaimed the Comtesse.

"Exactly. Or even lend it. What I want is to hear him claim it as his own."

Her answer was to snatch up the stone from the table and impulsively place it in Newcome's hand. "It is yours, as it has always been. You have won your wager, and I pay my debt."

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

The Price She Was to Pay.

Winifred Gray did not deceive herself. She knew what she was doing in going alone to the house of Lionel Macaire. She knew what his reputation was; she knew how, since she had shown the loathing she felt for him and his insults, he had built up, stone by stone, his scheme of revenge.

Sometimes a stone had fallen with the dull ring of failure for him; but he had set it up again with another piled upon it; and when she went to keep the appointment at his house, the shameful structure he had planned would be complete.

ISSUE OF

$1,000,000 7% Preferred Stock in 10,000 Shares of $100 each at par.

CANADIAN STEEL & COAL CO

CAPITAL.

50,000 shares Common Stock, par value $100 each, issued and fully paid	$5,000,000 00
10,000 shares 7 per cent. Cumulative Preference Stock, par value $100 each	$1,000,000 00
Total Capitalization	$6,000,000 00

PREFERENCE STOCK

This Stock is preferred both as to Capital and Dividends.

The shares are entitled to cumulative preferential dividends from the net earnings of the Company, at the rate of 7 per cent per annum, payable half-yearly on the first days of April and October. They may, at the option of the holder, be exchanged for common shares. They are subject to be called in, in whole or in part, by the Company, at $115.00 per share, at any time on or after 1st January, 1909.

The total issue of Preferred Stock is only $1,000,000.00, the whole of which is now offered.

Subscriptions for 10,000 shares of $100 each of the 7 per cent Preferred Stock of the CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY will now be received at par, that is, $100 for each $100 share as follows :—

5 per cent on application.
20 per cent on allotment.
25 per cent each 30 days thereafter.

One share of common, par value $100.00, given with each share of preferred.

The whole of the instalments remaining unpaid at any time may be prepaid in full. A discount of one per cent will be allowed upon the par of each share prepaid at time of allotment.

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company.

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are :—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey :—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4 05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5 23
	100 00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 ton re above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows :—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4 00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows :—

	ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902, to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2 70
July 1st, 1903, " " 1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904, " " 1905	1 65	1.65
July 1st, 1905, " " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906, " " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows :—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6½ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000 00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000.00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to .... $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is .... $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is...... $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

HAS BEEN LIVING A DOUBLE LIFE

Brooklyn Lawyer Who Stole $30,000 Passed as "Judge" Stone

ANOTHER EXTRAORDINARY CARE

Abroad He Consorted With Gamblers, Played the Races and Promoted Pugilism

New York, Nov. 22.—"Judge" Franklin Stone, of Philadelphia, who organized the Kentucky Mutual Sweepstakes Association, and was recently reported to have bought 25 yearlings from Col. Milton Young, for $50,000 turns out to be Frank C. Martin, who was a bright young lawyer and rising politician, when he fled from Brooklyn eight years ago, accused of fraudulently obtaining $30,000 from a client. He went to South America, but returned five years ago, and has since lived in Philadelphia under his new name. He owned Daffy-down-dilly and San Andrea, which raced at the Buffalo meeting last September. He is now in custody in Brooklyn.

Stone declares the culprit was a clerk in his office on whom all the duties devolved because he himself was so engrossed with horse racing that he slighted his business. This clerk, whose name he refuses to divulge, was in ill-health, and when he was thought to be dying he confessed his sin to Martin, first extracting a solemn promise that his revelations would be held secret. Because of this promise to the man, who died soon after he had fled, Martin says he has sacrificed all his brilliant prospects, sacrificed all his brilliant prospects, has been forced to hide his head from those who knew him, has been compelled to take an assumed name and to begin his battle with the world anew.

But in Philadelphia he led a dual existence. To those who knew him and his wife and two sons socially he was the ideal family man, his occupation being that of a capitalist, a broker or a banker. A church member he was liberal in his contributions to charity, and was believed by some to be a millionaire. In the directory he was put down as a lawyer, but he had no office, and never was he known to appear in court.

Away from home he was intimate with gamblers; he owned horses and made heavy wagers on their racing; he was the leading spirit in a club which offered purses for pugilistic contests, and it is said that at one time his money was behind a notorious poolroom. He also organized and put into operation a scheme to sell pools on the races to the public, using the postal facilities as the medium for their distribution.

Even though he shouldered his dying clerk's burden, he says he had decided to make restitution to the swindled woman, even though he had not profited one cent on her losses. To that end, he says, he opened negotiations with her, hoping some day to reimburse her in full and then reveal himself to the world as Frank C. Martin.

Moving a House

Mr. Allan McCarthy, the well known house mover, has a big job on hand. He is taking a large strip house, [illegible] Charlotte street, opposite the Methodist church to a lot in Bolivar street, a distance of [illegible] feet. The house weighs about [illegible] tons.

Interesting Items.

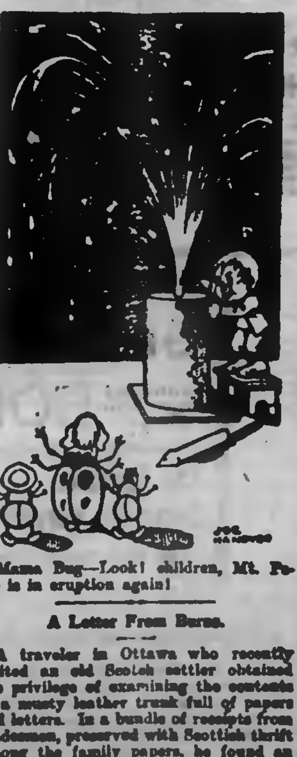
Farmers in Sanpete County, Utah, are having "pin-shows," only they use grasshoppers instead of pins as tickets of admission. The crops last year were ruined by the grasshoppers. This year the farmers determined to destroy the pests, so they arranged for a series of entertainments to which only those might be admitted who brought half a bushel of grasshoppers with them. Seventy-five bushels were the receipts of the first entertainment. The grasshoppers were burned at the close of the evening's amusement.

The Eastern manager of the Pennsylvania Railway has issued an order forbidding passengers to exchange kisses with their friends in the Jersey City station. They must give such greetings and farewells where they will not obstruct traffic. The Western manager says this order will not be enforced on his side of the Alleghany Mountains. And there you have it—the broad, expansive osculatory freedom of the West pitted against the exclusiveness of the East!

In London a curious experiment was recently tried by a South American named Papuse. Having wrapped around his body three hundred and fifty yards of flannel he lay down in a sort of glass coffin, which was then hermetically closed and placed at the bottom of a large tank filled with water. By means of an electric ventilator and of a tube, one end of which passed into the coffin, a constant supply of fresh air was assured, and this air was the only nourishment which Papuse received during the eight days that the experiment lasted. An eight days' fast is not an extraordinary occurrence, but what is particularly interesting about the present case is that the faster did not consume any water.

The "Lancet" has unearthed the curious fact that nearly all the important events in the life of His Majesty King Edward VII. have happened on a Tuesday. He was born, baptized, and married on a Tuesday; on a Tuesday he was appointed a member of the Privy Council; on a Tuesday it was definitely ascertained that he had contracted typhoid fever, and it was on a Tuesday he attended the public thanksgiving service for his recovery. On a Tuesday he succeeded to the throne; on a Tuesday the Royal Standard was first hoisted at Marlborough House, and on a Tuesday His Majesty underwent an operation for perityphlitis. Students of "the occult" may be able to deduce something from this dominance of the day dedicated to the god of war in the life of the King, but without any such deduction the series of coincidences is a very remarkable one.

Not only the horses but the powers of the law, says the London "Chronicle," are swift at Ascot, for the course has a special tribunal for the punishment of evildoers. No sooner is the pickpocket, welsher, or ticket-snatcher arrested than he is standing before Sir Albert de Rutzen in a little room in the royal stand, where the evidence is heard and the verdict and sentence pronounced before the offender fully realizes that he is caught. Nowhere else does punishment so swiftly follow crime as at this court, which is decreed by clause 31 of the Indictable Offences Act of 1848. This race-course tribunal arose curiously in the eighteenth century from an assault upon a royal personage. In his indignation at the impossibility of instant punishment of the assailant, he ordered that in future a magistrate should always attend the royal race meeting. This has ever since been done, and by the above-mentioned act the chief magistrate of Bow street was constituted ex officio a justice of the peace of the County of Berks, in order to enable him to hold this court at Ascot.



Mama Bug—Look! children, Mt. Pelee is in eruption again!

A Letter From Burns.

A traveler in Ottawa who recently visited an old Scotch settler obtained the privilege of examining the contents of a musty leather trunk full of papers and letters. In a bundle of receipts from tradesmen, preserved with Scottish thrift among the family papers, he found an unpublished letter from Robert Burns. The New York "Sun" gives it as follows, and justly remarks that it shows the great poet at his best, a sympathetic, kindly man at heart:

R. Burns, Dr., to G. Turnbull, for five copies of his poems at 2s 6d—12s 6d.

Dear Sir: I send you by John Glover, carrier, the above amount for Mr. Turnbull, as I suppose you have his address.

I would fain offer, my dear sir, a word of sympathy with your misfortunes, but it is a tender thing, and I know not how to touch it. It is easy to flourish a set of high-flown sentiments that would give great satisfaction to "a breast quite at ease," but as one observes who was seldom mistaken in the theory of life, "The heart knoweth its own sorrows, and a stranger intermeddleth not therewith." Among some distressful emergencies that I have experienced, I ever laid this down as my foundation of comfort, "that he who has lived the life of an honest man has by no means lived in vain."

With every wish for your welfare and future success, I am, my dear sir, sincerely yours,

ROBERT BURNS.

Ellisland, May 26, 1789.
To Mr. James Hamilton, Grocer, Trongate, Glasgow.

WILL NOT LOSE ALL

The Lakefield men who speculated in the Canadian Osage Illuminating Oil Company's stock have been very anxious lately. They have had every reason to feel that the money invested was lost forever, but they are not so bad off as they feared. As we understand, Dr. Baker, one of the gentlemen who went south to purchase the stock has returned [illegible] and has paid over a considerable sum in discharge of his responsibility in connection with the transaction.

Their Vacations.

The musicians will live on the Sound, and the ping-pong players will go to Table Bay, suggests New York "Life." The summer girls will naturally go to the Isle of Man, and those too old to be loved will seek the Isle of Pines. Dipsomaniacs will go to Bar Harbor, brewers to Behring Straits, while all reformed drunkards will go to Haddam. The coal men will flock to Asheville, poets will go to Attica, geometricians to Cuba, tramps to Bath, horseback riders to Canterbury, funny men to Chestnut Ridge, golf players to Bunker Hill, philanthropists to the Bounty Islands, Boston girls to Chili, and chiropodists to Cornwall.

Printers will go to Ems, aurists to Erie, pawnbrokers to Hocking Valley, spiritualists to Knoxville, burglars to Lock Haven, Pullman car porters to Palm Beach, but there is some doubt about the Filipinos going to Liberty. Those who linger too long will go to Tarytown.

All the stuffs will go to Turkey. Prohibitionists will go to the Water Gap, and all practical jokers to Cape Cod. Some Wall Street men will go to Great Bear Lake and others to Bull Run. Folks troubled with insomnia will go to Sleepy Hollow. Roulette players will go to Wheeling, and poker players to Council Bluffs. Fat men will go to Great Neck, thin men to Littleton, and melancholy men to Sulphur Springs.

The cooks will go to Pottstown, the anarchists to Bombay, cabmen to Hoboken, vivisectionists to the Catskills, and all the shoppers to Paw Paw.

Pool players will go to the Pyramids, leather men to Morocco, magnates to the Rockies, while those whose fortunes are falling will go to Sag Harbor.

All the peach growers will go to Pittsburg, and the lace-makers will go to Old Point. The confectioners will flock to Mt. Desert, and the gossips to Pekin.

And finally, those whose thoughts are fixed on Heaven will go to St. Petersburg.

And those whose thoughts are in the other direction will go to Fire Island.

Catabolic Man.

According to a writer in the "Lancet," the male human needs more food than the female, not only on account of his larger stature, but also because he is the more catabolic of the two. The man tends to expend energy and the woman to store it up in the form of fat; he burns the faster. This sexual difference shows itself in the very blood; the man has a larger percentage of chromocytes than the woman, showing that he needs a proportionately larger quantity of oxygen in order to maintain his more active combustion—a fact which one may associate with his comparative freedom from chlorosis; moreover, weight for weight, his pulmonary capacity is greater than that of the woman, whose smaller respiratory need is further shown by the facility with which she can without discomfort diminish her breathing power by means of the corset. "The great contrast between the metabolic activity of the two sexes," continues the writer, "was forcibly brought home to me by a military display given by a troupe of dusky Amazons, with whom were also a few male warriors. The women, in spite of their daily exertions, were all rounded and plump, some very much so, no single muscle showing through the skin, and it was noticed that their movements, though full of grace, lacked energy and 'go.' The men, on the other hand, were spare, their muscles standing out plainly under the shiny skin, and they, in further contrast with the women, displayed a truly amazing agility, bounding about and whirling round in a most astounding fashion; the women, in short, were essentially anabolic and the men were catabolic. I may here draw attention to the fact that men are apt to be larger meat-eaters than women, just as they are, possibly in consequence of this very fact, more prone to drink alcohol and to smoke tobacco."

Price of a Shave.

A man walking through the suburbs of a certain large town noticed a barber's pole to which was attached a signboard with the inscription, "Shaving One Halfpenny."

His chin being rough and his funds low he promptly entered the shop, seated himself in the chair, and asked to be shaved.

The knight of the razor carefully lathered and scraped away at one side of the customer's face, sponged it, and drew the cloth away with the usual flourish.

"But you don't call this finished?" expostulated his victim, keeping his seat.

"Beg pardon, sir, do you want the other side done as well?" said the barber with a hair-oily smile.

"Cert'nly I do. Do you think I can go out in the street half-shaved?" replied the other.

And the barber proceeded to operate on the other side of his customer.

When the job was finished the man, who began to smell a rat, fumbled in his pockets and fished out a halfpenny, which he tendered to the barber.

"Another halfpenny, if you please, sir," said the latter.

"What? You've got on your board outside, 'Shaving a ha'penny.'"

"Very true. But if you will have the goodness to observe, you'll find that that inscription is on each side of the board."

"I know that."

"Very good, sir. There are two sides to my board—and two sides to your face."

"I see," replied the man, with his hand on the door-knob, "and, if you will have the goodness to observe that ha'penny, you will find there are two sides to that as well."—"Tit-Bits."

The Proper Term.

Martha, the colored washerwoman, was complaining of her husband's health to one of her patrons. "He's ve'y po'ly, ma'am, ve'y po'ly. He's got dat exclamatory rheumatism." "You mean inflammatory, Martha. Exclamatory is from exclaim, which means to cry out." "Yes, miss," answered Martha, with conviction, "dat's what it is. He hollers all de time."

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL

Ottawa, Nov. 23—Hon. Mr. Blair and Mr. Schreiber, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, returned last night from an inspection of the Trent and Welland Canals.

The latter says: "This season we were simply finishing up contracts let in the previous season, but in 1903 we [illegible] the waterway finished from Peterboro' [illegible] to Lake Simcoe. There will then remain the section to Lake Ontario, [illegible] Peterboro' and from Lake Simcoe to Georgian Bay, the most important part of all."

AN INVESTMENT IN THE

Pitkin Gold Belt Mining and Reduction Company

Which is Safe and Sure of Quick Returns, may Bring an Enormous Return at Any Moment. It has the Possibilities of Rivaling the Great Mines of the Past.

This Company has a mine on a true fissure vein, in the center of the Gunnison Gold Belt, Colorado, which is the "Mother" lode or dike, which has produced 25 per cent. more gold than the total output of the Cripple Creek district.

This Mine is no Prospect. Nor is it Waiting on Your Subscription to Buy Machinery or for Development.

After a careful examination by experts, Joseph M. Bradley, M. E. and Mr. George Arlett, A. I. M. E., Amalgamated Copper Company's expert in Chihuahua, Mexico, they advised the purchase of the property. The property had shallow development upon it, showing two ore shoots from which smelting ore had been shipped to the Buena Vista Smelter.

The Company purchased and paid for the latest improved machinery and has put a shaft down [illegible] feet and intend to carry it down [illegible] feet. On the 100 foot level [illegible] feet of development has been made and an ore shoot had been encountered and blocked out for [illegible] feet, carrying values in gold from 2 to 9 ounces or $40 to $180 per ton. The cost of mining, hauling, freight and smelter charges will be between $12 and $15 per ton.

Ed. McCarthy & Co., bankers, guarantee a shipping mine of smelting ore running from 2 to 6 ounces in gold, or $40 to $120 per ton, by January 1st, 1903, or all funds will be returned to subscribers upon presentation of receipt issued by said bank.

Also to prospective purchasers of $100 worth of stock we are offering a free trip to Colorado and return. You investigate first and purchase afterward. Could you expect anything fairer than this?

The capital stock of this company is $1,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares of stock at $1 each, full paid and non-assessable. A portion of the treasury stock is now offered at

25 CENTS PER SHARE—PAR VALUE $1.00

In one payment, or 25 per cent. down and the balance in four equal monthly payments, for necessary expenditures and improvements on a shipping mine.

Oil Strike in Kent County

(Press Despatch)

Chatham, Nov. 12—There is as yet little new in the oil situation, which is the one topic of conversation. Accounts of the Raleigh well's capacity have not been one whit exaggerated. Oil men are swarming here, some coming even from California, and great expectations are entertained as to future explorations. A company which has fourteen wells at Northwood, six miles from here, on the line of the Grand Trunk, hold leases for lands adjacent to the gusher, and will begin to bore at once in their territory. The gusher is situated on the apex or crown of a sudden elevation or dome in the rock formation, and oil experts say this is a sure sign of permanency and the reason for the unusual pressure manifested.

Mainly About People.

A rash Irishman had climbed up a tree in pursuit of a small but irate wildcat. His friend, awaiting him below, heard in dismay the uproar of a fierce combat. "Pat," he shouted, "Pat, shall I come up and help you catch him?" Above the crash of breaking branches came a groan, "No, for Hivin's sake come up and help me let him go."

A Dowling avenue (Parkdale) reader sends the following: "Last washday, in our house, the washerwoman asked the domestic whether she should starch the master's pyjamas. 'Good gracious, no!' exclaimed the maid; 'master sleeps in those!' 'Now, see here,' replied the garrulous apostle of the washtub, 'I know what pyjamas is, 'cause I've washed 'em in the best houses in the city, and I tell you that your master will wear 'em when he goes a-fishin', so I guess he'll want 'em starched.'"

A gentleman visiting a minister was asked to attend Sunday school at his host's church and address a few remarks to the children. He took the familiar theme of the children who mocked Elijah on his journey to Bethel—how the youngsters taunted the poor old prophet, and how they were punished when two she-bears came out of the wood and ate forty and two of them. "And now, children," said the speaker, wishing to learn if his talk had produced any moral effect, "what does this story show?" "Please, sir," came from a little girl well down in front, "it shows how many children two she-bears can hold."

John Kendrick Bangs says that one evening he found himself on the rear platform of a crowded New York car with a policeman whom he understood to be the largest man on the force. This policeman, according to his own statement, was six feet eight inches in height, and weighed in his best condition two hundred and ninety-two pounds. Mr. Bangs fell into a pleasant conversation with the giant, in the course of which he complimented him on his great size, which he said he supposed must be a very valuable asset to a man of his profession. "Well, sor," replied the policeman, meditatively, "I ain't got no grievance against me size when I am travelin' along with a rough crowd. But when it comes to buying pants, it's h—ll."

Sir Wemyss Reid tells a good story about William Black. At a banquet of the Royal Academy at which he was present two rich gentlemen, with "self-made" written large all over them, enquired with an air of patronage what line of business he was in. On his meekly replying that he wrote novels, they expressed their surprise and pleasure at meeting a person of his class. The first gentleman said, "I like to meet littery people. I buy books. I've got a library of six hundred volumes all bound in full calf. I've got all the works of Thackeray and Dickenson, and if you'll tell me the names of yours I'll buy them too. I've never read them." The second gentleman, anxious to atone for his friend's indiscretion, kicked his shins under the table and said, "Oh yes, you have, but you've forgotten them."

At a little girls' party recently a tot had been valiantly boasting of the advantages of belonging to her family, and had managed to hold her own against the vainglorious and ingenuous discourses of her companions. They had gone from clothes to personal appearances, then to interior furnishings, then to the number of tons of coal consumed in the home of each during the last winter, and finally brought up at parental dignity. The minister's little girl boasted: "Every package that comes for my pa is marked 'D. D.!'" "An' every package that comes for my pa is marked 'M. D.!'" retorted the daughter of a physician of the neighborhood. Then came a fine snort of contempt from the heroine of this anecdote. "Huh!" she exclaimed. "Every package that comes to our house is marked 'C. O. D.!' There, now!"

William Pruette, the singer, was one of a group of married men who were discussing housekeeping and servants the other evening in a Philadelphia hotel corridor. He told of a girl who served him and Mrs. Pruette well enough while they were living in a New York flat several years ago, and who one day went to Mrs. Pruette in tears and asked permission to go home for a few days—she had a telegram telling that her mother was ill. "Of course, go," said Mrs. Pruette—"only, Maggie, do not stay longer than is necessary. We need you." Maggie promised to return as soon as possible, and hurried away. A week passed without a word from her, then came a note by mail, reading: "Dear Miss Pruete i will be back nex week an plese kep my place for me, mother is dying as fast as she can. To oblidg Maggie."

In Legal Terms.

"If I were to give you an orange," said the judge, "I would simply say, 'I give you the orange,' but should the transaction be entrusted to a lawyer to put in writing he would adopt this form:

"'I hereby give, grant, and convey to you all my interest, right, title and advantage of and in said orange, together with its rind, skin, juice, pulp and pits; and all rights and advantages therein, with full power to bite, suck, or otherwise eat the same or give away with or without rind, skin, juice, pulp or pits; anything hereinbefore or in any other deed or deeds, instruments of any nature or kind whatever to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.'"

Unflattering to the Press.

Although the power of the press can hardly be overestimated, little that is printed leaves a permanent impression. Dr. Edward Everett Hale puts it characteristically in commenting on the sensitiveness of his distinguished kinsman, Edward Everett, to what appeared about him in print. "He did not know, as I do, that of whatever is put in the newspaper half the people who see it do not read it; second, that half of those do not understand it; third, that of the half who understand it, half do not believe it; fourth, that of the half who believe it, half forget it; fifth, that the half who remember it are probably of no great account, anyway." To which Dr. Hale adds the remark, personal to himself, "This may be forgotten with the rest." Nevertheless, it has a kernel of truth worth remembering.

Mistress (to new servant)—There are two things, Mary, about which I am very particular; they are truthfulness and obedience. Mary—Yes'm; and when you tell me to say you're not in, when a person calls that you don't wish to see, which is it to be, mum—truthfulness or obedience?—The "King" (London).

Mainly About People.

In pronouncing sentence, a Scotch judge once added: "Ye did not only kill and murder the man, and thereby take away his valuable life, but ye did push, thrust or impel the lethal weapon through the bellyband of his regimental trousers, which were the property of His Majesty."

J. Pierpont Morgan was showing some friends through his kennels the other day, and one of them expressed great admiration for an imported setter. "Yes, he's a fine dog. His name is Russell Sage." "How did you come to give him that name?" "Well, he never loses a scent."

Curran said to Father O'Leary, the wittiest priest of his day, "I wish you were St. Peter." "Why?" asked O'Leary. "Because," said Curran, "you would have the keys of heaven and could let me in." "It would be better for you," said O'Leary, "that I had the keys of the other place." "Why?" asked Curran. "Well, then I could let you out."

Secretary Hay's poem, "Little Breeches," was frequently attributed to the late Bret Harte. A young lady once said to him: "I am highly pleased to meet you, Mr. Harte. I have read all your poems, but I have enjoyed 'Little Breeches' the most." "Pardon me, madam," Harte is said to have replied, "but you have put the 'Little Breeches' on the wrong man."

On one of his later birthday anniversaries, United States Senator Hoar wrote to William M. Evarts and congratulated him upon his length of years. In his reply, the aged lawyer said it brought to mind an old lady in New England, who had occasion to write to a friend about some matter of trifling importance, and when she had reached the end of the thirteenth page awakened to the fact that she had been rather diffuse, and added: "Please excuse my longevity."

Samuel Foote, the English actor, was one day invited for a few moments into a club where he was a stranger. Left alone a minute, he did not seem quite at ease. Lord Carmarthen, wishing to relieve his embarrassment, went up to speak to him, but became embarrassed himself and could only say: "Mr. Foote, your handkerchief is hanging out of your pocket." Whereupon Foote, looking around with playful suspicion, and hurriedly thrusting his handkerchief back into his pocket, replied: "Thank you, my lord, thank you; you know the company better than I do."

At one of the great London hospitals a cold storage chamber was being constructed in connection with the post-mortem room, and the secretary of the hospital, on going to see how the work was getting on, found that the chamber was being fitted with double doors—and those of small size—instead of one large door. He made enquiries as to the reason for this deviation from the original plan, when the chief carpenter, who was superintending the work, replied: "Oh, sir, we are putting in double doors and a wooden partition in order to keep the sexes apart!"

Two gentlemen who were playing cards at a New York club were very much annoyed by other members who stood behind their chairs and interested themselves in the game. Finally one of the players asked one of the spectators to play the hand for him until he returned. The spectator took the cards, whereupon the first player left the room. Pretty soon the second player followed the example of the first. The two substitutes played for some time, when one of them asked the waiter where the two original players were. "They are playing cards in the next room," was the waiter's reply.

President Roosevelt possesses a characteristic sense of humor. It is vigorous and sometimes almost grotesque. When he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, during the preparation for the Spanish war, the Government was buying a number of yachts to be converted into torpedo-boats, despatch-boats, scouts, etc. Considerable intimacy existed between the family of President Roosevelt and that of one of the officers of the navy in the department. The wife of this officer got a fancy she would like to have one of these beautiful little boats bear her name. There is a prejudice in the navy against giving a woman's name to a war vessel of any type. It is believed to be unlucky. But the officer, who found it easier to face official prejudice than to resist the importunities of his better half, made the request of Mr. Roosevelt. The Assistant Secretary of the Navy hesitated. "It won't do," he said. "I would like to oblige your wife, but a woman's name won't do." Then a thought occurred to him, and he replied. "I will fix it," he said. "Tell your wife it will be all right." The next day the boat was named "The Vixen." And the officer who had made the request was placed in command of her.

Very wise after the event.—Brooklyn "Eagle."

A Difficult Question.

A story of a conversation between a traveler, visiting at a popular resort, and one of the permanent residents, is told by the "Ram's Horn:"

"I am a stranger here, sir; can you direct me to a first-rate church?"

"Oh, yes, right around the corner."

"What sort of a preacher have they?"

"A very good man."

"Interesting?"

"Intensely so."

"Eloquent?"

"Very."

"The best preaching in town, I suppose?"

"Unquestionably."

"What's his name?"

"Ah, my friend, that is a question which modesty forbids me to answer!"

Hit with a Brick

Mr. B. Webb, who is assisting in the erection of the new rink, met with an accident on Saturday that not only gave him a pain, but inflicted a nasty cut in his head. In some way a brick fell, and struck Mr. Webb on the head, making it necessary to secure the services of Dr. Scott to do some sewing and dressing of the wound. It is hoped Mr. Webb will be able to resume work in a few days.

Now is the Last Chance to Buy the St. Paul & Sunset Oil

COMPANY'S STOCK AT 35 CENTS

California Oil Stocks Have Paid Millions in Dividends

KERN COUNTY (SUNSET DISTRICT) OIL COMPANIES PAID

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS IN AUGUST ALONE

MORGAN IN THE OIL INDUSTRY--NEW YORK FINANCIER AT THE HEAD OF A $20,000,000 COMPANY TO EXPLOIT CALIFORNIA FIELDS

Bakersfield, Cal., Sept. 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan is about to identify himself with the oil business in California. On October 12, or a few days later, surveyors will be put into the field, and will run lines to the ocean from Sunset, Coaling, McKittrick, Midway and Kern River fields to determine by which route it is most feasible to transport oil to tide water. The surveys will run over the coast range at a number of points, and also will go down the San Joaquin valley parallel with the line of the Standard.

A company having a capitalization of $5,000,000 has been organized for the construction of lines, pumping stations, storage tanks, and the like. Mr. Morgan and his associates have also formed a separate company, capitalized at $20,000,000, half of which will be invested in proven ground and the other half turned into a reserve fund.

It is stated that the Morgan syndicate will be prepared to handle 2,000,000 barrels the first year, and will increase that amount at the rate of 1,000,000 a year until the whole demand of the market is met.

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY own and control a large tract of absolutely oil proven asphalt land in the very heart of the best oil producing land of Kern County, California, the district where flowing wells are situated. We have a bed of Liquid Asphalt underlying a portion of our lands. Our property is situated right at Sunset Station. A new line of railway is surveyed and will be constructed in a very short time, putting us not only in touch with Eastern cities, but in touch with tide-water. This, in addition to the railroad facilities we now have. Remember that we own our land—it is paid for and entirely free from debt.

ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL CO.'S GIGANTIC TRACT

will be developed and should prove a formidable rival for the new company.

PROFESSOR DR. RUD J. SCHIMPER, Analytical and Expert Chemist, of St. Paul, makes the following statement relative to the composition, what can be produced and the estimated profits of the Sunset Crude Oil. A copy of the original certificate can be seen at the office of the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co., which is in substance as follows:

"This is to certify that the undersigned, Dr. Rudolph J. Schimper, Chemist expert, member of Parisian Academy, according to analysis made from the crude oil furnished me by the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company, I find the following valuable products and with each beg to submit my estimate of its value:

1. LIQUID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 1,800 lbs. of liquid rubber, value of which is from 25c. per lb. and up. (Estimated value $450.00.)
2. SOLID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls) will produce 1,700 lbs. of solid rubber, value of which is from 50c. upwards. (Estimated value $450.00.)
3. FUEL BRIQUETTES—2000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 2,000 lbs. (1 ton) of fuel briquettes, which, according to government tests made, is equivalent to two tons of best anthracite coal. (Estimated value $22.00)
4. ASPHALTUM—2,000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce ½ ton of asphaltum, value $25 to $35 per ton. 25 gal. of lubricating oil, value 50c. per gal. and upward. 40 gal. illuminating oil, value 10c per gal. and up. 60 gal. of distilled oil, value 5c. per gal. and upward. (Estimated value $54.50.)
5. SOAP—2000 lbs. (1 ton) of crude oil and filling will produce over 2,000 lbs. of soap, value 3c. per lb. and upward. (Estimated value $60.00.)

Id my opiniou many other valuable products can be obtained from the oil of that famous field.

Respectfully, DR. R. J. SCHIMPER, Chemist Expert."

THIS goes to show the immense profits that will accrue from our products when refined. We expect to commence Building Our Refinery in the very near future. The sale of the next allotment of stock will be made for that purpose. The largest flowing wells in California were brought in adjoining our property and their stock was taken off the market. We employ the best drillers who report rapid progress on our wells and we expect to bring in gushers equal, if not to excel any in the Sunset field. Our General Manager, Superintendent and Drillers, all are experienced oil men. The officers of our company are all thorough, competent and efficient men who have always made a success of their undertaking in life and who will see that the welfare of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company is furthered, portected and promoted to the most advantageous extent possible.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS SHOULD BE PAID STOCKHOLDERS.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS should be paid to the stockholders of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company when their property is fully developed, their refinery equipped and in full operation. ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS was paid by Kern County Oil Companies during the month of August alone.

SIX MILLION BARRELS is the consuming capacity of the Southern Pacific Railway engines, which are now equipped for burning oil. Outside of this consider other railway lines, smelters, factories, steamships, stationery engines, which are all heavy consumers of fuel oil and last but not least, hotels and private dwellings are falling in line with the procession in the use of fuel oil.

A GOOD REASON WHY YOU Should invest in the stock of St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company. More fortunes have been made in oil than any other business. Consider the immense amount of money the Standard Oil Company has made for its fortunate stockholders, and the California oil companies have done better in proportion to their capitalization than the Standard Oil Company. Here is what $100 has accomplished for those who invested that amount in the following California companies in the beginning of their career:

Home Whittier $1,000 on an investment of $100.

Kern returned $2,200 on an investment of $100.

Peerless returned $1,800 on an investment of $100.

Dillon returned $2,500 on an investment of $100.

New York returned $30,000 on an investment of $100.

Union returned $150,000 on an investment of $100.

Home returned $50,000 on an investment of $100.

THERE is no reason in the world why the St. Paul and Sunset Company's oil holdings and property, when developed and handled, should not bring like returns.

CONTRARY to the general supposition the earth is the repository of all mineral wealth. When it is known and demonstrated beyond a question of a doubt where its wealth reposes and you put your money up to take it out, your money is invested. Hence you are an investor, not a speculator. A proven oil producing property does not draw its profits from the people but creates new wealth. It is therefore an investment.

Wonderful Increase in Value of Oil Stocks.

The time will come in the near future when stock in St. Paul and Sunset Oil Co., should bring prices equal to the last.

WE CLAIM NOTHING WE CANNOT PROVE TO BE TRUE

BRIEFLY, OUR PROPOSITION IS THIS: THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY

owns its immense tract of proven Oil Land—without a penny of incumbrance. The property is located in the most wonderful and richest oil producing section in the world, in the famous Sunset District of Kern County, California. Other Oil Companies in Kern county have paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in dividends—and today their stock cannot be bought at any price. These companies in many instances have less property, and in some cases are only lessors, not owning refinery, tanks, lines, etc.

A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THIS STOCK WILL BE SOLD AT 35c. PER SHARE, PAR VALUE $1.00.

BUY NOW. THIS STOCK WILL BE ADVANCED TO 50c WITHIN THE NEXT 30 DAYS

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY will erect their own refinery, etc. are now owners of the property they are developing, employ the best drillers in the whole State of California. The manager is an old and experienced oil man who has been connected with large California companies. The officers are all successful and reliable business men, who are investors—the same as every other stockholder. And the company, with plenty of ready capital, proposes to make the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co. a leader in the field and to develop their property to the fullest extent that money and brains will permit.

The first orders received will be the first ones to be filled. In case we are unable to fill your orders at 35c. your money will be refunded. Send Orders and Remittances to

ONTARIO LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE

The Work Which is Being Done in Ontario by the Alliance

The Times has been requested to publish the following:

At the annual meeting of the Ontario Branch of the Lord's Day Alliance, held in Toronto, Principal Caven emphasized the critical nature of the present situation in regard to the observance of the Lord's Day, and the tremendous pressure which is being brought to bear by certain interests to break down its safeguards. He deplored the tendency even of Church members to take ground in support of the material interests which came into conflict with the spiritual interests of the community. The report given by the Field Secretary, Rev. J. G. Shearer, was full of encouragement. The principal address of the evening was by Dr. J. Edgar Hill, of Montreal, President of the Quebec Lord's Day Alliance. Dr. Hill made a strong plea, based on historical experience, for the maintenance of the Sabbath. He recounted the struggle for better things in Montreal and spoke in high terms of the co-operation in the movement by Archbishop Bruchesi.

At the business session on Friday reports were received and officers elected. Principal Caven continues to be President.

The annual report of the executive committee shows that there are now 230 branches in the Province as compared with 170 a year ago. There has been similar growth in other provinces. It is interesting and encouraging to observe how the ranks of those who are prepared to battle for the Sabbath are filling and closing together. Strong resolutions have been passed by ecclesiastical courts of all denominations, the General Synod, the General Conference and the General Assembly and by the Conventions of the Baptists and Congregationalists. Roman Catholic prelates like Archbishop O'Brien of Halifax, and Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal publicly express their sympathy with the aims of the Alliance. The organized labor men are growingly in earnest in standing firm in defence of the rest and quiet of the Lord's Day and they co-operate with the Alliance in every possible way.

It is satisfactory, too, to notice that the Attorney-General has taken action during the year in several instances of violation of the Lord's Day Act and has now assumed the responsibility for the enforcement of the law in cases where the law is clear and where violation can be readily proven.

The policy of the Alliance in dealing with Sabbath desecration is first to make use of kindly suasion and remonstrance and they report with gratitude that they are accorded no less than 90 instances of Sunday labor and public pleasuring that have been successfully dealt with by these measures during the year.

All good citizens and lovers of their country should rejoice in these evidences of success and progress, for the work which the Alliance is doing now is one which will tell in the higher life of the country for generations to come.

SAYS THE MILLENIUM BEGINS NEXT YEAR

Boston Preacher Declares That Then we Will Enter the Golden Age

Boston, Nov. 21—The Rev. E. Griffith, of No. 46 Dudley street, well known as a preacher throughout New England puts forth the revelation that the year 1903 is the beginning of the millennium, the area of peace and gladness, in which the earth undergoes a marvellous change and the prophecy of the Scriptures shall be verified.

"I have made a life study of this all-important question," says Mr. Griffith, "and my argument is based on facts that convince even the most skeptical. That part of the Scripture that prophesies chariots of fire shall pass upon the earth is verified upon our streets today. We are now on the threshold of that time spoken of in Scripture, in which, for a period of 1,000 years, we shall enjoy the life that will be known as the golden age, the period that precedes the consummation of the earth. Darkness shall fade and the earth shall be blessed with eternal light.

During the fiscal year ending June 30th last the consumption of spirits per head was .798 gallons, or the largest amount since 1885, when the per capita consumption was 1.136 gallons. In 1869, or two years after we had started on our career as a nation, the people consumed 1.124 gals. Beer, however, appears to be the popular intoxicating beverage. According to statistics the consumption was at the rate of 5.102 gallons, which is altogether unprecedented in our history. Beer drinking seems to have been rising steadily since 1898. In that year 3.998 gallons went to each Canadian's credit. The following year 3,906 gallons, in 1900 4.264 gallons, and in 1901 4.737 gallons. The consumption of wine is small and fluctuates greatly. Last year it was .09 gallons. The consumption of tobacco was equal to 2.404 pounds, which was the same as in 1901. This rate was exceeded in 1874, 1875, 1884 and 1885. The rates of duty per head were: Spirits, $1.148; beer, $.132; wine $.063; tobacco $.56; The cigars of all kinds produced last year numbered 156,-026,736, a gain of 15,256,341 as compared with 1901. The total production of cigarettes was 136,214,284, a gain of 14,633,-250. The manufacture of snuff is falling off. Last year 172,189 pounds were produced, a decrease of 26,807 compared with the previous year.

South Africa is favorable to giving a preference to Great Britain and the colonies. That is good news. It will afford Canada a decided advantage over the United States which is our chief competitor in that market in the goods we desire to sell.

A man has made a continuous journey from Chicago to Boston in trolley cars with only five gaps covering short distances. This shows the extent to which the Northern States are being covered with a network of trolley lines. Ontario may expect a similar development in the near future.

STOCK MARKETS

Some One Gathering in New York Central

New York, Nov. 24.—A goodly and steady demand for New York Central shares has been in evidence for some days past. Some one is persistently but quietly gathering in the stock. This fact would presage a rise of some considerable dimensions in the near future. The reasons for purchasing at at present are most excellent. In the first place the stock is down some 25 points from the best figures of last summer. It is at present earning immense sums of money, and on Jan. 1st next it will exchange some $20,000,000 of 7 per cent. bonds for 3 1-2 per cent. bonds, which will be an enormous saving to the company. The real estate of the New York Central along its lines would sell under hammer at such prices as would bring par for the stock alone. It is the only complete four-track railway in the world, which gives it a most decided advantage in these days of enormous freight offerings. Such are at present absolutely blocking the Pennsylvania system at Pittsburg. Its equity in other lines earns for the New York Central more than sufficient earnings to pay its regular dividends, leaving its entire surplus earnings for surplus account. No railway in the world is better equipped to handle business than is the New York Central. The day is coming when it will sell above 200. It still has many more high interest bonds reaching maturity, which will be replaced by 3 1-2 per cent. bonds. Its allies are all the great Vanderbilt lines and their allied associates. Its position is practically impregnable. We most heartily commend the purchase of its shares at the present time and believe that to do so will be to make excellent profits. Apropos of Pennsylvania, it is figured that the Pennsylvania plans for betterments to be effected in the next two years, including the recent wages advance, involve 200 million. Included in the figures are 50,000,000 for the New York terminal tunnel and approaches, 10 million new Washington terminal, 3 million for new equipment and 27 million for improvement of all lines west of Pittsburg, the Baltimore & Ohio, and other controlled roads. This stock also should be a most excellent purchase at going prices. It recently sold above 170. Both New York Central and Pennsylvania are standard representatives of the security markets.

Summary—Initial transactions were at declines and there was a tendency at the opening towards lower prices, but it was soon checked by a rapid upward movement in Manhattan, which carried the shares up some eight points, the stock touching 155. A recession in price then set in and while under way was counterbalanced by a rapid jump in N. Y. C. which crossed 150, followed closely by Pennsylvania. R. I. issues were very strong and look like excellent purchases. St. Paul, B. R. T. and Reading rose about 2 points each and C. F. I. 4 points. Balance of the list improved from about 1-2 to 1 point. A reaction is due among some of the stocks that have recently advanced rapidly. The short interest in them has been decimated, while profit-taking has increased the floating supply of stocks. Then they will do to buy and hold for considerable further advances. It is a magnificent trading market at present affording constant opportunities for profit on able trading. Money closed 4 per cent. Sales 821,500.

GOLD Is the World's Wealth!

YOU WANT IT

We have it. The property of the ORO RICO MINING SYNDICATE located in San Bernardino County, California, consists of THREE GREAT GOLD MINES, a total of 30 mining claims, comprising 600 acres, which under several years operation and development have reached a state of profitable production. For the purpose of erecting a suitable mill and plant for treating the ores we offer a moderate block of stock (par value $1) at 20 cents a share. This Mill we expect to have in operation early in 1903, at which time we expect to commence the payment of Ten Per Cent. Annual Dividends on the PAR VALUE. We solicit an opportunity to place before you the prospectus, reports of mining experts and actual facts regarding this great gold property. We believe in our mines. There is a fortune for all of us "knocking at the door" NOW. Fortune, they say, knocks but once. Write or call today.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

Wanted

By a young man of good address, temporary employment. Can give good references. Apply at this Office for address.

The Travelling Auditor Here.

Mr. Evanson, travelling auditor of the Canadian Pacific Railway, is in town, and is engaged in transferring the business in connection with the C.P.R. station and freight sheds, to Mr. W. S. Dodd, who will assume his duties in a day or two.

A Large Increase

It is claimed that 10,000 licenses to kill deer was issued by the Ontario Government this year. Each license costs two dollars and allowed of the killing of two deer. As every man on the average got his two deer, there will be at least 20,000 killed during the season. At this rate there are fears entertained that this species of game will soon be extinct.

Magnetic Healing.

By Scientific Massage is for most Chronic Ailments a specific. For facial, bust and body development nothing can equal it. Dr. Edson A. Titus, B.S., Associate Dean of the International College is treating daily by this method at 322 Water street, corner of Charlotte. It costs nothing to see him. Mrs. Titus is always in attendance upon ladies.

Had no Part in it.

In yesterday's daily we mentioned the names of the young lads charged with assaulting Mr. Stewart, an employee of the Ackerman factory. We are sorry that the name of Cecil Succee appeared among those accused. Mr. Succee was not arrested and no charge was laid against him. In fact he had nothing to do with the affair and is an honorable and upright young man who pursues his business calling without molesting or interfering with other people's business. We regret exceedingly that Mr. Succee should have been given this unwarranted notoriety.

Valuable Advice to Mothers

If your child comes in from play coughing or showing evidences of an approaching attack of Groppe, Sore Throat or sickness of any kind, first thing get out your bottle of Nerviline. Rub the chest and neck with Nerviline, and give internal doses of ten drops of Nerviline in sweetened water every two hours. This will prevent any serious trouble. No liniment or pain reliever equals Polson's Nerviline, which is a necessity in every household. Large bottles cost only 25c.

C. P. R. Circulars

The C.P.R. has issued a circular to their freight agents announcing that after to-morrow all freight destined to Port Arthur, Fort William and points west must be forwarded via the "all rail" route at the "all rail" rates. Another circular says that charges on freight for Temiskaming and routes behind must be prepaid. In connection with shipments for points reached via Temiskaming, agents are to have shippers sign indemnity, releasing the company from responsibility in the event of shipments arriving at Temiskaming after the close of navigation, or of the steamship company being unable to make delivery of property at its destination.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—The Central Charity Board met last night.

—The Dalhousie Street sewer is rapidly nearing completion under the able direction of Messrs. Henry and Gibson.

—There will be more grip in town in a short time, as it is now beginning to renew its work, a few persons having been attacked by it during the week.

—The annual thanksgiving meeting of the Women's Mission Circle of the Murray street Baptist church will be held this evening at 8 o'clock. Miss McClanahan, a missionary from India, will deliver an address.

They Father Consumption

Bad coughs, colds and catarrh are responsible for more consumption than is traceable even to heredity. Catarrhozone cures more quickly than ordinary remedies, because it is the only antiseptic yet discovered that is volatile enough to reach the root of the trouble in remote parts of the lungs and bronchial tubes, and impregnate every particle of the air breathed with its healing, germ-killing vapor. Colds can't last ten minutes, or coughs more than thirty minutes when Catarrhozone is inhaled. It clears nose, throat and air passages at once, stops dropping, headache, and eradicates catarrh from any part of the system. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are Mild.

HOCKEY.

Cobourg Post:—Port Hope and the Peterborough hockey teams will evidently have several hard struggles on the ice this winter. Both towns have some good material.

Reporter Wanted

A young man, with a good education, wanted as reporter on The Times. Apply at the business office.

YOU TAKE NO RISK

The "Cecil R" Mine Guarantees a Dividend to Shareholders From the Start

Men with capital, and men of moderate circumstances of a speculative mind even, who desire to invest their money in mining operations cannot do better than read the advertisement of the "Cecil R" Gold Mining and Milling Company in our advertising columns. The company is organized under the laws of Arizona with a paid up capital stock of 1,000,000 shares which are non-assessable. The officers and directors are all men well known as successful promoters of mines, and there can be no risk in purchasing the stock of the "Cecil R," as the company guarantees to pay a dividend of one per cent. on the first of every month, per share, to shareholders and this dividend will be increased as soon as increased facilities are secured for milling a greater amount of ore. The evidence of the wealth of this mine are such that experts believe the mine equal to the Great Yellow Astor, so says the editor of the Oil, Mining and Finance, a journal published at Los Angeles, California. Of the 1,000,000 shares, 250,000 shares are set aside for treasury stock which affords an additional guarantee that the company will pay the dividend as promised. As dividend-paying stock is always in demand investors should lose no time in purchasing a bloc of stock in "Cecil R." Mr. C. H. J. Mitchell is the fiscal agent at Peterborough and will be pleased to furnish information to intending investors.

The Blues Won.

On Saturday evening at the Y.M.C.A., a decision was made in the competition that has been going on for some time between sides styling themselves the Reds and Blues as to which could secure the greatest number of members. The Blues were found to be ten points ahead, the total being Blues 251, Reds 240 1-3. The result is very satisfactory, as it means an addition of over one hundred new members. While many men on the sides deserve special mention, yet Pearson for the Reds put up a splendid fight for first place, and it is admitted on all sides that the Blues owe their success to Chas. Whiten, who broke all records in the manner of getting new members.

POLICE COURT.

Twelve Boys Fined on the Charge of Assaulting Mr. Jos. Stewart

The trial of the young lads accused of assaulting Mr. Joseph Stewart, a harness maker in the employ of Mr. B. F. Ackerman took place yesterday before the Police Magistrate. A lot of evidence was taken and the trial lasted several hours. Five of the accused were fined $1 and costs, amounting to $3.11 each and the others were discharged. Mr. F. D. Kerr defended the young lads.

C.M.B.A. ORGANIZED

A Branch of the C.M.B.A. Instituted at Ennismore.

On Saturday a branch of the Catholic Mutual Benevolent Association was organized in Ennismore, and the following officers were installed by District Deputy, Geo. Ball, assisted by Dr. McGrath, Medical Examiner, and Messrs. W. J. Devlin and J. J. Lynch.

1st Vice—Mr. Jas. Mahoney.
2nd Vice—Mr. Ed. Sullivan.
Rec.-Secretary—Mr. D. Crough.
Fin.-Sec—Mr. M. F. Crow.
Treasurer—Mr. Ed. Sullivan.
Marshall—Mr. Thos. Perdue.
Guard—Mr. Wm. Ball.
Board of Trustees—Messrs. D. Hickson, Jas. Carroll, Jos. Quinlan, Thos. Perdue.

STREET PARADE OF CHILDREN.

Plan to Secure Votes in Favor of Prohibition Measure.

To the Editor of The Times:

—Sir,—I see in several places a children's parade in connection with the referendum is to take place. In Ottawa the children are to march through the streets. Banners bearing the inscription "Vote yes for my sake," are to be distributed among thousands of children to be worn.

In Toronto the campaign is to be enlivened by a demonstration of Sunday school children of Toronto on Saturday, 29th inst. It is expected that from 5,000 to 10,000 children will be in line when the procession starts from Queen's Park. An attempt will be made to secure the armories, and if this is unsuccessful an open air meeting in front of the city hall will be held.

Peterborough should follow suit, and have a similar demonstration.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, &c.

OUR JUNIOR REPORTER.

His First Effort at Writing up a Football Match.

On Saturday last we sent our Junior reporter of this g. f. j. up to the big football match between London and Peterborough. He turned up in the evening after the match, with the following, which was "blue pencilled" by the city editor. It will be seen that our Junior is hot up in football lore:

"The hardest fight the local team has had this year was handed to them on Saturday by the London boys. It was a royal contest and wound up with the score at 12 to 0 in favor of Peterborough. We couldn't tell much about it, but in the first place some men from London went to the ball and gave it a vicious kick, and everybody in town started after it. Some men from Peterborough got hold of it and every one that was registered in the first ward and a few people from the rural routes jumped right on top of him. We never saw him again but when everybody got up the ball was lying there all right. Then some man jumped over and put his hands on the ball and dared anybody to take it away from him before he could count twenty.

When he had counted up to about ten he tried to play a dirty trick on the whole gang and handed the ball back between his legs to a redheaded fellow who had a big chunk of silver tied over his nose. The redheaded cuss tried to sneak off into Croly's pasture with the ball, and he didn't have a friend in the crowd. They downed him in about a second, even his own side jumped on him just like the people on the other side. They took the ball away from him and a man they called the umpire asked a man from London if he could kick the darned thing over the fence, and they would get another one and start over again. And then it was only a repetition of what they had done before. It seemed as if they wasn't willing anybody should have the ball but the man they called the umpire. When he would get the ball he would carry it around just as he darned pleased and they didn't dass touch him, but just let anybody else take that ball and begin to count and it made everybody else so dog gone mad it looked all the time as if there was going to be a riot, and so after they tried for an hour to tear the ball to pieces, the umpire said he guessed they had better knock off for the day and try it again some time, and everybody went home.

Mr. Johnston's New Store

Lakefield News: On Wednesday of last week, the store formerly occupied by Madill Bros. was formally opened by Mr. Roland Johnston, the new proprietor. The event has been looked forward to by his large circle of friends, and in every respect was a most decided success. From early morning until late at night, the store was thronged with ladies, who came, saw and went away with their purses considerably lightened as a result of the many purchases made. A genuine clearing sale of the Madill Bros.' stock is going on and many are taking advantage of the bargains offered. New goods are daily arriving and being passed into stock. One of the features of the opening was the musical reception, an innovation which added additional zest to the affair. Mr. Johnston can now boast of having one of the most up-to-date dry goods stores in this part of the country.

BRITAIN'S GENEROSITY

An American Journal's Opinion of Britain and Africa

Boston, Nov. 24.—We alluded yesterday to the very chilly reception, from a financial point of view, that had been given to the Boer leaders on their begging tour in Europe. We contrasted the British Government's gift that General Delarey had classed as "a mere beggar's pittance" with what the Boers had been able to raise since the close of the war in the countries of Europe. A correspondent has called us to task for the figures we used of the British grant, saying that the real amount was more than double what we had credited to the British Government. Since the close of the war the British have been extremely liberal to the Boers, a fact that must be apparent to anyone who considers the matter from a fair point of view.

THE LIFT LOCK.

Visited by an Engineer, Who is on a Tour of Inspection.

S. Maximoff, Engineer of Russian Government, who was sent from St. Petersburg, on a tour of inspection of all the greatest engineering works of the world, was in Peterborough yesterday. He is now touring America, and applied at Ottawa to be allowed the privilege of inspecting the lift lock at Peterborough. He was shown the principal features of the works by Mr. Francis, assistant engineer of the Trent Canal at this place. The visitor was highly interested in the works, and loud in his praises of the courtesy extended him.

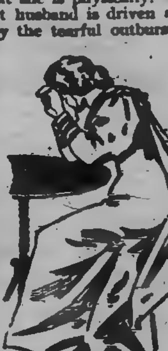
Malt Breakfast Food

The Most Delicious and Nutritious of All Cereal Foods

The science of our progressive age has evolved an ideal food combining the health-giving properties of pure Malt with the virtues of the choicest Canadian Wheat. It is the food that is relished and used to-day by all classes of our Canadian people. Malt Breakfast Food has become an almost universal favorite. The price puts it within reach of every family. It is as cheap as ordinary oatmeal and gives happier results in health and strength building. Being partially predigested, Malt Breakfast Food does not tax digestion like oatmeal and other common grain foods. It contains all the true elements of nutrition and is adapted for the support of life from day to day. It builds up flesh, bone and muscle; it gives activity and clearness to the brain. Ask your Grocer for it.

TEARFUL OR CHEERFUL?

Whether a woman is tearful or cheerful depends not on what she has materially, but what she is physically. Many an indulgent husband is driven almost to despair by the tearful outburst of a wife who has "everything she wants." He wants to know what's the matter. But the wife can't tell. She only knows that she is depressed and despondent. Such a condition is usually related to some form of womanly disease. The mental depression has its corresponding womanly weakness.



Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription changes tearful women to cheerful women by curing the diseases which cause physical weakness and depression of spirits. It establishes regularity, dries unhealthy drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

Mrs. Alice Adams, of Laboratory, Washington Co., Pa., says: "With many thanks I write to let you know how I am. I can say by God's help and your help I am well. I have taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and two of his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and I can do all my work. I can't praise your medicine too highly. I will recommend your medicines as long as I live. If any one doubts this give them my address."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong and sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Keep the bowels healthy by the timely use of Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

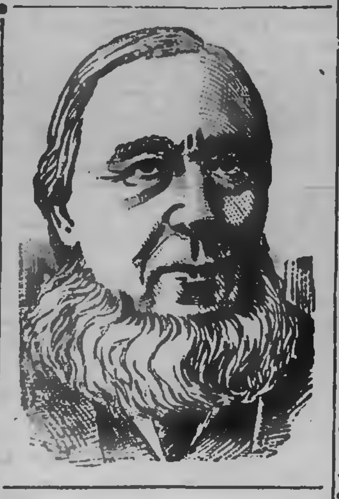
PAUL KRUGER'S STORY TOLD BY HIMSELF

His Part in the Boer War Related in His Memoirs

HIS JOURNEY AMID FLYIND SHOT AND SHELL

The Ultimatum Which Aroused British Resentment



London, Nov. 26.—"The Memoirs of Paul Kruger" will be issued this week. Here from advance sheets of the work is an extract giving Mr. Kruger's own story of the "Ultimatum" and the outbreak of hostilities between the Boer republics and England:

"The Government of the South African Republic clearly saw what the British Government wanted, that a collision was inevitable and that the British Government was only waiting to send its ultimatum until sufficient troops had arrived in South Africa to overwhelm the republic from every side. When it realized that a war was inevitable, that to make concessions availed nothing and that its only chance lay in compelling the British Government to display its real intentions before all the British troops were landed, the Government of the South African Republic had recourse to extreme measures, and, on the 9th of October, wrote a letter to the British Agent—to so-called ultimatum.

"In this doument the Government once more set forth how England had not the slightest right to interefere in the internal affairs of the republic; how the republic had yet found occasion to discuss in a friendly fashion the franchise and the representation of the people with her Majesty's Government; how on the part of her Majesty's Government the friendly nature of those discussions had assumed a more and more threatening tone; how her Majesty's Government had finally broken off all friendly correspondence on the subject; how the republic was still waiting for the proposal which the British Government had promised to make for a settlement; how, in view of the British military force on the frontiers, the republic had been obliged, as a defensive measure, to send a portion of the burghers to protect the frontiers; how the unlawful intervention of her Majesty's Government in the affairs of the republic, in conflict with the London convention of 1884, had caused an intolerable condition of affairs to arise to which the Government felt itself obligred, in the interests not only of the republic, but of all South Africa, to make an end as soon as possible, and therefore felt itself called upon and obliged to press earnestly and with emphasis for an immediate termination of this state of things and to request her Majesty's Government to give it these assurances;

"(a) That all points of mutual difference shall be regulated by the friendly course of arbitration, or by whatever amicable way may be agreed upon by this Government with her Majesty's Government.

"(b) That the troops on the borders of this republic shall be instantly withdrawn.

"(c) That all reinforcements of troops which have arrived in South Africa since the 1st of June, 1899, shall be removed within a reasonable time, to be agreed upon with this Government, and with a mutual assurance and guarantee on the part of this Government that no attack upon or hostilities against an portion of the possessions of the British Government shall be made by the republic during further negotiations, within a period of time to be subsequently agreed upon between the Governments, and this Government will, on compliance therewith, be prepared to withdraw the armed burghers of this republic from the borders.

"(d) That her Majesty's troops which are now on the high seas shall not be landed in any port of South Africa.

"The despatch ended by requesting her Majesty's Government to return an answer before or upon Wednesday, the 11th of October, not later than 5 o'clock p.m., adding that in the event of no satisfactory answer being received within the interval the republic would with great regret be compelled to regard the action of her Majesty's Government as a formal declaration of war and would not hold itself responsible for the consequences thereof, and that in the event of any further movements of troops taking place within the above-mentioned time in the nearer directions of the borders of the republic, the Government would be compelled to regard that also as a formal declaration of war.

IMPOSSIBLE TO DISCUSS.

"On the 11th of October Mr. Greene brought the reply of the British Government, to the effect that the conditions demanded by the Government of the South African Republic were such as her Majesty's Government deemed it impossible to discuss. At the same time he asked for his passports, in order to enable him to leave the country. And so, in spite of all the concessions, all the patience and indulgence of the republic, the war broke out.

"The Volksraad, which was still sitting, adjourned when it became evident that hostilities were soon to begin; both our Volksraad and that of the Orange Free State unanimously declared themselves ready to risk their lives and properties for their rights and for their liberty; and both repeated this vow in their last session during the turmoil of war.

"The course and the vicissitudes of the war do not come within the scope of these memoirs, since I took no personal part in the fighting. I had a different work before me, which kept me for advice, hints and consolation. Daily I sent off telegrams to all the commandos, encouraging, advising and exhorting the burghers. These labors fully occupied the mornings from 8 to 12 and the evenings from 2 to 4 or 5 o'clock. Not till then did I leave the Government buildings.

"I went to bed at 8, only to get up again at 11 to go through the telegrams that had come to hand. I rose once more at 3, to inspect any despatches that had arrived in the meantime, and it was often 4 o'clock before I could seek my rest again. In the later stage of the war, when the Federal troops were being driven back on every side, my sleep was interrupted regularly three times every night, and frequently as often as four times, in order that I might deal with the telegrams without delay. I was thankful for every success and did not lose courage when reverses were announced, as many of my telegrams could show, had they not been scattered to the winds.

HIS VISIT TO NATAL.

"After the relief of Ladysmith I went myself to Natal to exhort the burghers to keep courage. At Glencoe, where the burghers had once more taken up their position, I addressed them in a long speech, pointing out the urgency of keeping up the fight. Gen. Joubert spoke to them to the same effect.

"I had scarcely returned to Pretoria, when I went to Bloemfontein in order to proceed thence, by wagon, to Poplar Grove, on the Modder River, where I intended also to address and encourage the burghers. But I could not come so far, for I had only just reached Gen. De Wet, when I was obliged to go back, as French, with his mounted troops, had effected a turning movement and I was in danger of being cut off.

"Heavy fighting took place on my arrival, for the English General in command knew of my presence, and I had only just time to retire; I had hardly crossed the Modder River when French arrived with his cavalry. Here, however, Delarey, who had just arrived with his staff, flung himself against him and held him in check until the laager and guns were safe. As I resumed my homeward course the shells were flying all around me, and one fell just behind the cart in which I was seated. I was, therefore, obliged to return to Pretoria but went straight to Kroonstad, there to encourage the burghers and attend a general council of war. It was on this occasion that the deeply lamented Col. de Villebois-Mareuil received his promotion to General of the Foreign Legion.

THE DEATH OF GEN. JOUBERT

"Shortly after I received a heavy blow through the death of Gen. Joubert, who had worked together with me for so many years in building up the republic. His death was profoundly mourned by the whole people, and there is no doubt that the decease of this upright lover of his country a discouraging influence upon his fellow burghers. Fortunately he had, before his death, appointed a successor in the present Commandant-General, Louis Botha, who has shown that the confidence placed in him by the dying General was well deserved.

FOR NICARAGUA CANAL

Secretary Hay Begins Negotiations With Nicaragua and Costa Rica

Washington, Nov. 25—In consequence of the attitude of the Colombian Government with regard to the terms of the treaty to grant the United States the right to construct the Panama Canal, Secretary Hay, by direction of the President, has begun informal negotiations with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica which have for their object the conclusion of a tentative canal treaty, to be submitted to the Senate if the Colombian Government does not show a more liberal disposition.

Mr. Hay has had conferences in the subject with Senor Corea, the Minister of Nicaragua, and Senor Calvo, the Minister of Costa Rica. He was closeted for a long time in the diplomatic reception room of the State Department today. Both the Central American countries are extremely anxious that the Nicaragua canal shall be built and are willing to make very liberal concessions to the United States. It is expected that Mr. Hay will enter into agreements with Nicaragua and Costa Rica by which the two countries will bind themselves to make canal treaties with the United States along the lines laid down in the protocols.

There has been no change in the virtual deadlock that has been caused in the Panama negotiations by the Colombian Government to grant the United States complete control over the territory through which it is proposed to dig the canal.

STATE OF ANARCHY IN WESTERN STATES

Armed Men to be Sent With All Passenger Trains

PLAN TO PREVENT HOLD-UPS

Oft-Repeated Robberies Have Caused Adoption of Drastic Measures For Defense

Chicago, November 25—Officials of railroad and express companies are much alarmed by the increasing prevalence of train robberies, and are planning drastic measures to remedy the evil. The plan most in favor is to send well-known, resolute men heavily armed, with each train. No fewer than 11 train robberies have occurred in the last year, and in each instance the thieves made way with their booty.

The Northwestern Road and the American Express Company suffered a loss estimated anywhere from $50,000 to $100,000 in the Tower "W" hold-up.

The hold-up last night was the third that has occurred on the Rock Island within a year. July 8 one of the company's express trains was robbed in Texas, and October 8 one more hold-up occurred in Oklahoma I. T.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway has fared much worse than the rest in train robberies. On April 5, at St. Joseph, Mo., one of its trains was held-up, and May 27 another attempt to rob the same train was made at the same point. August 6, a Burlington train was stopped near Savannah, Ill., by masked men, and it is believed that they secured a large sum of money. The last hold-up on the Burlington occurred a little more than a month ago near Hubble, Neb.

A Denver and Rio Grande train was held up July 15, at Marshall Pass. The Northern Pacific overland limited train was held up at Bearmouth, Mont., August 5. The Santa Fe suffered as untold loss on the outskirts of Lajunta.

Three days ago a Colorado and Southern passenger train was held-up and the express messenger shot one of the bandits.

There are contradictory stories regarding the amount of money secured by the five men who robbed the Rock Island train last night. The Davenport (Iowa) officers of the United States Express Company say there was only $600 in the safe, while it is asserted that other officers of the company said $20,000 was stolen. No trace has been secured of the robbers.

VENEZUELA PROTESTS.

Sending of British Gunboat up the Orinoco Violation of Sovereignty.

Caracas, Nov. 25.—The Venezuelan Government has strongly protested to Great Britain that the sending of the British sloop-of-war Fantome up the Orinoco River is an infringement of Venezuela's sovereignty, it having been done without permission.

Great Britain has not yet replied to the protest.

LILIOUKALANI ON THE WAY.

Going to Washington to Press Her Claim Before Congress.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Ex-Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii and her party passed through Chicago this afternoon on their way from Honolulu to Washington, where the coming winter her claim for financial relief will again be urged before Congress.

The ex-Queen did not travel in a special car, but occupied a berth in an ordinary sleeper on the Northwestern railroad.

EXHIBITS TO BOOM CANADA

Attractive Window Shows Are Being Arranged for the New Emigration Office

London, Nov. 24—In view of the adoption at Quebec, Halifax and St. John of the United States methods for exclusion of diseased emigrants, the steamship companies are arranging more exacting medical examinations of passengers before leaving England. The companies are anxious to avoid the loss involved in bringing back unaccepted emigrants.

The New Canadian Offices.

Work is progressing slowly on the new Canadian Government Emigration Offices in Trafalgar Square, and the slackness of British workmen's methods will prevent the opening before January. Special arrangements are being made for attractive window shows.

SHOALS OF FISH MOVE TO NORTH

Immense Fishing Banks Discovered in the Polar Regions

Copenhagen, Denmark, Nov. 21—Owing to large catches of fish in waters adjacent to the Scandinavian countries, the fishing area has been moving northward to the Faroe Islands, Iceland and Polar regions. It has been discovered that immense quantities of fish, especially cod and herring, are to be found in those waters. On a recent trip of the Danish ship Dania sometimes ploughed through shoals of these varieties for a long distance, when they could be scooped without any fishing tackle. New banks were discovered, some of them of great extent. These appear to be new homes for the fish, and they possess the necessary requisites for feeding them and rearing their young. The eyes of English, French, German and Norwegian fishermen have been turned to Iceland, and they are beginning to go there in larger numbers for the purpose of participating in the catch.

As to Iceland proper, important changes have taken place among its people. Temperance has now made much progress among them.

Economically there is also an upward trend in Iceland. Salmon fisheries are being exploited in the country, plans are on foot for establishing large canning factories along the rivers, which furnish excellent water power, and English and Americans are taking an interest in this project.

The tourist traffic in Iceland, especially from England and America is rapidly increasing.

The Story of Morning Tiredness

Is told by impure blood, poor digestion, sluggish liver and tired nerves. It is a warning of very serious trouble ahead, and should prompt sensible people to take a bracing tonic like Ferrozone, an energetic invigorant and rebuilder. Ferrozone will give you a sharp appetite, promote good digestion and sound sleep; it will feed and energize the enfeebled organs, strengthen the nerve and vital forces and regulate the heart. Ferrozone changes that tired feeling into vigor, strength and ambition, and does it quickly. Remember the name, and insist on having only Ferrozone; it's the best tonic made. BRITAIN'S BIG CONTRAST ON BEHALF OF CHINA

Her Attitude All Along Has Been one of a Stern Character

THE NAVAL DEMONSTRATION NECESSARY

The Crisis Not Yet Reached in the East—England's Influence May Be Supreme

London, Nov. 25—Great Britain has a large contract just now on hand in China, but is discharging it with a vigor which may make rival nations in that quarter of the globe pause in their desire of aggrandizement at the expense of her interests. It was the settled purpose to have justice duly executed upon the muderers of the missionaries, Lewis and Bruce, at whatever consequence. It will be remembered that the Chinese authorities thought to mollify the British by decapitating some ignorant peasants, but vainly. The officials who countenanced the crime and shielded the criminals were required by the British to expiate justice in their own persons, and upon the refusal to deliver them up, the British Minister threatened to withdraw from all social recognition of the court at Pekin. This did not suffice, however. A naval demonstration was found necessary, and advices from China, via British Columbia, were that a fleet of battleships and cruisers had taken part in the menace, and that in consequence the Empress Dowager had issued an edict for the decapitation of the guilty officials.

So far so good. But while British attention was diverted by these occurrences, it is stated in the Victoria despatch from Tokio, that Germany took advantage of the opportunity "to formulate with regard to the evacuation of Shanghai, conditions which would completely obliterate all traces of England's share of influence in the Yang Tse Valley."

Japanese papers say that Germany has induced France to join in this manoeuvre. If this is anyway near the truth, the contract which the British have on hand can be understood as a formidable one, which may result in boundless complications. It has passed into an axiom that in China the British are between the devil and the deep sea. To the relentless policy of Russia which generation after generation pursues its way with a glacial certainty to its goal, is now added the "mailed fist" of the German Empire and the ambitious restlessness of France.

What the action of the last two named Powers, as reported from Tokio, means in the development of Chinese commerce by British agencies is shown in the vast natural resources of the Yang Tse Valley and the fact that this region has heretofore been regarded by the British as par excellence their "sphere of influence."

Mr. Archibald Little has been credited with more familiarity with the commercial aspects of Yang Tse than any other Britisher, and this is what he says about Szechuan:—

"The surface of this vast region lying mainly between the 28th and 32nd degrees of latitude is covered with every sub-tropical product which the most painstaking and capable agriculturalists on the globe can elicit from the soil in a succession of crops, two or three in succession during the year, forced on by the stimulating manure obtained from the thickly crowded towns and villages of the basin. Thus we have opium and wheat sown in November and gathered in April; rice sown in April and harvested in August; maize and the tal millet sown in May and gathered in September. The sugar-cane, an excellent tobacco, indigo, with the sweet potato, and the taro, also cotton, may be added to the list, which is still not half exhausted. All but the very lowest stratum of its thick population are clad in silk gown and woven in the province, which also yields a considerable surplus for exports to the coast and to France. The celebrated insect-wax is a production of Szechuan and of Szechuan alone. Coal and iron abound everywhere, the former mineral forming the sole fuel for the natives. Petroleum, accompanied by natural gas, which is led through the town in bamboo pipes, cooks the daily rice of the inhabitants of Tse-Liu-Ching, a town and district renowned throughout China for its productive brine wells, which have supplied the province with salt for two thousand years past, besides supplying many of the neighboring provinces. Thus Szechuan is self-sufficient, and we have here a province 220,000 square miles in extent, inhabited by some forty or fifty millions of industrious, intelligent and mostly prosperous people."

And to this promising emporium of trade the Yang Tse River is the only serviceable highway. Besides Szechuan the Yang Tse traverses, or serves, the large and populous province of Hupeh, Hunan, Kiangsi, Ngan-hui and Kiangsu. It is, roughly speaking, the main highway of an area of 600,000 square miles, inhabited by the most naturally industrious and commercial people in the eastern hemisphere, if not in the whole world. And the Yang Tse flows into the great Pacific basin at Shanghai—"the coming New York of the Far East"—whose foreign trade even at present exceeds £15,000,000 sterling per annum. If the Germans and French, profiting by the feelings excited at Pekin, have formulated conditions of evacuating Shanghai, if entertained, which would have the effect of "obliterating England's share of influence" in that portion of China, there will be doings in that quarter, which may furnish some startling headlines for the press in the near future. The entire trade of the towns in the Yang Tse Valley, is so far as reported to the Imperial Maritime Customs, exceeds £30,000,000 sterling per annum, but a very large trade is, in addition, carried on by the native junks, which do not report to the Maritime Customs. The population of that region is at least 180,000,000, and with such a population, with such natural resources, and with such a magnificent waterway to the outer world, it is not deemed extravagant of Mr. Little to predict that the annual value of the trade of the Yang Tse Valley will be soon not 30, but 300 millions sterling.

The prize at stake is one worth striking for!

ABOUT THE REFERENDUM

Who May Vote on the New Liquor Question on December 4th

Some Information Regarding the Measure That it is Well for the Public to Know

The Liquor Act calls, first, for a majority of the votes cast in the election of 1898. The total vote was 425,446, a majority of which will be 212,722. Besides securing this vote, the prohibitionists must, to succeed, have a majority of the votes actually cast on the referendum.

Those who may vote are the electors who were on the voters' list used in the last election, provided they have resided in the province from the date of the election.

In the provincial plebiscite of 1894 there were [illegible] ballots marked for prohibition and 110,720 against. These figures include 12,402 women who voted for prohibition and 2,226 against. Ontario voted again on the Dominion plebiscite in 1898. On that occasion there were 154,489 votes cast for prohibition in Ontario, and 115,284 against. Throughout the whole Dominion the vote was 278,380 for and 264,693 against.

Manitoba has declared itself three times on the question. In 1892 there were 19,617 votes for prohibition in that province, and 7,115 against. The Dominion plebiscite elicited 12,419 favorable votes in Manitoba, and only 2,978 that were unfavorable. Practically the vote went by default. When the question was submitted in the shape of a referendum 22,513 votes for prohibition were necessary to win. The result was that 15,607 votes were cast for prohibition and 22,464 against. This was a great surprise and appears to have silenced the agitation.

The Ontario measure prohibits the sale of intoxicants within the province, but does not affect the importation. If adopted it will go into effect on the 1st of May, 1904. Whatever may be the outcome, both sides agree to hope that it will be decisive.

Wireless Stations on Jamaica Island — Government Arranging to Grant Facilities for Establishing a Service

London, Nov. 25—A despatch from Kingston, Jamaica, says the Government is arranging to grant facilities for the establishment of wireless telegraphic stations in Jamaica. A bill to enable the Government to issue licenses for stations will be introduced into the Legislative Council at an early date.

London Nov. 25—In spite of the comforting assurances that the Macedonian agitation is ended, says a despatch from Salonika, numerous armed bands continue to hold their ground in the more inaccessible districts and sporadic disturbances are constantly reported. In the course of the last fortnight there have been four encounters in Strumitz district, between Bulgarian bands and troops of gendarmes. Few were killed or wounded on both sides. In two instances the villagers fled and their houses were plundered during their absence. In another district the brigands captured and pillaged villages. The only result of this outrage was that twenty-seven of the villagers were arrested and taken to Salonika. In Salonika district an attack was made on the house of the head man of the village. He escaped, but his wife, two sons, and two daughters were bayoneted by emissaries of the Macedonian committee disguised as gendarmes. A band of 400 men, attempting to invade Turkish territory from Bulgaria, was repulsed with considerable loss. The invaders wore Bulgarian uniforms. Another band raided a Bulgarian village in Petritch district, which is obnoxious to revolutionaries, because it is subject to the jurisdiction of Patriarchate. One of the principal inhabitants was killed, and two others wounded.

London, Nov. 25—A St. Petersburg correspondent says that Viedomosti publishes a lengthy article on Afghanistan which seems to reproduce the views held in competent Russian quarters. The writer of the article is well informed, says the correspondent, but in referring to Lord Cranborne's recent statement, he completely ignores Russia's assurance that she regarded Afghanistan as outside her sphere of influence. The article says that the present state of affairs is an anomalous one, and that it can scarcely be possible to continue an arrangement making the Government of India a necessary medium for communication between Russia and Ameer. The writer warns the Ameer that it would be disastrous for him to allow himself to become a tool of British diplomacy. If he did so the British-Russian conflict would soon extinguish the independence of Afghanistan, which might also disappear if British-Russian differences were settled amicably. The Times correspondent says the writer of the article appears to believe the reports of Russian attempts to communicate with the Ameer directly, and says that this throws doubt on Russian assurances to the British Foreign Office.

London, Nov. 25—Speeches which were delivered yesterday by the Earl of Dudley, the new Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, and by John Redmond, the Irish leader, have aroused much comment as a triking have aroused much comment as striking a more hopeful note of conciliation in the Irish question.

The Earl of Dudley at Belfast declared that he had come to Ireland with the same spirit of impartial inquiry that animated Mr. Chamberlain in going to South Africa. He suggested that a sort of round table conference of representatives of the landlords, tenants and others interested in Ireland should be held to endeavor to arrive at a mutual understanding.

Whilst Lord Dudley was speaking at Belfast, John Redmond was making an equally conciliatory speech at a demonstration of the London branches of the Irish League. He was intensely gratified he said, to find on returning from the United States the political situation in Ireland was more hopeful than he had known it for twenty-five years. While all rumors of Irish "deals" with the Government were untrue, the political situation in Ireland has undergone an extraordinary and radical change, and he believed that no English Minister since the union had had such a chance as the Irish Secretary, George Wyndham, now had. The time had arrived, as it did in every struggle, when the combatants were grown tired of the contest and were taking counsel as to whether it could not be brought to a satisfactory end. For the first time in Irish history the majority of landlords were speaking words of good sense, conciliation and reason. The tenants were united, and a moderate and quite limited use of the Imperial credit will enable a settlement of the land question to be brought about. At the same time, concluded Mr. Redmond, this would not affect the aspirations of the Irish people for Home Rule and he warned the Government that if last session's Land bill were re-introduced, the Irish members would "fight it line by line."

A Sure Cure For Constipation

Some remedies cure this distressing complaint in a day, some in a month, but Nerviline never fails to cure in a few minutes. Just ten drops of Nerviline in sweetened water—that's enough, and away goes the dysentery, cured to stay cured. Nerviline also cures cramps, colic, pain in the stomach and sick headache. It has five times the strength and curative properties of ordinary remedies, and should be in every household. Better buy a 25c. bottle and try it. Nerviline is all right.

TROUBLE IN CUBA BETWEEN THE RACES

The Negro Population are Likely to Go into Rebellion

ABOUT ONE THIRD IN NUMBER

And are Under a Clever Leader—President Palma's Difficult Work

Havana, Nov. 26. — It appears that Cuba has a negro question among its many questions. The negro has the same right of suffrage in Cuba as the whites, and the negroes and mulattoes together constitute about 32 per cent. of the total population of a little over 1,500,000. They are complaining of the treatment they get from the whites. They say that, while they did most of the fighting with Spain and most of the suffering during the war, it is extremely hard now to have the color line drawn upon them. They declare that they are not getting their share of the offices, and that the whites are making social distinctions on account of color. President Palma proposes holding a number of receptions this winter. If he invites negroes to them, it is said, the best classes of white society of Havana will refuse to attend. If the negroes are not invited it is expected that they will cause the government infinite trouble. The negroes are led by Senor Gomez, a mulatto, who is one of the ablest men of either race in the island, and who insists upon full social and political rights for the negroes. He is said to be a strong and brilliant writer, and promises to be a good-sized thorn in President Palma's side. The negroes say they are not asking for their rights, but are demanding them, and purpose to enforce their demands.

If the negroes of Cuba rebel against the whites, as there is talk that they will, perhaps the United States will have to do some more intervening. Cuba has had a strange and troubled past. Her future doesn't look as promising as it might.

THE MAD MULLAH

The Mad Mullah has method in his madness. A story is told in the English papers of how he worked one of those "miracles" which drew many waverers to his banner. An English man-of-war was sent to demonstrate off the coast, and at night threw a searchlight on to the jungle covered mountains. Abdullah was in hiding there, and, knowing from his visits to Aden what it was that his followers hailed as a new star, told them that the light was seeking him. When the electric rays actually flooded his encampment he cried in triumph; "Will you deny now that I am under the eye of God? The Somali fell on their knees, beat the earth with their foreheads, and replied; "Thou art truly the Elect, the Chosen, the Mullah, the souls belong to thee. We place ourselves Master. Our goods, our existence, our entirely at the disposition of thy will." A few weeks later came the news of the rising of some four thousand of these Somali.

A REMARKABLE CHINESE WOMAN

A remarkable young Chinese woman is studying at the University of California. Sieh King King, sixteen years old, daughter of a liberal-minded merchant of Tien Tsin, has announced her intention to devote her life to the uplifting of her sex in China. Although the young woman has had the best of foreign teachers and advocates the introduction of western customs, she is not a Christianized Chinese. Her influence is all the greater for that fact, and she is able to reach a class of men and women who would hardly regard her with respect if she had repudiated the religion of her ancestors. Miss Sieh King King lectured recently in the Chinese theater in San Francisco before a large crowd of her compatriots of the better class. Men brought their wives and daughters to hear what the leaders of social revolution had to say. They listened courteously, and many seemed to approve her theories, that women should be educated to be their husbands' companions. She condemned the slave-girl system and the foot-binding custom in measured terms, and urged the abandonment of the old fashion of secluding women of position and wealth.

"A PEACEFUL CONQUEST."

Senator Moses E. Clapp, of Minnesota, is an optimist regarding the "peaceful absorption" of the Dominion of Canada by the republic. At a banquet in St. Paul the other day he said that forty years ago it was predicted that that city would yet be the seat of empire. This had not been fulfilled, but material advance had been made. Senator Clapp said:

"With the situation in view, it is easy to foresee the manifest destiny of the Dominion of Canada. There is no doubt that in the future," possibly within the lives of some here present, the United States will ultimately include the regions that stretch from the boundaries of the Northern states to the Arctic sea. It will be then that St. Paul will be the seat of empire, the capital of the greatest nation of the earth. One-third of the population of Canada is American born, and the stream of immigration is increasing year by year. The peaceful invasion is going quietly on. We will acquire the Dominion by the process of assimilation and not by conquest."

The worthy Senator has probably been deceived by the industrial appearances in his vicinity. The mills of Minneapolis are getting hold of a large portion of Canadian North-West wheat free of the United States duty to grind for export. And now an oatmeal mill has been bonded by the Washburn interest to grind Canadian oats under similar conditions. This will suit our free traders all right. But the mills of Northern Ontario and Keewatin will in time find ample scope and be able to deal with the wheat and and be able to deal with the wheat and oat crops on that line without the intervention of tariff tinkers. The water-powers available in those regions are enough when put in harness, to grind all the grain that the North-West can produce.

Senator Clapp is a little too sanguine in supposing that the mills of St. Anthony's fall are the whole question. The United States wheat farmers who are content to remain on their lands, while so many of their neighbors are "hiking" over into Canada, will take care that the duty on Canadian wheat is taken off for the export trade only. They have no desire to see their own markets flooded with Manitoba's future overflow. So the duty will remain. The senator is "barking up the wrong tree" when he imagines the farmers of the western states want assimilation on a free basis. But it may tickle the vanity of St. Paul to be promised the "seat of future empire." And the senator knows how to do this as well as he knows where to find good fishing on the north shore of Minnesota. At that he is a rare one!

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The complements of the warships of to-day are approaching those of the old three-deckers of Nelson's time. The British armored cruiser Drake, which will go into commission early in January, will carry 568 officers and men. Our California class of armored cruisers will have 777 officers and men when the complements are full. In the old days, when sanitation was unknown, ships much smaller than are used now carried as many men as the largest now afloat, and sometimes even more. The British Ville de Paris of 1795, of 2332 tons, carried 850 men; the Commerce de Marseille, a prize, carried 875 on a tonnage of 2747. In the middle of the seventeenth century the first rates of the English Navy carried from 710 to 815 men, though the largest ship of the rate was of only 1605 tons. Nelson's 11-gun ship, the Victory, carried more than 1,000 in her complement at Trafalgar.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers Fortune's Spor. Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc.

Still, if she hesitated in telegraphing her reply to Dick's imploring letter, it was not for long. Poor, foolish Dick! He had been but a cat's-paw from the first, as she had warned him; yet she would not remind him now of that warning. She would save him, and if she could not save herself when the time came, she must die.

To those who did not know of the silent battle waged for so many months it would seem a small, almost an absurdly small, sacrifice to make, that she should dine at the house of a man whom she disliked, when by doing so she could keep her brother from going to prison and spare her invalid mother a blow which might crush out her life.

But Winifred knew when she made the promise that it meant far more than a dinner at a house where she would have preferred not to go.

If Hope Newcome had been to her the man she had once thought him, she would have hesitated longer before sacrificing her reputation to save her brother from prison. She would have belonged to her lover, and would have had no right to put Dick before him. But the girl believed that she had done for ever with love and lovers. Since the only man to whom she had given her heart had been able to hide his baseness with seeming nobility, Winifred had lost faith in all men, and told herself that she hated every one. Except for her mother, it mattered little enough what became of the rest of her spoiled life.

She did not sleep much before the night when she would be called upon to keep her promise. The thought of what she must do was like a waking nightmare. It was always before her, whether her eyes were closed or open. Her imagination conjured up a hundred different methods by which Macaire might seek to entrap her; and the hours she should have slept were spent in striving to think how, while she kept her word to the letter, she might still contrive to thwart the ultimate designs which she suspected.

Winifred did not tell her mother of the trouble which had befallen Dick nor of her promise to Macaire. If all were well, Mrs. Gray never need know; if not, there was time enough for her to be made unhappy.

As the girl went out every evening soon after seven to keep her nightly engagement at the Salisbury, her mother would believe that she was absent upon her usual errand. It would be necessary to say: "I shall be later than usual"—for the dinner was to be at nine—and Winifred hoped, after keeping her hateful bargain to the letter, to reach home before midnight. Only there was such terrible indefiniteness in her hope. She did not know what danger she might be going to meet at Macaire's house, and unless Dick were there she would have no one to protect her.

At half-past seven she left the dismal lodging-house which was "home" now. She had kissed her mother even more tenderly than was her wont, and clung to the little frail woman yearningly for a moment, that was all; and Mrs. Gray suspected nothing. Winifred had made her promise not to sit up, as she must be late, but the girl knew that her mother would not sleep until she was safely back again. "Safely back again!" How much there was in those simple words! What would be her thoughts when she returned to the dull little rooms which appeared desirable in her eyes to-night for the first time? What would the next five hours hold of fear and humiliation for her?

Winifred had put on a very simple evening dress, which she covered with a long cloak even from her mother's eyes; for she was in the habit of walking to the Salisbury in a coat and short dark skirt. Her "turn" was one of the first on the long programme, a position not considered desirable by the artistes, since the nearer their names were to the middle the more unmistakable the hallmark of their importance; but on this particular night it was convenient for Winifred to finish early.

By half-past eight she had sung her song and satisfied the audience with a couple of encores. There was just time to change her stage dress for the evening gown she had worn, and drive to Park lane; and as the hour drew near the girl's heart grew cold as ice. She dared not be late, she dared not wish that some incident might delay or prevent her going lest Dick should be made to suffer.

She dressed with speed, and at twenty minutes to nine she was in a hansom on her way to Park lane. How sickeningly her pulses beat as the cab drove into the courtyard and stopped before the great brilliantly lighted house! Her knees trembled, and she almost fell as she stepped down to the pavement. The huge doors looked to her like the doors of a prison. If only Dick had written—if only she found Dick inside! But there had been no word from him save a few lines of thanks after receiving her telegram. She paid the cabman, and then—slowly, in spite of herself—moved towards the door which she feared might open before her knock. The hansom was driving away; it was all that she could do not to call after it and tell the man to stop—she had changed her mind and would go back.

As her eyes wistfully followed him a voice spoke almost in her ear: "Winnie! I've been waiting for you this last half-hour."

"Dick!" she thankfully exclaimed.

"Yes. We've only a minute to speak together. I can't go in; I'm not wanted inside that house any more, and I don't want to be there, Heaven knows, except for you. But I had to see you. Lucky for us your cab had rubber tires and didn't make much noise, or the door would be open now and you going in. I couldn't have got a word. Look here, Winnie, I am beginning to be afraid you were right about Macaire. He certainly is a villain—bad enough for anything, and the more I've thought of it the more I believe he did lay the trap to get us both to fall into it."

"I've never doubted that for an instant," said the girl.

"Yet you're here, Winnie. I'm a brute to let you come, but I didn't see it this way at first when I wrote begging you to consent. And how could I go to prison? For mother's sake, how could I go? I was sure I should be on hand to look after you and see that you came to no harm, so I let things slide when I began to realize that Macaire meant worse mischief. But I've been turned from the house, and told that if I tried to force my way in I should be pitched out by the footmen. I pretended to go, but I sneaked back here to wait for you, and give you a word of warning. I would say, don't go in after all, no matter what happened to me—"

"You needn't, Dick," Winifred broke in. "Nothing that you tell me comes as a surprise. I shall go in and keep my

The whole of the instalments remaining unpaid at any time may be prepaid in full. A discount of one per cent will be allowed upon the par of each share prepaid at time of allotment.

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company.

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are :—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey :—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4.05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5.23
	100 00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows :—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4.00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows :—

	ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902, to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2.70
July 1st, 1903, " " 1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904, " " 1905	1.65	1.65
July 1st, 1905, " " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906, " " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows :—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6½ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000 00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000 00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to .... $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is .... $20,000,000.00 earning [illegible] 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is ...... $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

STOCK MARKETS

Reactionary, as we Outlined

New York, Nov. 25.—The set back in the market is trying to put itself in evidence. The short interest is materially reduced owing to last week's rapid rise, which naturally causes stocks to be less buoyant for the time being. Profit-taking brought stocks to market. A little set back will not only put the stocks thus sold back into the hands of strong holders, but likewise create another short interest which will be a lever for further lifting of values. We don't want to be misunderstood. We are still bullish upon American stocks for the future. The great railways have all the business they can possibly handle, and as rates are to be raised more than in proportion with lift in wages it does not require but a fraction of one per cent. advance in freight rates to more than counterbalance a ten per cent. advance in wages. The Standard Oil forces are probably the largest speculative long interest in the present market. They with their immense wealth and great allied banking interests are the most powerful force in Wall street. Some of western contingent have recently been made to feel the effectiveness of their power. They were shaken out of their holdings at low prices only to witness stocks go into the possession of the Standard party, then advance from 5 to 10 points in most cases. When we observed this state of affairs we quickly notified our clientele in these letters to their immediate profit if they followed them. Considerable stress has been laid by the bear forces upon the fact that we were at times so prosperous, that there were insufficient funds obtainable to keep up the bull structure. To get short of the market on such fallacious reasoning is extremely dangerous. It would be like a man hastening to dispose of some property or business proposition, now in his possession, because he saw it was going to pay him largely; too much so in fact for his comfort; it was too prosperous to have and to hold. In other words embarrassment through too much business, commonly known as prosperity, is poor ammunition to sell what one does not own, or even what one does own.

Summary—Today's market was in conformity with the weather, more or less depressing, and after a hesitating opening, with a few feeble advances led by a spurt in Manhattan and a sharp advance in C.F.I., the latter due to special reasons which for the time being separated it from the balance of the market, the general list became more or less weak and depressed, at times declining sharply. The set-back was due as announced in our letters of Saturday last and yesterday. At the lower levels support came in and the character of the buying improved greatly. It will probably be well to commence repurchasing, though prices may decline somewhat further before actual bottom is reached. One thing we believe certain that prices are again near the turning point. To-morrow's letter—Rearing Bull Market Structure. Money closed 4 per cent; sales 577,200.

Oil Company,

of Marietta, Ohio, will stand investigation through Mercantile Agencies or leading people. It has been successful in its operations so far, only drilling one dry hole in getting 12 wells, and one of its wells is a 25 barrel well in 400 acre tract, where there will be room for 100 wells. The company is NOW EARNING DIVIDENDS, and will start paying better than interest in January next, increasing thereafter as new wells come in.

The present price of shares is $25 for $50, but will advance to $50 as soon as some of its wells now drilling are completed.

GOLD Is the World's Wealth!

YOU WANT IT

We have it. The property of the ORO RICO MINING SYNDICATE located in San Bernardino County, California, consists of THREE GREAT GOLD MINES, a total of 30 mining claims, comprising 600 acres, which under several years operation and development have reached a state of profitable production. For the purpose of erecting a suitable mill and plant for treating the ores we offer a moderate block of stock (par value $1) at 20 cents a share. This Mill we expect to have in operation early in 1903, at which time we expect to commence the payment of Ten Per Cent. Annual Dividends on the PAR VALUE. We solicit an opportunity to place before you the prospectus, reports of mining experts and actual facts regarding this great gold property. We believe in our mines. A FALSE HEART

Coffee Does Not Act It Heart True

all he could eat was the white of an egg. I insisted on his trying Postum. He said the first cup he drank soothed his stomach and was nourishing; in a few days he was able to eat solid food again, and now he uses it altogether and does not use coffee.

My next door neighbor, another coffee drinker, had suffered with catarrh of the stomach, and for months could not eat anything—was just living on beef tea. I carried her some Postum and gave her directions for making it and now she can eat anything she wants and it does not hurt her. She says she feels better than she has for ten years.

I could tell you of dozens of people who have been benefitted by leaving off coffee and drinking Postum. It has done me so much good I tell everybody to use it. I have been using it now for two years and my digestion is fine, my complexion clear and everyone says I look ten years younger."

"Coffee served me a very hard turn about two years ago. My doctor said I had chronic dyspepsia with serious heart and nervous trouble and nothing would cure me unless I gave up coffee, said Miss Hattie Williams of Birmingham. My stomach got so bad that I could not eat any solid food without its nauseating me, and I was so nervous I could not sleep and my heart was in a dreadful condition. I had heard a great deal about Postum Food Coffee and how much good people had derived from changing from coffee to Postum, so one day I sent to the grocer for a package.

The first cup I drank helped me, for it removed all the gas from my stomach, or perhaps the quitting of coffee produced that result, at any rate, in less than a week there was a wonderful change; no more restless nights; no more pains around my heart that made me think I had heart trouble; no more sick stomach. This was two years ago. I am now entirely well and Postum cured me. I found it was not only medicine I needed but proper food and nourishment and to quit coffee entirely.

My brother-in-law (a coffee drinker) was very sick with stomach trouble and

BOARD OF TRADE WILL SEND A DEPUTATION

To-morrow To Inspect the Berlin Beet Sugar Factory

FACTORY TO COST $565,000

And will Pay a Dividend of at Least Ten Per Cent—Arrangements Already Made for its Construction—A Resolution of Congratulation to the American Cereal Company

The Board of Trade met in regular session last night when there were present President D. W. Dumble, presiding, and Messrs. R. J. Toker, Robert Fair, T. E. Bradburn, W. H. Meldrum, T. A. S. Hay, Dawson Kennedy, J. W. Garvin, D. Hughes-Charles, W. H. Bradburn, and A. P. Poussette.

The minutes of the preceding session were taken as read.

Communications.

From the Windsor Board of Trade, enclosing a resolution passed by the Maritime Board of Trade at Sydney, N.S., in favor of closer trade relations with Newfoundland and the West Indies. They asked for the co-operation of the different Boards of Trade to induce the Dominion Government to give their early and careful consideration of the whole matter, with a view to securing the trade of Jamaica and to arrange a basis of confederation between Canada and Jamaica, and between Canada and Newfoundland if practicable.—Received.

From the Halifax Board of Trade re a fast mail and freight service between Canada and Great Britain. Mr. W. H. Meldrum moved, seconded by Mr. Toker, that this Board heartily endorse and support the Halifax Board of Trade's attitude with reference to a fast steamship line between Canada and Great Britain and hopes the Federal Government will see that this service will be equal to the expectations of the country, and a credit to the Dominion.—Carried.

Beet Sugar.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn addressed the Board on the benefits to be derived from the establishment of a beet sugar factory in Peterborough, and asked, on behalf of the Peterborough Beet Sugar Company, that a deputation be appointed to accompany the Town and County Councils to Berlin tomorrow to inspect the splendid factory in operation there.

Mr. R. Fair moved, seconded by Mr. Hughes-Charles, That inasmuch as experiments widely conducted have demonstrated that Peterborough County is peculiarly suited for the growth of the sugar beet, and as the railways centering here and the Trent waters offer very great facilities for marketing the roots, a beet sugar factory should be established in Peterboro, and this Board urges upon the Town and County representatives the expediency of encouraging and aiding the efforts of any company disposed to locate a factory in Peterborough.—Carried.

Mr. Fair in moving the above resolution pointed out Peterborough's natural advantages for a Beet Sugar industry. We can grown the beets in our own county, and the erection and operation of a factory here will keep the money spent for raw material and in wages at home. He thought the Board should encourage the scheme in every way possible.

Mr. Hughes-Charles concurred with Mr. Fair in his opinion, and hoped the two Councils would do all in their power, to promote the industry.

Mr. J. W. Garvin, explained that the Peterborough Beet Sugar Company have already entered into an agreement with a construction company for the erection of a large factory with a capacity of 650 tons per day; the cost for building and plant to be $565,000. The construction company have agreed to take $175,000 in stock and to accept $275,000 in the Beet Sugar Company's bonds: this will leave only $115,000 to be paid in cash for the buildings and plant. The phenomenal growth of Beet Sugar Factories in the State of Michigan demonstrates that capitalists as well as farmers realize that this industry is a paying one. There need be no hesitation in regard to acreage for growing beets in the county of Peterborough, as that is already assured. As to the demand for this product the market for sugar is practically unlimited. It will take about twenty-five or thirty factories similar to that proposed for Peterborough to supply Canada with sugar, a large proportion of which comes at present from Germany. The money that goes to Germany and elsewhere might as well be kept at home. 70 per cent. of the sugar consumed in the Dominion is extracted from the beet root. The Peterborough Sugar Company are not going to ask for a cash bonus, but they expect the Town and County each to take $40,000 worth of stock. The proposed factory it is believed will pay exceptionally good dividends, certainly not less than ten per cent.; this will undoubtedly prove an excellent investment for the Town and County. In conclusion, Mr. Garvin felt that since the two corporations would be in pocket by their own investment; the Provisional Directors are putting a large amount of money in the concern themselves, and they think they should be substantially supported in their efforts, which must of necessity be a move in the interest of the whole community.

On motion of Mr. T. A. S. Hay, Messrs. Fair, Carnegie and Hughes-Charles were appointed a deputation to go with the Town and County Councils to Berlin to inspect the Beet Sugar Factory there.—Carried.

American Cereal Co.

Mr. Hughes-Charles moved, seconded by Mr. J. W. Garvin, that this Board congratulates the American Cereal Company on its splendid accomplishment in the erection of its magnificent factory at Peterborough, and now in operation. The Board hopes that the quick appreciation of Peterborough as a desirable site for its great industry may be more than justified, and that every prosperity may reward the achievement now in operation and in course of construction. Also that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Mr. Stewart.—Carried.

Mr. Hughes-Charles in eulogizing the American Cereal Company as having already proved a good thing for the town, although not yet in full blast, incidentally remarked that this company's wage list is over $10,000 a month.

Insurance.

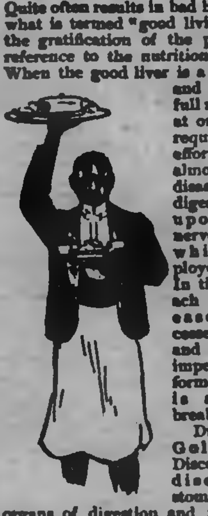
Mr. W. H. Meldrum moved, seconded by Mr. R. Fair, that the Insurance Companies having determined to vary their rates in proportion as insurers exercise precautions against fire, this Board urges all citizens to get the benefit of the lower rates by systematic and continued efforts to keep cellars, window areas, sheds and yards, clear of paper, rubbish and combustible material. — Carried.

Transcontinental Railways.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay moved, seconded by Mr. T. E. Bradburn, That the proposed construction of new transcontinental railways has the hearty appreciation and approval of this Board, as it realizes that every development of our western land ensures a corresponding development of eastern trade. That this Board is satisfied that the grain trade of the great west will be more and more largely via the great lakes from Port Arthur, and realizes that too much speed cannot be made in the construction of the Trent Canal to meet the great commerce destined to reach Midland City. Also that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Minister of Railways and Canals.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

GOOD LIVING



Quite often results in bad health, because what is termed "good living" is usually the gratification of the palate without reference to the nutrition of the body. When the good liver is a business man and rises from a full meal to plunge at once into work requiring mental effort the result is almost sure to be disastrous, because digestion draws upon the same nervous forces which are employed in thought. In time the stomach becomes diseased, the processes of digestion and nutrition are imperfectly performed and there is a physical breakdown.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It eliminates the effete poisonous matter which originates in the system as a consequence of imperfect digestion. It gives sound health to the whole body.

"I wish to say to the world that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proved a great blessing to me," writes Mrs. Ellen E. Bacon, of Shutesbury, Franklin Co., Mass. "Prior to September, 1897, I had doctored for my stomach trouble for several years, going through a course of treatment without any real benefit. In September, 1896, I had very sick spells and grew worse; could eat but little. I commenced in September, 1897, to take Dr. Pierce's medicine, and in a short time I could eat and work. I have gained twenty pounds in two months."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

MARTIAL LAW IN ARGENTINA.

Government Takes Firm Measures to Deal With Strikers

Buenos Ayres, Nov. 27—The strikes here are threatening a general paralysis of business and are affecting the handling of the crops.

The Government is thoroughly alive to the situation and has secured the passage of the expulsion bylaw that will enable it to deal with foreign agitators who are blamed for the labor troubles.

A state of seige has been declared, and it is believed that the new law, in conjunction with military government, will soon remedy the situation.

EARTHQUAKE CONFERENCE

German Government Proposes International Action on the Subject

London, Nov. 26—An international conference upon earthquakes is to be held early in 1903 on the initiative of the German Government, when the project of an international seismological association will be considered.

The question has arisen whether the scheme is not a matter clearly within the province of the International Association of Academies lately established. A reference to the latter body elicited an opinion against the unnecessary multiplication of international scientific organizations.

The Royal Society is considering the question, which has attracted much attention in British and foreign scientific quarters.

GENERAL STRIKE IN HAVANA

Men of Many Trades Go Out to Back up the Cigarmakers

Havana, Nov. 26—Various labor unions have agreed to a sympathetic strike to support the cigarmakers on Monday. Today the coach drivers, cooks, carpenters and masons went out. On Monday, the longshoremen and cartmen will quit work.

The Mayor hopes to be able to settle the strike next week. The cigarmakers refused to treat with the Havana commercial body save through a central committee. The commercial people say they will deal with the men directly.

It is said that through lack of funds the men may be compelled to come to terms.

HANGED HIMSELF TO A BEDPOST

Suicide of a German Who Became Despondent Over His Wife's Death

Hudson, N.Y., Nov. 26—Louis Hedwig, a German, 62 years of age, committing suicide this morning by hanging himself to a bedpost. He was discovered by his daughter. His wife had been troubled with hallucinations for years, and two weeks ago became so violent that she had to be removed to the Poughkeepsie Asylum for the insane. She refused nourishment and died yesterday. Her body reached here last night and Hedwig made arrangements for the funeral. Her death preyed on his mind and getting up toward morning, he got a piece of rope, and, tying it about the bedpost and his neck, must have strangled to death slowly. There will be a double funeral.

FRANCE IS SLOWLY SUICIDING

Only One Section of That Country Is Increasing in Population

London, Nov. 26—Commenting on the Parliamentary debates on the population statistics, says the Paris correspondent of The Times, Paul Leroy Beaulieu points out that Brittany alone show an increase. Leroy Beaulieu says France is slowly committing suicide. If she wants to escape certain decline she must take Brittany as her model and cultivate a frame of mind resembling that of the Bretons.

WOMAN KILS A NEGRO

He Had Come to Assault Her So and Shot Pistol and Shot Him

Columbia, Nov. 26—Mrs. Mary E. Elliott living in the West Wateree region of Kershaw county, has won the congratulations of the Coroner's jury, as well as her neighbors for miles around for slaying Edward Kendrick, a negro, in her house last night. Mrs. Elliott is a widow and lives with her son, a boy in his teens in a lonely part of the country, the nearest white neighbor being beyond call.

Kendrick came to the house late last night and demanded assistance. He said he had friends with him and if the boy showed himself outside of his room he would be killed. The negro broke down the door with an axe.. Mrs. Elliott had no weapon.

The man declared that he would kill both mother and son if any resistance was made. Before the woman was forced to decide between her honor and her son's life, the boy dashed out of his room and at Kendrick. His mother threw herself before him and both grappled with the man with pistol in hand.

Mrs. Elliott pressed the negroe's pistol arm to his side. In the struggle all fell to the floor, and in exerting himself to hurl Mrs. Elliott from him let his pistol drop. The women seized the weapon and fired. Kendric died almost instantly.

MILNER WILL CONFER WITH NATIVE CHIEF

Uneasiness Over Report the Government Would Disarm Basutos

Finding Fault With Japan Ministry—Political Situation Becoming Daily More Complicated

London, Nov. 26—A correspondent at Johannesburg, says that Lord Milner left Monday on a three weeks' tour of the Orange Free State. He will return by way of Kimberly and the Western Transvaal, visiting the battlefields of Paardeberg and Magersfontein en route. He will meet Basuto Chief Lerothodi at Ladybrand. There has been for some time, says the correspondent, an undercurrent of uneasiness among the natives owing to reports that the Government was going to disarm the Basutos. Repatriation is progressing in all parts of the two colonies, and one cannot go far without seeing here and there a white tent or improvised dwelling of sod or sundried bricks. Despite their meagre surroundings the people are glad to get back upon their land, and seem fairly well contented, their lot being no worse than that of settlers in any new country. In the Thabanchu district which was lately visited, the farms showed 100,000 acres under cultivation, the crops being well advanced.

London, Nov. 26—A Tokio correspondent says the political situation in Japan is becoming daily more complicated. Seiyukai evidently desires the overthrow of the Cabinet, but being unwilling openly to oppose a naval increase, accuses the Ministry of failing to effect administrative and financial reforms. This hackneyed pretext has been employed against every Cabinet for the past ten years. Meanwhile Marquis Ito is keeping silent, which is attriubted to a design of effecting a compromise, whereby a naval increase may be secured simultaneously with a reduction in the land tax, a fund for a naval increase to be otherwise obtained. Undoubtedly he is unwilling to take office now, inasmuch as the successful administrative policy of the Katsura Cabinet has strengthened the opponents of party government, whose stronghold is in the House of Peers. Moreover, Ito is a consistent advocate of ministerial stability, which, in the interests of the country, he prefers to his own tenure of power.

London, Nov. 26—A Berlin correspondent says it is understood that negotiations between the Government and the Reichstag majority for a compromise in regard to minimum duties on grain in the Tariff Bill, have at last met with some measure of success. Many clerical constituencies especially those in Bavaria, it is pointed out, are interested in the barley growing, and the Government concessions regarding barley may be valuable to the clerical centre, but it remains to be seen how Conservatives forming the other wing of the majority will treat the proposal.

STARTLING NEWS FROM THE NORTHWEST MORMONS FLOCKING INTO CANADA

Where They Are Establishing Immense Colonial Industries

DOMINION AUTHORITIES SAID TO BE ALARMED

Dominion Politicians Fear the Influence of Their Vote on Questions of International Policy—A Live Question

Winnipeg Man., Nov. 26.—The rumor that the grandson of Brigham Young, now under arrest for a most brutal murder in New York, was married some time ago to a young Mormon woman in the Canadian Northwest, has attracted renewed attention to the followers of the Mormon faith in Canada.

Every little while one of the Eastern newspaper will publish an alarmist article about the astonishing influx of United States settlers into the Northwest Territories and the danger there is of these settlers gradually obtaining the balance of political power, and some day or other using their influence in favor of annexation to the United States.

In all these articles, however, the fact that the Mormons are gradually establishing a new Utah in the Territories is entirely lost sight of. And yet that is what they are doing, and that that is what they are doing, and that is what is their avowed intention. Headed by a visionary they have started to settle in the district around Lethbridge, and have founded a town called Raymond, which is destined to have a population of at least 30,000 souls.

They have selected a most fertile neighborhood, and a country which will be immensely benefitted shortly by the great irrigation ditch, which is now being constructed.

The man who is at the head of the Mormon movement is Mr. Jesse Knight, a Mormon capitalist from Utah, who says that in a vision saw the possibilities of the Northwest country, and who founded a town named Raymond, after his son, which he says will be the modern Salt Lake City of the Canadian West.

This vision, which he announced publicly, showed him and his son Raymond leading the ten lost tribes into the colony.

They carried sheaves of wheat, and their way led towards a stately tabernacle, which is to be the principal place of worship of the Mormon church in the North, and where thousands were worshipping.

Visions like these do not sound business-like, and are apt to be doubted; but the old Mormon leaders had alleged visions, which they say have come true, and Mr. Knight himself has had visions before which he says have turned out to be money-making dreams.

To one of these he is indebted for the money which enables him to bring his brethren of the poorer and working class here from Utah, and to give them comfort and independence.

It was a dream of a gold mine which was to be found at a certain spot; and, strange as it may seem, the mine was found, and gave him great wealth.

Four years ago the country around Lethbridge was bare. To-day there are already thousands there. Not only Mormons have come, but a great many other people, and they are increasing fast.

Four thousand acres comprises at present the Mormon property around the town of Raymond, and the returns from the preliminary crop of wheat and corn that has been grown up till now to prepare the land for its ultimate destiny have been much gratifying. Its ultimate destiny is the raising of beet roots for obtaining sugar.

In connection with this he is erecting an immense beet-root sugar factory, which will be the equal of anything of the kind now in America.

In all, by the end of next year Mr. Knight expects to have at least $1,000,000 invested in the settlement near Lethbridge.

This very same spot was a perfect wilderness a quarter of a century ago, only frequented by the Indians and buffaloes. It was right near the town of Raymond that the last great Indian battle of the Western Canadian plains was fought.

In 1876 the Crees had been on a buffalo hunt and had followed the game into the country of the Blackfeet. They met a small party of Piegans, who were an off shoot from the Blackfeet, and murdered them, not knowing how close they were to a large village of Blackfeet tepees. The inhabitants of these, however, became aware of the murders, and nearly exterminated the Crees.

Now there are virtually no Indians to be found there. There are Chinamen, however, and, strange to say, these Chinamen work as farm laborers. The Mormons have their acres of farming land some distance from the town of Raymond, but, according to Mormon custom, live within the boundaries of the town, and go to their farms each morning.

The town itself is built on the plan of a big circle, from which the principal streets radiate like the spokes of a wheel, and these streets are 122 feet wide.

The people seem all happy and contented, and there is enough land in the vicinity to accomodate the thousands which are expected within the next few years. Polygamy, so far as is known, is not indulged in.

HIS HEART PIERCED WHILE OPENING SAFE

In Compliance With the Demand of the Two Robbers

ONE OF THE FOULEST MURDERS

Clerk Deliberately Shot by Two Masked Highwaymen Who Ordered Him to Open Safe

Dayton, Ohio, November 26.—A daring hold-up, attended by the sacrifice of a human life, at the office of Allen & Eminger, who conduct a wholesale flour and feed establishment on Wayne avenue, occurred about 6 o'clock to-night.

Two young men passed through the office of the Allen & Eminger establishment, which at that time was unoccupied, and turned out the lights. Several minutes later presumably the same two men returned masked, one with a dark handkerchief and the other with a light handkerchief tied across their faces. They walked to the rear of the storeroom, where Joseph W. Shide and William A. Fischback, were at work, and, covering them with revolvers, demanded that they go with them into the office.

BARRED THE DOOR.

In the meantime Harry Brush, driver for the company, had returned from a trip and entered the office, and, divining the intention of the intruders, barred the door. The two men gruffly commanded the door to be opened, and it being done, they commanded young Shide, who was head clerk, to open the safe and turn over the money which it contained. Before he had time to reach the table where the keys had been placed one of the men fired a shot, which took effect in the left leg.

Although no resistance was offered to their commands the masked men seemed not satisfied with obtaining the money in the safe, but seemed to be controlled by a craving for human blood, and while young Shide was executing the command which they had given to open the safe one of the men fired, and the ball entered the back and pierced Shide's heart.

The robbers then turned upon William Fischback, who was with them alone in the office, and demanded that he open the safe. He promptly handed them the bunch of keys, with which they tried for a short time to effect an entrance into the safe, but failed. They then ransacked the pockets of the victim of their fiendish designs, and hurriedly left the office, obtaining as a result of their dastardly work about $30 in money. The affair was immediately reported to the police and the bloodhounds belonging to Dective Maguire were placed on the trail of the fleeing criminals.

While the two masked men were operating on the inside of the office another suspicious-looking individual was standing across the street, whom the two men are said to have joined in a short time after leaving the office. It is thought that the man was left on guard to give notice of the approach of an officer, should one appear.

Jos. W. Shide, whose life was sacrificed, was about 29 years of age, and had been employed by Allen & Eminger about five years. He was always faithful and showed such devotion to his work that when the proprietors were absent the management of the establishment was intrusted to him. He was the son of an aged and widowed mother who resides on Jones street, and who looked to him for her main support in her declining years. One married brother, Chas. W. Shide, is a member of the local police force and another brother lives in Alabama. Two sisters also reside in this city and with their aged mother and brother, are heart-broken over the sad fate that befell their brother.

THE GREAT VOLCANIC ERUPTIONS

Experience of a Missionary in Guatemala During the Eruptions

"The End of All Things Is at Hand," Wrote Missionary Secord From Guatemala During the Eruptions and Was Himself Destroyed

Omaha, Neb, November 26—Letters received in this city today from missionary C. F. Secord, formerly of Omaha, but late of Santo-Tomas, Guatemala, paint a graphic picture of the destruction and havoc wrought in that country by the volcanoes and earthquakes within the past month. Since the letters were written almost positive assurance of Mr. Secord's death has also been received here. The letter says:

"Friday, October 24.—Two volcanoes burst forth destroying a great many towns and plantations of cane and other property. Greate tones, fire, ashes and lava were thrown high in the air. For two days there was a contiguous shaking of the ground and large explosions in the bowels of the earth. Now the volcano near Lake Atitland is smoking. There are three others near which show signs of eruption. The end of all things is at hand. Luke 21. 24 and 25 is being fulfilled. The open doors are wide. Pray for us. We stay here even if all the mountains fall and the pit opened up. Corn is $10 per bushel. Santa Maria has destroyed everything for miles around and thousands are killed. It started with thunderings like cannon shots and earthquakes. Men, women, children and animals fled for their lives. Then smoke, stones and fire were belched out and the volcano's summit was veiled in dense clouds, from which flashed lightning continually and a great darkness was over all. The earth heaved like the sea in a storm. Many towns and cities were at once deserted and destroyed. We have built a dispensary and a preaching room and are not scared. The large city of Quezaltenango, which was partially destroyed by an earthquake in April, is completely destroyed and is a mass of ruins covered with ashes and lava. We are content to lay down our lives for our beloved Lord."

HOME RULE ALL ROUND FOR THE BRITISH EMPIRE

A Federation of the British Empire May be Accompanied

GREAT DIFFICULTIES MUST BE REMOVED FIRST

The Saturday Review of London Favors Closer Ties Binding the Empire

London, Nov. 26.—The detailed account of the colonial conference contained in the Blue Book issued in London shows that Mr. Chamberlain expressed to the colonial Premiers the conviction that a federation of the British Empire is within the limits of possibility. He regarded the conference itself as a first step in that direction, and the next step, he thought, should be a "council of the empire," which, though at first simply advisory, should gradually, and in a manner which he did not define, acquire executive functions. It appears that Lord Milner has advocated precisely the same scheme. The practicability of the project is denied by the Saturday Review, and an alternative plan is mooted which deserves notice, because that journal is one of the most rancorous opponents of the concession of home rule to Ireland.

To the Saturday Review the practical difficulties in the way of the "council of the empire," proposed by Mr. Chamberlain seem very considerable. While it remained advisory only, it would remain ineffective. On the other hand, the moment that it acquired executive power it would inevitably clash with the Cabinet and Parliament of the United Kingdom. Even if the people of Great Britain, devoted as they are to their historical House of Commons, could be persuaded to sanction an imperial council, which for certain purposes should override the authority of Parliament, that council would remain so long as it lacked control of the public purse, a centre of irritation and an example of anomaly. The Saturday Review takes for granted that never would the British people surrender to an imperial council the power to tax the United Kingdom. Without any power over the purse, however, the suggested council would be doomed to legislative impotence.

Is, then, imperial federation a dream? No such admission can be expected from the Saturday Review, which advocates with the utmost zeal a tightening of the ties that connect the mother country with her transmarine dependencies. It claims to have hit upon a practicable device for welding the disjected parts of the British Empire. Where, it asks, is the supposed insurmountable barrier to this election of over-sea members to the British Parliament? It holds that such large cities as Melbourne, Toronto, Johannesburg, and Auckland or the several provinces, or the Dominion of Canada and Commonwealth of Australia as wholes, might send representatives to England who would vote on all subjects not judged to be, as it were, parochial; that is to say, exclusively pertinent to the interests of the United Kingdom. In the opinion of the Saturday Review, such over-sea members would not only constitute a centre of knowledge and a bond of unity, but would have an opportunity of exerting a real and valuable influence on the course of imperial affairs.

CANADA WILL FURNISH SHIPS

But will Not Give Money to be Spent by the British Admiralty

Ottawa, Nov. 26—Speaking at a meeting held under Board of Trade auspices at which Mr. H. F. Wyatt dealt with colonial support of the navy, Sir Frederick Borden, Minister of Militia, said in part:

"The Government of this country recognized its duty, as I am quite sure the people of this country recognize their duty, in maintaining or putting themselves in a position to bear their fair share of the defence of the Empire. As to how that can best be done comes the difficulty.

"The British Government takes the view, rightly or wrongly, that the absolute control—first, last, and all the time from beginning to end—of naval defence, or of naval matters, be under the Admiralty, and that anything that has to be done by the other parts of the Empire, known as colonies, must be done in the way of a substantial contribution in hard cash to the Admiralty. Well, now, I do not hesitate to say that I dissent from that view. I say that advisedly, because that is the position which the Dominion Government have taken.

A Canadian Navy.

"We have expressed in a State paper, which is public property today, our desire and intention to do everything that we can to assist the Mother Country in the matter of defence, and to take the first step at once in the formation of the nucleus, at any rate, of a navy in this country. What that shall be I cannot exactly say. I am quite sure that some understanding can be come to by which we can do a great deal.

"Mr. Wyatt has spoken in this connection of a scheme by which the Canadian Government will be saved the expense of purchasing guns and purchasing ships. I want to say that the Canadian Government are not trying to dodge or avoid any responsibility in connection with the purchase of guns or anything else. We are quite prepared and quite able to purchase our own guns, and if I have any thing to say about it, we shall do it too. But we are not yet ready, as I said a moment ago, —and this is the crucial point, and we may as well understand it first as last—to ask the taxpayers of this country to tax themselves to hand over a sum of money, any sum of money, to anybody, even the British Admiralty, to spend without our having one single word as to the way in which that money shall be expended."

Mr. Frederick said he did not share Mr. Wyatt's fears as to Canada's liability to instant destruction. Even if what Mr. Wyatt had suggested was to be especially dreaded, the speaker had an all-abiding faith in the good common-sense of nations as well as individuals, and he believed that the greater number of nations—those especially like our neighbors to the south—who know and believed that it was best for the world that Great Britain should occupy one of the first positions as a nation—would unite and prevent such a crisis as Mr. Wyatt had suggested was likely to happen.

A League Formed.

On motion of Lt.-Col. White, seconded by Rev. Saxon Bland, the formation of an Ottawa Branch of the Navy League was decided upon, and the mover of the resolution was elected president.

Mr. Wyatt rose to point out that it would not do for Canada to rest content with defending her coasts but she should be ready to furnish battleships to operate against the enemy in time of war.

This led Sir Fredick Borden to speak for the second time, in order, as he said, that there might be a thorough understanding. There was, he thought, too much alarm entertained. When Canada sent troops to South Africa they went and fought as part of a British army. When Canada possessed ships, as some day they hoped to have, one of those ships would be sent to old Britain should the emergency arise. When that time came they would work in harmony with the Imperial authorities.

ENGLISH WRITER FEARS CANADA WILL SECEDE

Says the American Invasion of the North-West is Serious and Blames Britain

The Fortnightly Review for December publishes an alarmist article, entitled "The Foreign Invasion of Canada." The text of the article is the recent declaration of "a devoted descendant of the United Empire Loyalist" that England is driving Canada into the arms of the United States by neglect to supply the people with money for Canada's rising industries. The writer, who toured Canada last autumn, declares that Quebec Province is becoming more French than France, more Roman Catholic than any part of the world. He declares the suggestions that French-Canadians are most loyal subjects of the throne to be a mere fairy tale and says no English-speaking Canadian but laughs at stories to this effect, published in the Old Country. He quotes statistics especially furnished by Ottawa departments to prove the inevitable Americanization of the Canadian West, while Canada's dependence on New York Channels for British news is working in the same direction.

Refused Leave to Appeal.

The Privy Council today refused leave of appeal in the case of Stanley versus the People's Building and Loan Association, at London, Ontario.

Attacks St. Lawrence Route.

The Times Lloyds' correspondent makes the grounding of the Sicilian the text of disparaging remarks on St. Lawrence navigation. He says the important strandings of the present season number eleven, and the number of recent casualties severely strained the dock-repairing resources of St. Lawrence ports. Underwriters doubt whether special favorable terms will now be granted, in view of the recent disasters.

THE LOVESICK LOCKS

Amount of Business Transacted at This Lock This Season

Mr. William Macfarlane the genial lockmaster at Lovesick, was in town yesterday and called on The Times. Mr. Macfarlane says the last season was a brisk one at his lock.

The total lockages were as follows, from April 25th to Nov. 25th:—Number of steamers locked through, 313; No. of cargoes, 77; No. of rafts, 24; total, 414. The number of trips made by the steamer Ogemah through the locks during the season was 122.

WEDDING BELLS

Nuptials of Miss Clara M. Bell and Mr. F. Walsh of Keene

The St. John's Roman Catholic church, Keene, was the scene of a very pretty and well attended wedding, seemingly regardless of the severity of the weather the church was packed to standing room only. The contracting parties were Miss Clara M. Bell and Mr. F. F. Walsh of Keene.

The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Lottie Bell, while the groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. F. Walsh, of Keene.

The Rev. Father Phelan officiated, and High Mass was celebrated in honor of the newly wedded couple.

After the ceremony many friends, accompanied by Rev. Father Phelan, adjourned to the bride's home, where they partook of a most inviting wedding breakfast.

The after entertainment was one which will long be remembered and cherished by all who were present, as there were many vocal and instrumental selections rendered by the sisters of the bride, Misses Lottie and Lillian Bell and recitations by Miss Lilla Bell, of Peterborough.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was elegantly attired in a travelling suit of castor brown corduroy velvet with white lace and felt trimmings, and wore a large black picture hat, while the bridesmaid was becomingly attired in a suit of green ladies cloth, with trimmings of white, and hat to match.

The bride, who was organist of St. John church, Keene, for a number of years, was presented with an address and a purse by the choir. She was also the recipient of a large number of other beautiful presents, and the happy young couple departed on the C.P.R. at 5.10 p.m., for Toronto, where they will remain for the winter.

Our New Station Agent

Havelock Standard —Mr. W. S. Dodds local C.P.R. agent, left for Peterborough on Thursday, at which point he has been transferred. Mr. R. J. Green, of Locust Hill, will succeed Mr. Dodds here and has already entered upon his duties. In Mr. Dodds Havelock loses a most respected and energetic citizen. He is exceedingly popular with the railway men and the citizens generally. He always took a prominent part in affairs and displayed sound judgement and business acumen in all matters. While all will be sorry to say adieu yet all will join in congratulating him on his promotion.

A True Nerve Tonic

Will act, not so much directly upon the nerves as upon the digestive functions and the abundant formation of red, vitalizing blood. Nerves can't be fed on medicine. They can, however, be restored and strengthened by assimilated food. The marvelous action of Ferrozone arises from its action over the digestive and assimilative processes. When you take Ferrozone the blood is purified and strengthened, and grows rich and red. Then you grow vigorous, healthy and beautiful, ready for work, because you have the strength to do it. No tonic for the brain, blood or nerves compares with Ferrozone. Price 50c., at Druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

YOUNG'S POINT.

—Our village this past week has been undergoing quite a number of improvements in sidewalks, buildings, etc. Our pathmaster has been repairing and extending the sidewalks, which was greatly needed, and will be much appreciated when completed.

—A new driving shed is being completed at the Methodist church, and Mr. J. Reid is building an addition to his new dwelling, and several other improvements are being made in the village.

—Rev. Father Phelan is absent in Keene this week.

—Rev. Mr. Creswick has returned home after spending the past week in Toronto.

—Miss Emma Scollard has returned home after an extended visit with friends in Rochester.

—Miss Jessy Phelan, of Lakefield, is visiting friends here.

PETERBOROUGH. NOV. 27, 1902.

RAISING THE WAR CHEST

The way the American farmers are pouring into Canada to take up land might be thought to have introduced a panic on the other side. Fears are expressed that some day their fine cities may be over run by the spoiler from this side of the lakes, tempted by the loot that they hold. Hence an outcry for defensive coast defences along the great lakes and the St. Lawrence River, if Congress will provide the money.

A Washington despatch states that a great plan of fortification has been put on paper, but the board having the business in charge will not give up any information of what is intended. The information will, however, be included in the annual report of the Chief Engineer of the War Department, which will be submitted to Congress next month. Last summer General Gillespie and a staff of officers went from the Straits of Mackinac down Lake Michigan to Chicago, and located the forts to be erected. The straits connect Lakes Huron and Michigan, and are wholly within the jurisdiction of Uncle Sam, yet it is explained that "easy approaches may be made from the Canadian side." It is proposed to line these straits with fortifications and to fill them with torpedoes, in case the warships of the sanguinary foe should venture an attack.

A descent upon the ports of the lower lakes is also "considered in the war game." The Welland Canal would be made ready to be blown up to prevent the ascent of any warship of 14-foot draft, which might take the risk of making a descent upon Buffalo, Cleveland, Erie, Toledo or Sandusky, and "guns of heavy calibre will probably be mounted and submarine mines sunk at the localities mentioned."

The Washington despatch says in the event of failure to blow up the locks it would be a fortunate thing if our lake cities were defended by heavy batteries such as have been erected on the seaboard. And the big lake carriers would be converted into auxiliary cruisers, and these "would be very serviceable in harassing Canadian ports and commerce."

All this, if true, teaches us what we are to expect when the time comes to put on the war paint. In the meantime our friends mean to practice in a war of their own upon the overflowing United States Treasury. The lake ports do not relish the heavy outlays for ships and batteries on the sea coast, in which their work-people have no share. It is the "ward appropriation" system as our own cities have understood and practiced it in the past, applied to the great American nation. Each dollar expended in one part of the country where a work is necessary, has to be offset by a dollar spent on general principles somewhere else "to even up." But to get the taxpayers of the interior reconciled to these vast appropriations it is "good politics" to raise the patriotic cry. The saying, "Our cities are in danger from the British," is calculated to inflame all ill-informed minds and gain their sanction to any measure of defence however exotic, and the more costly the better for the engineering department ,and the chance for election boodle for next year.

This we take it is the true meaning of the war talk of late in American papers of even high repute. Some weeks ago an alarmist letter appeared in a great New York daily, dated from Toronto, and detailing the "startling preparations" for arming the Canadian people against the United States! It had not the least foundation in fact, but it was calculated to excite a fever of resentment, and stimulate the designs upon the War Treasury which have otherwise become evident.

With such a program on foot among our neighbors those of our politicians who indulge in the bellicose talk are but playing the game of the American campaigners who will quote the gratuitous sayings of Canadians to further their raids upon their own war chest.

—It is on record that an anthracite miner has coughed up coal dust fifteen years after leaving the mines. If the mines do not begin to "cough up" enough anthracite coal for what we need pretty soon, citizens of Peterborough will be coughing up soft coal for a decade to come.

DISTRICT NEWS

KEENE.

The roads in this vicinity are very bad at present. It is impossible to keep horses and vehicles clean that are driven over them.

—Mr. William Drummond, our tax collector, is again on the move, and property owners are warned to pay up and keep clear of arrears.

—Mr. Joseph Elmhirst, our village constable, who has been suffering from a sore leg, is, we are glad to notice, so far recovered as to be able to walk around without the aid of a stick.

—Mr. T. Wallace and Miss M. Campbell, our public school teachers, are training the children for a Christmas concert and entertainment. We trust the concert will be largely patronized, as it promises to be good.

—There is a good opening in our village for a harness maker and a tinsmith.

—Two more dogs in our village have been poisoned. We understand that means are to be used to detect the guilty wretch or wretches who belittle themselves by poisoning their neighbor's dogs.

APSLEY.

—In the spring people take the fever of moving, summer time it is boating or fishing on the back lakes, but in the fall everyone who can procure a club, rifle or shot gun hies away to the woods to kill something and our "Beaver Lodge" boys of Apsley had this latter fever bad, and they did good execution among the deer. The party consisted of Clinton Coones, commander-in-chief; T. W. Eastland, F. Builled, B. Jones, A. Smith, R. Pattison, and A. Pattison, all of Apsley, and J. W. Stewart, of Lakefield. Roy Coones, cook. The boys had a good time and secured 15 deer. Dr. Patterson met them on their way home at the head of Crab Lake and photographed the party with their deer and dogs. They have reason to be proud of their hunt, as very few parties succeeded as well. Before breaking up camp another resolution was added to the rules and regulations, viz.; Any member found guilty of enlarging too much on his prowess would be fined $17.00 or cut wood one day with a dull axe; the wood to be cut for a neighbor—and a heavier fine according to the heinousness of the crime. A few have had to comply with the rule and we hear J. W. S——t has to cut 3 1-3 days for Mr. Billy Leahy. T. W. has 3 days to put in. Applications for membership to the Beaver Club are coming in already for next year's hunt.

—A number of young ladies and gentlemen went out to the White Rock last Saturday and while there Dr. Patterson took several snap shots of that famous rock. It is well worth the trouble of climbing to the top, as one gets a splendid view of the surrounding country. To the north and west one can look for miles over an unbroken front,

"While to the south and east there lay
Extending in succession gay,
Deep waving field and pastures green
With gentle slopes and groves between."

saying, "Our cities are in dnger from of lake and mountain throughout Burleigh and Anstruther, equal to any in Ontario.

—The patrons of Apsley Cheese Factory gave their annual oyster supper Friday evening, 21st inst., which was a decided success. The concert advertised for that night did not take place, but rather than disappoint the many who waited, Mr. P. Coones kindly gave an exhibition of some very good views of local celebrities and places with his magic lantern.

—Tommy has moved into his new house and will soon be settled once more.

—It is not necessary to make any remarks about the roads as they are at present, it would only lead to profanity.

—There is every prospect of a brisk trade here this winter. Messrs. Tait and Lillycrap are buying logs, and jobbers will be busy both for them and the Rathbun Company.

—The electors are taking a lively interest in the referendum, and a large vote will likely be polled.

—It might be encouraging for you to know, now the cold weather is coming on, that you can buy good maple wood around here for $2.00 per cord. What are you going to do about it? Build a railroad and get cheap wood and many other things you require, move back to Apsley, or stay in town and pay your nice $7.00 a cord? But I think a progressive town like yours might make a push towards a railroad here. Try it.

—Our blacksmith was seen to be acting very strangely while the boys were at Wolf Lake. Dr. Bell was consulted and after a careful examination of the patient said it was a very severe attack of hunter's fever, so Jim borrowed two dogs and in company with a hunter from the north struck off for the wilds of Anstruther to kill several deer and a few bears just for fun and recreation. But, alas! he was doomed to disappointment, as on the first morning out he stationed his companion on several watches while he started the dogs, and if no one has not killed the deer out Haliburton way, both it and the dogs are running still, as they have not been seen by Jim since. So he came home a firm believer in a vegetable diet, and says some people may like venison, but he prefers cabbage.

word. It would not be true to say I am not afraid of Lionel Macaire, for I am—horribly afraid. And I hate him, and shudder at him. But I do believe that I shall find protection from him."

"If ever a girl deserved such protection, it's you," cried Dick. "But listen: I was going to say that I'd tell you not to go in spite of everything if it weren't for Von Zellheim. He'll be here at Macaire's to-night. I know that."

"Baron von Zellheim!" repeated Winifred, bitterly, giving her lost lover the full title which he claimed. "What help can his presence give me? It only makes it all a thousand times worse that he should see me here in the house of the man he was bribed to aid in hunting me down."

"Winifred, I swear to you that Von Zellheim never did that," Dick asserted. "You must trust him. He's true as steel."

"So you once said of his master," retorted the girl, stung to desperation. "Oh, if this is all you have to tell me, let me go and get this horrible night over quickly—however it is to end."

Dick caught her arm and held her back when she would have fled up the three marble steps that led to the door of old green bronze. "You must hear me," he ejaculated. "It was all my fault that you distrusted Von Zellheim. I'll stake my life he'd have killed Macaire rather than be his friend if he'd guessed what a villain he was. He didn't even know that you and Macaire were more than the merest acquaintances — I'd swear that. If you had seen him, half a dozen words of explanation would have made everything right. But you refused; he couldn't understand why, or what he had done to offend you, and he was half mad. He's been a changed man since—older and graver in his ways. If I'd chosen I could have brought a reconciliation about, but I didn't want Von Zellheim to know what you thought of Macaire. If he did know, I was certain there'd be no end of a row, and I'd lose my chance as secretary. I couldn't give that up. And I was so sure, you see, that you were mistaken about Macaire."

"To keep your place you let me insult the man I loved!" cried Winifred. "You let me break my heart; you spoilt my life. Yet you are not ashamed to call on me to save you."

"For Heaven's sake, Winnie, don't look at me, don't speak to me like that! I am ashamed—I'm in the dust with shame. And I didn't dream you cared for Von Zellheim except as a friend. If I had—I hope I'd have been decent enough to do differently. But it's too late for that now. And I see I've ruined myself with you. Do as you like. Don't go into the house. I'll run away—be off somewhere, I don't know where—and escape from Macaire's anger when he finds that he's been tricked."

"No. I will go in—Heaven help me!" said Winifred, with a breaking voice.

"You will? Heaven bless you, then. But—some time, before long, I hope, Von Zellheim will be here. He doesn't know that you are to be in the house; but he wrote, sending me his address, and I wired, telling him that he must come if he would save me from shame. Already he has been helping me—and he will be here to-night without fail. I'm as sure of it as if I had his promise. You'll trust him now, Winnie, won't you?"

"If I have accused him falsely, he will never forgive me," said the girl, hopelessly. And then, without another word to her brother, she went up the steps and lifted the mailed glove which formed a knocker.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Nero's Dinner-Party.

Instantly the doors flew open. Winifred saw a great hall, blazing with lights, which dazzled her eyes after the darkness. A footman in purple and gold livery showed her to a corridor branching off the main hall, and there she was met by a maid, who took her into a room which at first glance seemed walled with mirrors. Everywhere Winifred saw her own reflection—a slim little figure in a plain, long gray cloak, looking strangely incongruous against a background of such magnificence.

The maid helped to remove the cloak, and Winifred was thankful to see a collection of exquisite wraps belonging to other women. One of her fears had been either that she was to dine with Macaire alone, or that she would find herself the only woman among a crowd of men in the fast, reckless set which Macaire was said to lead. Courage came back to her at sight of these dainty evening wraps which suggested the inner heart of Paris.

She left the mirrored dressing-room, and gave herself again to a footman's guidance. Never had Winifred seen so marvelous a house, but she was scarcely conscious of admiration or surprise. Her nerves were tensely keyed for what might be coming.

"What name?" enquired the big footman, with a veiled glitter of impertinence under supercilious lids.

"Miss Winifred Gray," the girl answered mechanically, and then wished that she had refused to give any name at all.

A door was thrown open, and a chatter of voices suddenly buzzed in her ears. They were not sweet, gently modulated voices, but loud and vulgar in every note, though they were the accents of women.

The air was heavy with the scent of lilies, almost deadly in their keen sweetness. The room, which was all white and gold and palest pink, was decorated in the style of Louis Quatorze, and Winifred remembered how she had heard that each room in Macaire's town house was furnished after the fashion of a different nation and period.

Before her mind had had time to receive any other definite impression, save that there were a number of men and women in the room, the latter gorgeously dressed and blazing with diamonds, Macaire himself came forward, holding out his hand.

"We've been waiting for you," he said. "I'd begun to be afraid that you weren't coming after all." And this sentence he spoke with meaning.

"I had promised, and I never break my word," answered Winifred, haughtily, trying in vain to avoid his hand, which pounced upon and imprisoned hers like a hawk seizing a dove. "But you need not have waited for me."

"What!" exclaimed Macaire. "Not wait for the guest of the evening? Perhaps you didn't realize that this little dinner is being given in your honor? I've invited friends who have been especially anxious to meet you ever since last December, when you were playing Maneppa."

"I never did play Maneppa," Winifred answered him in a clear, distinct voice, that could be heard at the other end of the large room.

"Didn't you? Oh, I beg your pardon.

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company.

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are :—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey :—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4.05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5.23
	100.00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 1350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles ; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows :—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4.00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows :—

	ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902, to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2.70
July 1st, 1903, " " 1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904, " " 1905	1.65	1.65
July 1st, 1905, " " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906, " " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows :—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6½ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000 00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000.00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to ... $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is ... $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is ... $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

TROUBLE IN CUBA BETWEEN THE RACES

The Negro Population are Likely to Go into Rebellion

ABOUT ONE THIRD IN NUMBER

And are Under a Clever Leader—President Palma's Difficult Work

Havana, Nov. 26. — It appears that Cuba has a negro question among its many questions. The negro has the same right of suffrage in Cuba as the whites, and the negroes and mulattoes together constitute about 32 per cent. of the total population of a little over 1,500,000. They are complaining of the treatment they get from the whites. They say that, while they did most of the fighting with Spain and most of the suffering during the war, it is extremely hard now to have the color line drawn upon them. They declare that they are not getting their share of the offices, and that the whites are making social distinctions on account of color. President Palma proposes holding a number of receptions this winter. If he invites negroes to them, it is said, the best classes of white society of Havana will refuse to attend. If the negroes are not invited it is expected that they will cause the government infinite trouble. The negroes are led by Senor Gomez, a mulatto, who is one of the ablest men of either race in the island, and who insists upon full social and political rights for the negroes. He is said to be a strong and brilliant writer, and promises to be a good-sized thorn in President Palma's side. The negroes say they are not asking for their rights, but are demanding them, and purpose to enforce their demands.

If the negroes of Cuba rebel against the whites, as there is talk that they will, perhaps the United States will have to do some more intervening. Cuba has had a strange and troubled past. Her future doesn't look as promising as it might.

FOR NICARAGUA CANAL

Secretary Hay Begins Negotiations With Nicaragua and Costa Rica

Washington, Nov. 26—In consequence of the attitude of the Colombian Government with regard to the terms of the treaty to grant the United States the right to construct the Panama Canal, Secretary Hay, by direction of the President, has begun informal negotiations with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica which have for their object the conclusion of a tentative canal treaty, to be submitted to the Senate if the Colombian Government does not show a more liberal disposition.

Mr. Hay has had conferences in the subject with Senor Corea, the Minister of Nicaragua, and Senor Calvo, the Minister of Costa Rica. He was closeted for a long time in the diplomatic reception room of the State Department today. Both the Central American countries are extremely anxious that the Nicaragua canal shall be built and are willing to make very liberal concessions to the United States. It is expected that Mr. Hay will enter into agreements with Nicaragua and Costa Rica by which the two countries will bind themselves to make canal treaties with the United States along the lines laid down in the protocols.

There has been no change in the virtual deadlock that has been caused in the Panama negotiations by the Colombian Government to grant the United States complete control over the territory through which it is proposed to dig the canal.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The complements of the warships of to-day are approaching those of the old three-deckers of Nelson's time. The British armored cruiser Drake, which will go into commission early in January, will carry 900 officers and men. Our California class of armored cruisers will have 777 officers and men when the complements are full. In the old days, when sanitation was unknown, ships much smaller than are used now carried as many men as the largest now afloat, and sometimes even more. The British Ville de Paris of 1795, of 2332 tons, carried 850 men; the Commerce de Marseille, a prize, carried 875 on a tonnage of 2747. In the middle of the seventeenth century the first rates of the English Navy carried from 710 to 815 men, though the largest ship of the rate was of only 1605 tons. Nelson's 11-gun ship, the Victory, carried more than 1,000 in her complement at Trafalgar.

THE MAD MULLAH

The Mad Mullah has method in his madness. A story is told in the English papers of how he worked one of these "miracles" which drew many waverers to his banner. An English man-of-war was sent to demonstrate off the coast, and at night threw a searchlight on to the jungle covered mountains. Abdullah was in hiding there, and, knowing from his visits to Aden what it was that his followers hailed as a new star, told them that the light was seeking him. When the electric rays actually flooded his encampment he cried in triumph; "Will you deny now that I am under the eye of God? The Somali fell on their knees, beat the earth with their foreheads, and replied; "Thou art truly the Blest, the Chosen, the Mullah, the people belong to thee. We place ourselves Master. Our goods, our existence, our entirely at the disposition of thy will."

The Berlin Trip

The Times is requested to state htat all who desire to accompany the deputation to Berlin tomorrow to visit the Beet Sugar Factory in that town may do so. Return tickets are only $5.70. A special car has been secured for the party. The train will leave the Grand Trunk station at 8.30, returning on Saturday.

Information Bureau

A Bureau of Information in regard to the referendum has been opened in the old post office block, George street, by a number of the men of the town. Mr. Geo. Sawyer is in charge of the rooms and will be glad to give any information regarding who are entitled to vote, and how to mark the ballots, etc.

Pace in Reading.

A common and trivial excuse given by those who read little is that they have no time for reading. One may have no time for eating or sleeping, but hardly no time to make love or to read. It is good will, concentration, and the habit of despatch, not leisure or unlimited opportunity, which have always performed the greatest wonders in both of these useful pursuits. Many persons in mature life are conscious of a gentle and luxurious sentiment in favor of reading, which comes to nothing because they do not know how to read. With all the good-will in the world, they lack concentration and the habit of despatch. The good-will was not applied early enough, or not applied at all to any other end than the lazy diversion of a moment. This naturally resulted in the formation of the newspaper habit, by which I do not mean simply the habit of reading newspapers, but the habit of mind which makes it possible for men to spend an evening in going through motions. There is no more reason for spending two hours in reading the newspaper than in having one's boots blacked. Some people never make their way into the great Establishment of Letters farther than the vestibule, where they spend their lives contentedly playing marbles with the hall-boys. Of course we do not call the newspaper worthless simply because some other things are worth more. The best reading is both intensive and extensive; one reads a little of everything, and a great deal of some things. The good reader takes all reading to be his province. Newspapers, periodicals, books old and new, all present themselves to him in their proper perspective; they are all grist to his mill, but they do not go into the same hopper or require the same process. On the contrary, one of the main distinctions of the clever reader is that without varying as to intensity, he varies almost indefinitely as to pace. This power of reading flexibly comes mainly, of course, with practice. For those who have lacked an early experience of books, the manipulation of them is never likely to become the perfect and instinctive process of adjustment which it should be. People often achieve a certain degree of education and refinement late in life, but seldom, I think, the power of the accomplished reading man. It is simply not to be expected. An adult who takes up the violin may get much amusement and profit from his instrument, but he cannot hope to master it. A certain increase of facility, however, the belated reader may surely expect to gain from some sort of observance of this simple principle of adjustment.

This anxious but unskilled reader is too likely to have a set gait, so many words to the minute or lines to the hour. An essay, an editorial, a chapter in a novel or in the Bible, a scientific article, a short story, if they contain the same number of words, take up just the same amount of this misguided person's time. No wonder reading becomes an incubus to him, with the appalling monotony of its procession of printed words filing endlessly before him. He really has time enough, if he knew how to make use of it. Eben Holden keeps him busy for a week or more; it should be read in a few hours. He plods methodically through Sir Walter, and finds him slow; the happy reader who can get Quentin and his Isabelle satisfactorily married in six hours does not. The trained reader readjusts his focus for each objective. Milton may be read in words or lines, Macaulay in sentences, Thackeray in paragraphs, Conan Doyle in pages. The eye, that is, readily gains the power of taking in words in groups instead of separately. How large a group the glance can manage varies with the seriousness of the subject. With the same degree of concentration, eye and mind will take care of a page of the "Prisoner of Zenda" as easily as they can absorb a line of Macbeth, or one of Fitzgerald's quatrains.

Of course this disposes of the indolent lolling style of reading—or rather makes a rare indulgence of it. When one occasionally comes upon the novel of his heart, or the poem he has waited for, he may well afford to [illegible] it at his luxurious leisure, [illegible] labor by dilatoriness. But as a rule the widely reading man is not an indolent person. Not that he is to be always keeping his nose in a book. By regulating his pace, he not only covers an astonishing amount of ground in reading, but makes room for other things. He knows how to get the most for his time, that is all. The bee does not eat the flower to get the honey out of it. The eye of the skilled reader acts like a sixth sense, directing him to the gist of the matter, in whatever form it may appear. Twenty minutes yields all that there is for him in the book which his neighbor, knowing that it would mean a week's spare hours, is careful to avoid.

This, it may be said, sounds very much like an advocacy of skimming. Skimming and rapid reading are different processes, but skimming is at times a good thing, too; even skipping becomes, on occasion, a sacred duty. We may go a step farther, for skimming implies cream, and skipping, a foothold somewhere; and many books deserve neither of these less and least complimentary modes of treatment. The eye brushes a page or two, and the mind is hardly called in to assist in a damnatory verdict which is informal, but summary. The experienced reader, in short, is an artist, and, like other artists, attains his highest powers only when he has learned what to subordinate, to slight, even to omit. The poor fellow whose conscience will not let him refuse an equally deliberate consideration to every six inches of black and white which comes in his way may be an excellent husband and father, a meritorious lawyer or merchant, and a model citizen; he is certainly not a good reader.—"Contributors' Club."

An Age of Scepticism.

"In my young days," said the Moro chief, bitterly, "everybody believed that a man who fell in battle had a passport to heaven." "And is it not so now?" "Evidently not. I have seen heretics skulking behind rocks and throwing away first-class chances of getting shot."—"Puck."

Sis Hopkins—Mis' Lummis, ma wants t' know 'f you can let her have a cup o' sugar, two eggs, 'n' a few raisins, 'n' some flour. Oh, yes!—'n' a little butter. Mrs. Lummis—Well, I never! Sis Hopkins, you go home 'n' tell your mother I said if she'd wait till I had time t' make it, she could come over 'n' take the cake.—Philadelphia "Bulletin."

A Photographic Introduction.

Many years ago, when tintypes first came into general use, the booth where pictures were made "while you wait" was the center of a large crowd at every county fair and popular resort. An old-time photographer tells an experience he had long ago, before the secrets of the camera were known to everybody.

He had set up a tent at a county fair, and was trying to drum trade. He stood outside his tent, calling in true hawker fashion the merits of his pictures. The people who gathered around were interested and curious, but somewhat in awe of the little black box inside the tent. Finally the photographer thought he might set the sheep to running by singling out one of the crowd and taking his picture free. Standing near each other were a young man and a young woman. Thinking that they would like to be taken together, and that the two would have more courage to face the camera than a lone victim, the photographer called out:

"That gentleman right there and that lady, come inside and I'll give you pictures in two minutes, free of charge!"

The two looked at each other, grinned, and finally came inside the tent.

"Stand right there," said the photographer. "That's it. Now hold still a minute. There you are. Now wait till I finish 'em up."

In a few minutes he handed them each a tintype in a pink paper frame. They looked at the pictures curiously. Then the young woman blushed and her companion grinned and tittered.

"Like 'em?" asked the photographer, briskly, thinking of possible customers in the crowd outside.

"Waal," said the man, slowly, "it looks like her, and I guess it looks like me, but ye see, I didn't know and I guess she didn't know we was goin' to be in the same picture."

"Thought you'd like 'em that way," answered the photographer. "Pleasant souvenir of your visit to the fair together."

"Waal, yes, but you see we didn't come together. I never seen her before."

Then the two snickered, and the photographer bowed them out as quickly as he could.

That year he did a good business, and at the next fair he set up his booth again. One day a young couple came in and greeted him with smiles of doubtful recognition. It was the young man and woman of the year before.

"How do you do?" cried the photographer. "I—I see you know each other now."

"Yes," answered the man, looking sheepishly at the girl. "My folks know some folks of hers over to Hopkins, and when they seen her picture they reco'nized it. An' that's how we got acquainted."

"I'm very glad," said the photographer.

"So'm I; ain't you, Lizzie?"

"Yes," said Lizzie, shyly.

When Buying Mining Stock Buy the Best

AN INVESTMENT IN THE

Pitkin Gold Belt Mining and Reduction Company

Which is Safe and Sure of Quick Returns, may Bring an Enormous Return at any Moment. It has the Possibilities of Rivaling the Great Mines of the Past.

This Company has a shaft on a true fissure vein, in the centre of the Gunnison Gold Belt, Colorado, which is the "Mother" lode or vein, which has produced 85 per cent. more gold than the total output of the Cripple Creek district.

This Mine is no Prospect. Nor is it Waiting on Your Subscription to Buy Machinery or for Development.

After a careful examination by experts, Joseph M. Bradley, M. E. and Mr. George Arlett, A. I. M. E., Amalgamated Copper Company's expert in Chihuahua, Mexico, they advised the purchase of the property. The property had shallow development upon it, showing two ore shoots from which smelting ore had been shipped to the Buena Vista Smelter.

The Company purchased and paid for the latest improved machinery and has put a shaft down 250 feet and intend to carry it down 1000 feet. On the 150 foot level 200 feet of development has been made and an ore shoot has been encountered and blocked out for 50 feet, carrying values in gold from 2 to 6 ounces or $40 to $120 per ton. The cost of mining, hauling, freight and smelters charges will be between $12 and $15 per ton.

Ed. McCarthy & Co., bankers, guarantee a shipping mine of smelting ore ranging from 2 to 6 ounces in gold, or $40 to $120 per ton, by January 1st, 1903, or all funds will be returned to subscribers upon presentation of receipt issued by said bank.

Also to prospective purchasers of $500 worth of stock we are offering a free trip to Colorado and return. You investigate first and purchase afterward. Could you expect anything fairer than this?

The capital stock of this company is $1,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares of stock at $1 each, full paid and non-assessable. A portion of the treasury stock is now offered at

Oil Strike in Kent County

(Press Despatch)

Chatham, Nov. 12—There is as yet little new in the oil situation, which is the one topic of conversation. Accounts of the Raleigh well's capacity have not been one whit exaggerated. Oil men are swarming here, some coming even from California and great expectations are entertained as to future explorations. A company which has fourteen wells at Northwood, six miles from here, on the line of the Grand Trunk, hold leases for lands adjacent to the gusher, and will begin to bore at once in their territory. The gusher is situated on the apex or crown of a sudden elevation or dome in the rock formation, and oil experts say this is a sure sign of permanency and the reason for the unusual pressure manifested.

Mainly About People.

The "Courier de Paris" relates that a party of men, sitting in front of a boulevard cafe, were recently approached by a man who had a clarionet in his hand, and who said: "Gentlemen, excuse me, I have to make my living, but I suppose you would rather give me a sou not to hear me." They took the hint. He repeated this performance several times, till, one day, one of the men said he felt like hearing a tune, and asked him to play. "I am sorry," said the man with the clarionet, "but I cannot play a note."

George Douglas, the author of "The House With the Green Shutters," says that once he met Froude in the house of an Oxford don. "It's astonishing," the historian remarked to Douglas, "it's astonishing! You're the living image of my dear friend, the late John Conington." Douglas said he was glad to hear he was so like the great authority on Virgil. For a moment Froude's thoughts seemed to be busy with the sacred past. "Conington," he then added, dreamily, "was the ugliest man I ever clapped an eye on."

A beginner in newspaper work in a Southern town who occasionally "sent stuff" to one of the New York dailies picked up last summer what seemed to him a "big story." Hurrying to the telegraph office he "queried" the telegraph editor: "Column story on so and so. Shall I send?" The reply was brief and [illegible] to the enthusiastic [illegible]. "Send 600 words," was all it said. "Can't be told in less than 1,200," he wired back. Before long the reply came: "Story of creation of world told in 600. Try it."

Several stories are told of Tennyson's thoughtless speeches. "What fish is this?" he once asked his hostess where he was dining. "Whiting," she replied. "The meanest fish there is," he remarked, quite unconscious that he could have wounded anyone's feelings. Yet his kindness of heart was such that when his partridge was afterward given him almost raw he ate steadily through it, for fear his hostess might be vexed. On one occasion Tennyson was very rude to Mrs. Brotherton, a neighbor at Freshwater. The next day he came to her house with a great cabbage under each arm. "I heard you liked these, so I brought them," he said, genially. It was his idea of a peace-offering.

In a speech in London the other day, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman told an admirable story of the advice given by an Englishman, a Scotchman, and an Irishman, respectively, to a gentleman whose servant was constantly breaking articles in the household. The Englishman, in his blunt, honest way, said to the employer: "Oh, get rid of him—dismiss him." The Scotchman's advice was, "Stop the money out of his wages." "But," said the master, "he breaks more than his wages amount to." "Then," said the Irishman, "raise his wages."

An extremely stout, good-tempered Englishwoman once contrived to wedge herself into a gallery seat at the Adelphi Theater that would have accommodated a person of ordinary size, to the unconcealed annoyance of a smartly dressed youth next to her. She began to peel an orange, and the youth, with a gesture of complaint, removed his silk hat fussily to a safer position. "I suppose," said the good-tempered woman, "that you'd rather have had a gentleman sitting by the side of you, sir, wouldn't you?" The youth replied, snappishly, in the affirmative. "Ah!" said the woman, thoughtfully, "so would I!"

United States Senator Perkins says that once when he was a sailor, a tremendous storm came up, and it looked as if the vessel were doomed to go under. In the midst of the excitement a minister, who was one of the passengers, asked the captain if he could have prayers. "Oh, never mind about the prayers," said the captain; "the men are swearing too hard to stop for prayers, and as long as you hear them swearing," added the captain, "there is no danger." The minister went back to his cabin. A little while later, when the storm grew worse, the preacher went on deck to see what the sailors were doing. Then he went back to his wife. "Thank God!" he said, fervently, "those men are still swearing."

Lord Spencer of Althorp, one of the greatest of book collectors, was at home only in his own field. One day, in browsing about Bond street, London, he went into the shop of a dealer in bric-a-brac. The dealer, who knew him by sight, said, persuasively: "Here is a fine bit of pottery which your lordship really ought to have, and you shall have it very cheap—only two guineas." So Lord Spencer bought it and took it home, and set it in a high place. One day a connoisseur of china paid him a visit, and Lord Spencer showed his bargain. "What did you give for it?" asked the connoisseur. "Two guineas," answered Spencer, rather proudly. "H'm!" said the connoisseur. "At that price the marmalade should have been included." "What do you mean?" "Why, that precious piece of yours is nothing more nor less than a shilling marmalade pot, with a green thistle painted on it."

Had a Wooden Leg

A tramp with a wooden leg appeared before the Police Magistrate yesterday morning charged with vagrancy. It is lucky for him that the Police Magistrate has a good supply of wood on hand or he might have lost his leg. Owing to this he was given leg bail, and invited to seek pastures new.

Santos-Dumont Answers His Critics.

M. Santos-Dumont has at last answered his critics. He publishes in the "North American Review" for June his first article on aerial locomotion, and, despite the criticism of scientists, he makes good his case of the air-ship against the aeroplane. Most of the criticisms have been to the effect that Santos-Dumont has been on the wrong track; that no balloon—an apparatus lighter than the air, at the mercy, more or less, of the winds of heaven—could ever become a commercial success; that though he could guide it to a certain extent, he could never be sure of reaching any point; and, finally, that the birds of the air, being themselves heavier than the air, moved by means of dirigible planes—wings—and were held in space by means of locomotion, which went to prove that similar human machines could alone be successful. That was and is in the main good reasoning. But Santos-Dumont says: "Beginning with this year, I shall attempt to apply in the air the principles of aviation properly so called, in subjecting my air-ships to a continual evolution. In the same proportion that I increase the extent of the inclined planes symmetrically disposed at the right and left, I shall reduce the surface of the envelope of varnished silk, and, consequently, the volume of hydrogen relatively to the power of the motor. Thus I expect gradually to diminish the role of the hydrogen, making secondary its importance, which is now primary, and even completely doing away with the use of this gas. The air-ship will then have become an aeroplane in the absolute sense of the word, and I hope that some day we shall see it such. That day is undoubtedly not far distant, but the flying-machine will be achieved only by the way of evolution, by making the air-ship pass through a series of transformations analogous to the metamorphoses by which the chrysalis becomes the winged butterfly. My air-ship, which raises itself by pushing back the air, has already done better than the chrysalis, whose elongated form it resembles. It may be that very soon nothing will prevent it from freeing itself completely from its cocoon of silk lined with hydrogen, and from being wholly comparable to a butterfly."

In other words, he began his experiments with a large balloon and small motors and planes. Gradually from practical experience in the air he reduces the size of the balloon, the quantity of hydrogen, and enlarges the planes and motors, and he says he has carried this far enough to prove to his own satisfaction that it is only a question of time and careful study to reduce the balloon to a minimum and the aeroplane principle to a maximum. That sounds right; that is the method of the great entity which laid down the laws of evolution; that is the survival of the fittest. And meantime the great aeronaut is experimenting in the air and not in the laboratory, which in such evolution contains the essence of ultimate success.

Dowie's Crisis.

"Harper's Weekly."

"Dr. John Alexander Dowie, self-acclaimed reincarnation of the Prophet Elijah, banker and publisher, divine healer and absolute owner of a town with more than 4,000 residents, General Overseer of the Catholic Church in Zion, lace manufacturer, and founder and head of the Theocratic party, former Presbyterian preacher and present millionaire, who is said to draw regularly every week one-tenth of the total income of more than thirty thousand families in the United States and other parts of the world, has apparently reached a crisis in his career, which has so far been a remarkable demonstration of the power possible to a man who combines shrewd business methods with the audacity and fierce earnestness of a religious fanatic. The cardinal doctrine of Dowie's creed is divine healing through the prayers of himself and of his apostles. By preaching this doctrine and by denouncing physicians and all drugs as allies of the devil, he has brought about him hundreds of invalids, some of them bringing with them considerable sums of money. Two weeks ago his only daughter, Esther, was terribly burned by flames resulting from the overturning of an alcohol-lamp. Her wounds were dressed by one of Dowie's elders, after which the General Overseer and his chief men spent the whole day in prayers about her bedside. At nightfall the young woman was suffering terrible agony, and at last paternal love overcame the scruples of her father, and he sent for one of the despised physicians. The physician who responded says that from the first there could have been no hope for Miss Dowie's recovery. She died during the evening. And now the thousands who actually look upon the gray-bearded old Scotch-Australian as more than human, and who have listened to his terrible denunciations of medical men as words inspired, are asking what they shall think of his own act of heresy in the hour of personal distress. Dowie himself slipped off to his summer home, leaving behind him his apostles and a number of phonographic records of his own "inspired speech," to which 5,000 followers, gathered in the Chicago Auditorium on Sunday afternoon, listened midway between awe and incredulity. Within recent months Dowie and the great religious-business enterprises he has built up have received several other severe shocks. By a court decision he was forced to pay more than $100,000 to an English manufacturer he had persuaded to take up his residence in the holy city of "Zion," located forty miles north of Chicago, on the shore of Lake Michigan, and more recently there was a severe outbreak of smallpox in the Divine Healing College which he has established in Michigan avenue. Whatever the outcome of the present crisis, it is certain that Dowie and the strange and fanatic following he has built up in ten years are worthy of the serious study of sociologists.

"Mamma," said the fair bather, "declares that my bathing dress has not enough goods in it." "Your mamma is mistaken," asserted the young man; "it covers your shoulders completely, does it not?"

Now is the Last Chance to Buy the St. Paul & Sunset Oil COMPANY'S STOCK AT 35 CENTS

California Oil Stocks Have Paid Millions in Dividends

KERN COUNTY (SUNSET DISTRICT) OIL COMPANIES PAID
ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS IN AUGUST ALONE

MORGAN IN THE OIL INDUSTRY--NEW YORK FINANCIER AT THE HEAD OF A $20,000,000 COMPANY TO EXPLOIT CALIFORNIA FIELDS

Bakersfield, Cal., Sept. 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan is about to identify himself with the oil business in California. On October 12, or a few days later, surveyors will be put into the field, and will run lines to the ocean from Sunset, Coaling, McKittrick, Midway and Kern River fields to determine by which route it is most feasible to transport oil to tide water. The surveys will run over the coast range at a number of points, and also will go down the San Joaquin valley parallel with the line of the Standard.

A company having a capitalization of $5,000,000 has been organized for the construction of lines, pumping stations, storage tanks, and the like. Mr. Morgan and his associates have also formed a separate company, capitalized at $20,000,000, half of which will be invested in proven ground and the other half turned into a reserve fund.

It is stated that the Morgan syndicate will be prepared to handle 2,000,000 barrels the first year, and will increase that amount at the rate of 1,000,000 a year until the whole demand of the market is met.

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY own and control a large tract of absolutely oil proven asphalt land in the very heart of the best oil producing land of Kern County, California, the district where flowing wells are situated. We have a bed of Liquid Asphalt underlying a portion of our lands. Our property is situated right at Sunset Station. A new line of railway is surveyed and will be constructed in a very short time, putting us not only in touch with Eastern cities, but in touch with tide-water. This, in addition to the railroad facilities we now have. Remember that we own our land—it is paid for and entirely free from debt.

ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL CO.'S GIGANTIC TRACT

will be developed and should prove a formidable rival for the new company.

PROFESSOR DR. RUD J. SCHIMPER, Analytical and Expert Chemist, of St. Paul, makes the following statement relative to the composition, what can be produced and the estimated profits of the Sunset Crude Oil. A copy of the original certificate can be seen at the office of the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co., which is in substance as follows:

"This is to certify that the undersigned, Dr. Rudolph J. Schimper, Chemist expert, member of Parisian Academy, according to analysis made from the crude oil furnished me by the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company, I find the following valuable products and with each beg to submit my estimate of its value:

1. LIQUID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 1,800 lbs. of liquid rubber, value of which is from 25c. per lb. and up. (Estimated value $450.00.)
2. SOLID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls) will produce 1,700 lbs. of solid rubber, value of which is from 50c. upwards. (Estimated value $450.00.)
3. FUEL BRIQUETTES—2000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 2,000 lbs. (1 ton) of fuel briquettes, which, according to government tests made, is equivalent to two tons of best anthracite coal. (Estimated value $22.00)
4. ASPHALTUM—2,000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce ½ ton of asphaltum, value $25 to $35 per ton. 25 gal. of lubricating oil, value 50c. per gal. and upward. 40 gal. illuminating oil, value 10c per gal. and up. 60 gal. of distilled oil, value 5c. per gal. and upward. (Estimated value $54.50.)
5. SOAP—2000 lbs. (1 ton) of crude oil and filling will produce over 2,800 lbs. of soap, value 3c. per lb. and upward. (Estimated value $60.00.)

In my opinion many other valuable products can be obtained from the oil of that famous field.
Respectfully, DR. R. J. SCHIMPER, Chemist Expert."

THIS goes to show the immense profits that will accrue from our products when refined. We expect to commence Building Our Refinery in the very near future. The sale of the next allotment of stock will be made for that purpose. The largest flowing wells in California were brought in adjoining our property and their stock was taken off the market. We employ the best drillers who report rapid progress on our wells and we expect to bring in gushers equal, if not to excel any in the Sunset field. Our General Manager, Superintendent and Drillers, all are experienced oil men. The officers of our company are all thorough, competent and efficient men who have always made a success of their undertaking in life and who will see that the welfare of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company is furthered, portected and promoted to the most advantageous extent possible.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS SHOULD BE PAID STOCKHOLDERS.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS should be paid to the stockholders of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company when their property is fully developed, their refinery equipped and in full operation. ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS was paid by Kern County Oil Companies during the month of August alone.

SIX MILLION BARRELS is the consuming capacity of the Southern Pacific Railway engines, which are now equipped for burning oil. Outside of this consider other railway lines, smelters, factories, steamships, stationery engines, which are all heavy consumers of fuel oil and last but not least, hotels and private dwellings are falling in line with the procession in the use of fuel oil.

A GOOD REASON WHY YOU Should Invest in the stock of St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company. More fortunes have been made in oil than any other business. Consider the immense amount of money the Standard Oil Company has made for its fortunate stockholders, and the California oil companies have done better in proportion to their capitalization than the Standard Oil Company. Here is what $100 has accomplished for those who invested that amount in the following California companies in the beginning of their career:

Home Whittier $1,000 on an investment of $100.
Kern returned $2,200 on an investment of $100.
Peerless returned $1,800 on an investment of $100.
Dillon returned $2,500 on an investment of $100.
New York returned $30,000 on an investment of $100.
Union returned $150,000 on an investment of $100.
Home returned $50,000 on an investment of $100.

THERE is no reason in the world why the St. Paul and Sunset Company's oil holdings and property, when developed and handled, should not bring like returns

CONTRARY to the general supposition the earth is the repository of all mineral wealth. When it is known and demonstrated beyond a question of a doubt where its wealth reposes and you put your money up to take it out, your money is invested. Hence you are an investor, not a speculator. A proven oil producing property does not draw its profits from the people but creates new wealth. It is therefore an investment.

Wonderful Increase in Value of Oil Stocks.

The rapid rise in the value of shares in some oil companies will be seen from the following table:	Original price per share	Present Market price
Black Mountain Oil Co	$ .05	$ 1.50
Central Oil Co	.30	1.80
Home Oil Co. Whittier	.25	2.50
Monte Cristo Co	.10	2.80

Hanford Oil Co	2.00	120.00
Krevenhagen Oil Co	.10	200.00
Columbia Oil Co	100.00	400.00
Union Oil Co	1.00	1500.00
Home Oil co	100.00	[illegible]

The time will come in the near future when stock in St. Paul and Sunset Oil Co., should bring prices equal to the last.

STATE OF ANARCHY IN WESTERN STATES

Armed Men to be Sent With All Passenger Trains

PLAN TO PREVENT HOLD-UPS

Oft-Repeated Robberies Have Caused Adoption of Drastic Measures for Defence

Chicago, November 2.—Officials of railroad and express companies are much alarmed by the increasing prevalence of train robberies, and are planning drastic measures to remedy the evil. The plan most in favor is to send well-known, resolute men heavily armed, with each train. No fewer than 11 train robberies have occurred in the last year, and in each instance the thieves made way with their booty.

The Northwestern Road and the American Express Company suffered a loss estimated anywhere from $50,000 to $100,000 in the Tower "W" hold-up.

The hold-up last night was the third that has occurred on the Rock Island within a year. July 8 one of the company's express trains was robbed in Texas, and October 8 one more hold-up occurred in Oklahoma I. T.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway has fared much worse than the rest in train robberies. On April 5, at St. Joseph, Mo., one of its trains was held-up, and May 27 another attempt to rob the same train was made at the same point. August 6, a Burlington train was stopped near Savannah, Ill., by masked men, and it is believed that they secured a large sum of money. The last hold-up on the Burlington occurred a little more than a month ago near Hubble, Neb.

A Denver and Rio Grande train was held up July 15, at Marshall Pass. The Northern Pacific overland limited train was held up at Bearmouth, Mont., August 5. The Santa Fe suffered an untold loss on the outskirts of Lajunta.

Three days ago a Colorado and Southern passenger train was held-up and the express messenger shot one of the bandits.

There are contradictory stories regarding the amount of money secured by the five men who robbed the Rock Island train last night. The Davenport (Iowa) officers of the United States Express Company say there was only $500 in the safe, while it is asserted that other officers of the company said $60,000 was stolen. No trace has been secured of the robbers.

VENEZUELA PROTESTS.

Sending of British Gunboat up the Orinoco Violation of Sovereignty.

Caracas, Nov. 26.—The Venezuelan Government has strongly protested to Great Britain that the sending of the British sloop-of-war Fantome up the Orinoco River is an infringement of Venezuela's sovereignty, it having been done without permission.

Great Britain has not yet replied to the protest.

LILIOUKALANI ON THE WAY.

Going to Washington to Press Her Claim Before Congress.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Ex-Queen Lilioukalani of Hawaii and her party passed through Chicago this afternoon on their way from Honolulu to Washington, where the coming winter her claim for financial relief will again be urged before Congress.

The ex-Queen did not travel in a special car, but occupied a berth in an ordinary sleeper on the Northwestern railroad.

EXHIBITS TO BOOM CANADA

London, Nov. 24.—In view of the adoption at Quebec, Halifax and St. John of the United States methods for exclusion of diseased emigrants, the steamship companies are arranging more exacting medical examinations of passengers before leaving England. The companies are anxious to avoid the loss involved in bringing back unaccepted emigrants.

The New Canadian Offices.

Work is progressing slowly on the new Canadian Government Emigration Offices in Trafalgar Square, and the slackness of British workmen's methods will prevent the opening before January. Special arrangements are being made for attractive window shows.

SHOALS OF FISH MOVE TO NORTH

Immense Fishing Banks Discovered in the Polar Regions

Copenhagen, Denmark, Nov. 24—Owing to large catches of fish in waters adjacent to the Scandinavian countries, the fishing area has been moving northward to the Faroe Islands, Iceland and Polar regions. It has been discovered that immense quantities of fish, especially cod and herring, are to be found in those waters. On a recent trip of the Danish ship Dania sometimes ploughed through shoals of these varieties for a long distance, when they could be scooped without any fishing tackle. New banks were discovered, some of them of great extent. These appear to be new homes for the fish, and they possess the necessary requisites for feeding them and rearing their young. The eyes of English, French, German and Norwegian fishermen have been turned to Iceland and they are beginning to go there in larger numbers for the purpose of participating in the catch.

As to Iceland proper, important changes have taken place among the people. Temperance has now made much progress among them.

Economically there is also an upward trend in Iceland. Salmon fisheries are being exploited in the country, plans are on foot for establishing large canning factories along the rivers, which furnish excellent water power, and English and Americans are taking an interest in this project.

The tourist traffic in Iceland, especially from England and America is rapidly increasing.

Oil Company,

of Marietta, Ohio, will stand investigation through Mercantile Agencies or leading people. It has been successful in its operations so far, only drilling one dry hole in getting 12 wells, and one of its wells is a 25 barrel well in 400 acre tract, where there will be room for 100 wells. The company is NOW EARNING DIVIDENDS, and will start paying better than interest in January next, increasing thereafter as new wells come in.

The present price of shares is $25 for 100, but will advance to $30 as soon as some of its wells now drilling are completed.

GOLD Is the World's Wealth!

YOU WANT IT

We have it. The property of the ORO RICO MINING SYNDICATE located in San Bernardino County, California, consists of THREE GREAT GOLD MINES, a total of 30 mining claims, comprising 600 acres, which under several years operation and development have reached a state of profitable production. For the purpose of erecting a suitable mill and plant for treating the ores we offer a moderate block of stock (par value $1) at 20 cents a share. This Mill we expect to have in operation early in 1903, at which time we expect to commence the payment of Ten Per Cent. Annual Dividends on the PAR VALUE. We solicit an opportunity to place before you the prospectus, reports of mining experts and actual facts regarding this great gold property. We believe in our mines. Off to Berlin

The members of the County and Town Councils and a deputation from the Board of Trade, together with other citizens, will leave this morning on the Grand Trunk for Berlin. The party will remain in Toronto until evening, reaching Berlin about 9 p.m. They will inspect the sugar beet factory tomorrow, and return to Toronto tomorrow evening, reaching home Saturday morning.

Grand Trunk Improvements

Mr. John Frame, master carpenter of the Grand Trunk Railway has erected a neat centre table in the station here, with circular ends. The top of polished oak, is supported upon a base of oiled centre table is flanked on each of its long sides by high backed curved seats in white birch veneer. The affair adds much to the appearance and convenience of the waiting room

Deer Becoming Scarce

Deputy Game Warden John Hines of Barrie, who has charge of the Moore River district, was at the Parliament buildings in connection with his report, says the Globe. His belief is that deer are becoming scarcer in Ontario, and from what he has heard many of the hunting clubs will not trouble to take out licenses another year, unless a region can be found where deer are more plentiful. Mr. Hines is strongly opposed to the use of hounds for deer-hunting and favors the prohibition of this and the shooting of deer in the water, which he characterizes as murder.

Turkeys are Down

Dressed turkeys are selling on the Toronto market for 10c and 10 1-2c, and live turkeys for 8 and 8 1-2c per pound. This is a considerable reduction from the quotations for Thanksgiving Day, but it is not expected they will go any lower before Christmas. Geese are quoted at from 7c to 8c. per pound in the city, ducks from 75c. to $1.25 a pair and chickens from 60c. to $1.25 per pair. Peterborough prices are away above this figure.

A Popular Cigar

Yesterday morning Mr. W. G. Stirton, representing Messrs. Stirton & Dyer, the well known cigar makers of London, Ont., left town on his way west, having booked some good orders for his celebrated "Booster" cigar. Mr. Stirton is a popular salesman and has, we believe the most popular cigar on the market. If you have any doubt as to this call at the Palace and procure one.

The Cause of Deafness

Deafness and impaired hearing are due almost entirely to catarrhal inflammation of the eustachian tubes. Permanent cure is guaranteed to all who inhale Catarrhozone as directed. This vegetable antiseptic is inhaled at the mouth, and after traversing all the air passages of the respiratory organs is exhaled through the nostrils; it completely erradicates catarrh from any part of the system, clears the ears, nose and throat, and allays inflammation, congestion and soreness. For Deafness, Earache, Ringing in the Ears, Head Noises, Catarrh, Asthma and Bronchitis, medical science can devise nothing as beneficial as Catarrhozone. Complete outfit for two months' use, price $1.00; trial size 25c. Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

—Mr. W. Macfarlane, lockmaster at Lovesick, is spending a day or two in town.

—General Manager McNichol, of the C.P.R., passed through Peterborough on Tuesday on a tour of inspection.

—Mrs. Thos. J. Ritchie, who has been the guest of Mrs. D. Ritchie, Dublin st., left for her home in Kansas City, Mo., yesterday.

—Port Hope Guide—Miss Isabel Hay, of Peterborough, is the guest of her friend Miss Maud Allen, Toronto Road. Miss Hay is the winner of the gold medal from the Royal Humane Society for the brave act in saving Miss Allan from drowning while bathing in Chemong Lake.

The Steamers Busy

The steamers on the Rice Lake waters are busy these days. On Tuesday the Water Lily arrived with a barge of grain for the Central Milling Co., and left the same evening for another load; the Star also arrived with a load for the McAllister Milling Co., and has still another tow. The Rainbow came in yesterday with two scow loads of lumber. It is expected the steamers will be forced into winter quarters this week.

SALESMEN'S TRIALS

Bad Food Is One Of Them

Road traveling is rather hard on salesmen Irregular hours, indifferent hotels and badly cooked food play smash with their digestion.

An old Philadelphia traveler tells how he got the start of his troubles by using Grape-Nuts. "For years I was troubled with a bad stomach, which gave me constant headaches and pains all through my body caused by eating improper food. I spent considerable money on doctors, who said I had indigestion, and after taking medicine for a year and it doing me no good, I decided to go on a diet, but the different cereals I ate did not help me. If it hadn't been for the advice of a friend to try Grape-Nuts, I might be ailing yet.

I commenced to feel better in a short time after using the food; my indigestion left me; stomach regained its tone so that I could eat anything, and headaches stopped. I have gained in weight, and had a better complexion than I had for years. At many hotels, the salesmen will have nothing in the line of cereals but Grape-Nuts, as they consider it not only delicious, but also beneficial for their health in the life they lead." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Results of the Vote for Mayor And Alderman

ALD. ROGER FOR MAYOR

With Mayor Denne and Ald. Best in Second and Third Places

Mr. A. W. Cressman Heads the List for Aldermen — Ald. Morrison Jumps from Eighth to Third Place.—Ald. J. J. Turner Added to the List Together with Mr. W. E. Conway

"The last two days voting moves Alderman G. M. Roger up to first place for Mayor, with our present esteemed head of the Civic Board 45 votes behind him. Alderman H. Best still remains a good third. For aldermen, Mr. A. W. Cressman heads the list of candidates, while Alderman Morrison has jumped to third place. The last count also shows Mr. E. F. Mason to have made substantial progress, having been voted into a good position among the leading members. Fifty votes were sent in for Alderman J. J. Turner, and this for a start is exceedingly promising. We welcome the name of Mr. W. E. Conway as a candidate for municipal honors; an energetic business man, he would make a very acceptable Alderman.

Many of our subscribers only send one name for Alderman. They should remember that ten are required for the Civic Board, so please fill in each time you vote the full number provided for on the coupon.

The state of the poll will be published occasionally, at the start, and later on, the result of each day's vote will be made known every morning.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—Yesterday's fall of snow was the first of the season.

—We publish a letter from Mr. J. Alex. Culverwell, in this issue, that is deserving of attention.

—Mr. Dodd, the new local agent of the C.P.R., has been duly installed, and is now on duty.

—A young lady was nearly run over by a horse and rig at noon yesterday, in the hands of a careless driver.

—The snow by-law will now be receiving attention. The chief says that he will enforce it, regardless of consequences.

—The advance in frieght rates by the railways was inevitable, in consequence of the increased expenses in the shape of wages.

—The referendum contest is getting a trifle warm. Those opposed to the act—and they are many—are not, however, making any fuss.

—Today is Thanksgiving day in the United States, and will be observed as a public holiday. The American colony in Peterborough will not observe the day.

—The storm yesterday put a damper on the work at the dam. Mr. O'Toole, the contractor, has, however, the work well in hand and can shut down any time without loss.

—The White Rose Club will give another of their delightful dances this evening in the Forester's Hall, Simcoe Street.

—One of the horses belonging to Mr. George Stevens made a dash for liberty yesterday, but was soon captured, not, however, until some damage was done to the wagon.

—Dog poisoners have been getting in their work in Keene, several valuable animals having been killed. Dr. Harrison lost a coolie valued at $150. There is a strong suspicion of who the guilty party is.

—Mr. Chas. Gilchrist, fishery overseer at Rice Lake, has purchased this season 7,500 pounds of wild rice harvested by Indians in the marshes, paying over $300 therefor. He disposed of the lot to Montreal dealers at 8c., a pound

Ask a healthy woman what she would sell her health for and she would tell you that the choicest diamonds in the world could not buy it. What use for diamond rings to emphasize the shrunken fingers, or earrings to light up the cheeks hollowed by disease?

Health is the first requisite to womanly happiness. General ill-health in women has its origin in local womanly diseases. Cure the diseases of the delicate womanly organism and the general health is perfectly restored.

The remarkable benefits experienced from the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription are due to this medicine's perfect cures of womanly diseases. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"It affords me great pleasure to be able to say a few words in regard to the merits of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' writes Mrs. Flora Arn, of Dallas, Jackson Co., Mo. "I was tempted to try these medicines after seeing the effect upon my mother. At an early stage of married life I was greatly bothered with painful periods, also a troublesome drain which rendered me very weak and unfit for work of any kind. I became so thin there was nothing left of me but skin and bone. My husband became alarmed and got me a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription.' After he saw the wonderful effects of that one he got me two more, and after I used those up there was no more pain, and I began to gain in flesh very rapidly."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

THE "CITY" OF PETERBOROUGH

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—I was pleased to see in the press lately the advocacy of making the Town of Peterborough—the City of Peterborough.

Considering the fact that the Town of Peterborough itself is more than qualified for that title, and also that Peterborough and the Village of Ashburnham together have now a population of some 16,000—Ashburnham being from a geographical and business standpoint part and parcel of Peterborough—I think that it is high time that our community should be entitled a city. I think it being entitled a town is a standing menace to future business possibilities of the community.

In Shakespeare, the question is asked, "What's in a name?" I may add that bankers are asking that question every day, and every business man well knows it behooves him to have as fold a name as possible.

In my endeavors to create a market for the Burleigh Falls and Buckhorn Falls water power, it keeps me busy in my correspondence and conversation with manufacturers—in my endeavors to induce them to locate in Peterborough—to evade the use of the words "Town of Peterborough." In fact, I use the word "community" when the word "Town" is necessitated in my remarks, rather than have it supposed that the enterprising people of Peterborough have too small a community to be a city, or are too narrow-minded in their business methods to make the little additional annual expenditure which a city's expense would necessitate.

How do we know that the Town of Peterborough has not been "turned down" many a time by manufacturers seeking location, without their even bothering to examine our importance, simply because they do not find it in the category of cities, and how much harder it is to impress a manufacturer or investor with this community's importance, when on the face of it we make ourselves appear "small," in more ways than the one of population.

Let some substantial candidate for municipal honors come forward and state he will advocate making the overgrown "Town of Peterborough" into the "City of Peterborough," and, although I am not a betting man, I am sport enough to lay odds that we will place him at the head of the polls.

SIR WILLIAM VAN HORNE'S GRAET WORK IN CUBA

The Great Canadian Has Done Great Things for the Island

AIDED MANY SONS OF CANADA

What the Spaniards Failed to do 400 Years Sir William Has Accomplished

Ciego do Aavila, Cuba, November 26.—At 9.55 this morning, some forty miles to the east of Santa Clara, the golden spike that joined up the Van Horne Cuba Company Railroad was driven clear down out of sight into the tire by a representative and enthusiastic crowd. Special trains were run from Santa Clara and Ciego de Avila, and great enthusiasm was evinced. What the Spaniards failed to do in four hundred years, the Van Horne Syndicate has accomplished in a little over two, and within a short time commodious up-to-date trains will be put upon a regular service, bringing Havana and Santiago within 48 hours distance, instead of five days, as at present.

On December 21st, 1899, Mr. Frank P. Brothers, who, it will be remembered, died here shortly after his arrival, turned the first sod of the western division just outside Santa Clara, and since then work has gone on continually under the able management of Mr. R. G. Ward. The Cuba Company's railroad runs through Central Cuba from Santa Clara to Santiago de Cuba, a distance of some 355 miles, touching also many towns of some importance, and branching into Sancti Spiritus, and Ciego do Avila. In many places the line runs through an almost virgin country, the many difficulties that were encountered being only known to those who have engaged in similar construction work in tropical countries, fever, rainy spells, and general climatic conditions having to be grappled with and overcome. Your correspondent rode over in the train in eight hours, what this time last year took five days to do on horseback, and on roads, which are not roads at all, but mere cattle trails and sendas.

About ten millions have been spent, and it is the company's intention to expend a like sum in branch lines and other developments.

Mr. R. G. Ward, as manager for the western division, has earned fame for himself as a construction man and able diplomat, he having, in his two years, overcome Cuban prejudice and oppositions of all kinds, and from all quarters. Canadian engineers and construction men have been connected with the company, amongst whom are R. E. Hunter, W. D. Mann, J. K. Drury, Bruce McConnell, V. Brayley, P. Rawlings, R. J. Craig, Norman Rankin, G. Bignell, Theodore Harwood and others.

Cuba as a country for cattle raising is unsurpassed, while its reputation for sugar and tobacco growing is too well-known for me to add anything in this line. The line has opened up prospects and possibilities to the Cuban, which were undreamed of heretofore, and adds but one more laurel to the many that Sir William has already gained in similar constructions. Sir William, who arrived in Havana this morning, will shortly make a trip of inspection over the line, and demonstrations are being prepared for him at many points.

BOER GENERALS COME OUT SECOND BEST

Parliamentary Blue Book Dealing with Their Recent Appeal Shows Them in Poor Light

New York, Nov. 26—The correspondent of the Tribune in London, cables:

Mr. Chamberlain had an easy case in taking up the ill-judged appeal of the Boer generals to the civilized world and he naturally presented the British side with lucidity and force. His correspondence with Gen. Botha, published in details in a Parliamentary paper, issued yesterday, presents evidence of the humane treatment of the Boer families in the concentration camps and the magnanimity in dealing with the vanquished enemy. He naturally resented the misleading statements made by the Boer generals in the anti-British appeal to foreigners.

General Botha's replies were conciliatory rather than apologetic, and did not break the force of Mr. Chamberlain's powerful, if temperate, presentation of the case. The correspondence showed that the Boer generals welcomed the announcement of Mr. Chamberlain's mission to South Africa, and offered to co-operate with him in effecting the reconciliation of the races.

The correspondence is read here with satisfaction. The British people have felt that they never had sufficient credit for conducting the war with a degree of humanity, unparalleled in history, and in making the most generous peace ever known. The Boer generals, or rather, Dr. Leyds, who misled them, have enabled Mr. Chamberlain to emphasize these facts.

London, Nov. 25—These are some of the noteworthy sayings of prominent men during the past week:

I look forward to a great federation of the Anglo-Saxon elements, which shall include the British Empire, the United States and even Germany—Sir Harry Johnson.

Freedom of speech must have some limit—Earl Dudley, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

I am convinced that we are on the eve of a settlement of the Irish land question—John Redmond, Nationalist, M.P.

An enthusiasm for university teaching, which has slumbered for a good many centuries, is now waking up in London.—Earl Selborne.

Journal from Toulon says that the latest news from Tetuan, Morocco, in regard to the uprising of the Kabyles is not so favorable. The warships Pothuan and Chauzy will be completely equipped today and held in readiness to sail at a moment's notice.

THE LONDON FOG TO BE DISSOLVED

How Rollo Russell's Project to Alter the Climate of London

London, Nov. 25.—Ordinarily we should look skeptically, if not intolerantly, upon the Hon. Rollo Russell's project for altering the climate of London, as it is elaborately exposed, with much statistics and several diagrams in the Daily Mail. But a whimsical or fanciful attitude is forbidden by the kindly and serious interest of the British Meteorological Office toward the undertaking, the praise-worthy motive underlying which we cannot deny however much we might be constrained to withhold our approval of the manner in which the far-famed London fog is to be defeated and disintergated forever.

The Hon. Rollo Russell, having written a book on the subject, we shall not do him the injustice of inadequate review, nor would we desire to forestall the pleasure of our readers, but leave them free to study it in detail. We shall merely say that, in brief, Mr. Russell's scheme is for the erection of great rain walls, loft structures, which would act as barriers against the wind from the rainy quarter, and would cause precipitation of the moisture carried by the clouds at such points outside of London, that no clouds would hang over the city; hence there would eb no rain and no fog there. Mr. Russell indicates the best situation for these walls, which would be about 400 feet high and five or six miles in length. One would stretch from northwest to southeast across the neighborhood of Woking, to intercept the rainfall from that direction. The other, which would be a fog-wall as well as a rain-wall would extend from near the Thames a few miles east of London in a northwesterly direction, to cut the city off from the fogs that roll in from the Essex marshes, in addition to precipitating moisture from any stray clouds advancing on London from any other direction. The effect of these artificial barriers would be to drive the impinging air upward, wringing the clouds dry before they could pass over the heart of London.

A wealth of meteorological data, which we have studied faithfully in conjunction with the confirmation of the land about London, convinces us that Mr. Russell has a thorough grasp of the vast project to which no doubt he has devoted many years of his life. As is common with all really great undertakings, there will be considerable criticism, and a few vigorous objections, all of which Mr. Russell should be prepared to meet and destroy. It will be suggested, of course, that the scheme will entail an immense expenditure, and that when it is put into effect there will be no guarantee that London would be absolutely free from rain and fog.

We are not prepared to adopt the pessimistic views of Mr. Russell's daring designs. Like many conceptions which at their origination seem visionary, it is so extremely fascinating that we are powerfully attracted to it. We trust it will not collapse, as did the scheme of some American scientists, a few years ago, to compel precipitation of atmospheric moisture by the use of explosives. We cannot say we believe, but we do hope, that the scheme for dissolving the London fog will have better success, for instance, than "Brick" Pomeroy's plan to tunnel the Rocky Mountains, or the formula for extracting refined gold from sea-water; that it will add more to the sum of human progress than General Pleasanton's alluring theory that dwelling under a blue-glass roof would prolong life to 150 years; that Mr. Russell will not incur the senseless hostility which encounters inventors of perpetual motion, and that, when he shall achieve the triumph which he deserves, science also will answer the annoying question, What happens when an irresistible force encounters an immovable object?

TEACH CASTRO A LESSON

Cologne Gazette Says That is England's Duty Now

Cologne, Nov. 27.—The Cologne Gazette which generally speaks for the Government, in commenting on the Anglo-Venezuelan affair, says that the attitude of President Castro toward Great Britain in regard to the Ban Righ, the made-over insurgent gunboat, and the sending of a warship up the Orinoco, is so little in accord with the relative strength of the two nations and with the demands of justice and equity, that England should certainly teach Venezuela a sharp lesson. Germany and other Powers also have serious grounds for complaint against Venezuela. The Gazette says the relations of Venezuela towards other nations should be clearly defined.

POURS OIL OVER BODY AND APPLIES MATCH

Terrible Method Suicide of a Minneapolis Girl

FATHER WITNESSES HER DEATH

And Makes a Heroic and Futile Struggle to Save His Child

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 25.—Powerless to interfere, W. A. Foster, [illegible] Clinton avenue south, early yesterday morning, saw his daughter, Grace Foster, aged 27, apply a match to her kerosene soaked body, which within a few seconds was a mass of flames.

All efforts of the father were unavailing and the daughter was dead within a very few minutes after she had started the fire.

Frantically the father labored to extinguish the flames in time to save his daughter's life, but long before he could smother them life became extinct.

Despondency, caused by long illness, is assigned as the reason for the terrible and unnatural deed. For the past three or four weeks she had been confined to her home with illness, and for a week the father has been especially watchful over her. For two nights he sat at her bedside attending to her wants. Saturday night he again began his vigil, but towards morning he fell asleep in his chair.

It was while in this condition that his daughter took advantage of her opportunity. Rising from her bed, the young woman went to the kitchen where she obtained a gallon of kerosene. This she poured over her body, from her head down. The father in the meantime had awakened, and missing his daughter at once surmised that something was wrong, and went in search of her.

Hardly had he reached the kitchen door when he was horrified to see the girl with a lighted match in her hand about to light the oil on her lower limbs. The air was full of kerosene odor, and he at once saw her purpose.

Not having time to reach her side, he sought to startle her, and cried, "Grace, stop that!" This had no effect, and she calmly and cooly applied the match to the oil on her left knee. The kerosene furnished ready fuel, and before her frantic father could secure rugs and blankets to smother the fire, her whole body was a burned and charred mass and her destruction was complete.

With the first application of the match the unfortunate girl gave one agonizing cry and fell to the floor. Not another sound was heard from her after the first cry, and it is thought that the gas thrown of by the burning oil, inhaled into the lungs, caused unconsciousness.

Her cry, and those of the stricken father, brought Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Ripley, who live on the first floor of the building, to the scene. They, in company with Mr. Foster, labored industriously and frantically to save the girl. The flames, however, seemed to remain unquenchable.

Every time a blanket would be wound around the prostrate body, the fire would creep out in some other portion. The oil had soaked so deeply into the skin that to smother the flames was an impossibility.

Mr. Foster, it is claimed by neighbors, had often feared his daughter would take her life, and to frustrate this intention on her part, had hidden all of the knives and other articles in the house with which she could possibly have done herself harm. The thought of her using kerosene never entered his mind, and the can had been left in its usual place.

Miss Foster had been a dressmaker in one of the fashionable downtown shops until a few weeks ago.

She has for several years acted as a housekeeper for her father, who is employed in a local florist's establishment in the city, and has also been prominent in church work.

The father was removed to the City hospital, where his burns are being carefully attended to. He will recover unless he sustains a stroke of apoplexy brought about by the great shock.

The house was damaged some by the fire, although the loss will not reach over $100.

REV. DR. GALBRAITH AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

AN ELOQUENT AND EARNEST LECTURE ON THE LIQUOR ACT OF 1902

The Rev. Gentleman Considers the Act the Best of Its Kind Ever Put on the Statute Book—No Loop Hole Through Which the Law Can be Evaded

The Temperance Rally in St. Paul's church last night was not very largely attended. The Rev. Dr. Galbraith, of Belleville, was the speaker of the evening and in the course of an exceedingly interesting and earnest address, he remarked that there are in the world today two stumbling blocks to man—the one is idolatory and the other strong drink. The former is the curse of heathen races; the latter is the curse of civilization. We cannot, he said, exaggerate the awful facts that stand behind the words "strong drink." Could I recall all the evil, sorrow, wrecked homes, poverty, crime, misery and all of the fearful consequences of this stumbling block to humanity our blood would run cold with horrow. All the liquor used on the continents of North America and Europe in one year would fill a canal 8 feet deep, 30 feet wide and 100 miles long. Four billions of dollars are expended annually to keep this flood going, while 400,000 people are engaged in its manufacture, sale and distribution. In these two civilized continents of North America and Europe there are three millions of confirmed drunkards, 300,000 of whom every year go down into drunkards' graves. It is not the weak mined who usually become victims of strong drink, but men of strong will, who usually have strong appetites. It is the intellectual and active man who is most likely to succumb to the baneful influences of this curse of modern times, for strong drink has a two-fold effect—it influences the appetite and enfeebles the will. The most terrible sight I ever saw was that of between thirty and forty drunkards in a large room, some lying on the floor in a state of stupidity, others blaspheming, some indulging in miserable jargon, while orthers were fighting, and the room was spattered with their blood. What did it? Strong drink! Bishop Benson is credited with having said that the whole nature of the British nation was changed, debased and degraded by strong drink. Continuing, the reverend gentlemen claimed there is scarcely a home in the Dominion of Canada, that is not touched, directly, or indirectly by the terrible curse of intoxicating liquors. A tree which bears such evil fruit, ought not to merely have its brances cut off, but it should be plucked up by the roots. It not only affects the generation that is, but also that which is coming, for the curse of strong drink is hereditary. Then, it produces poverty, insanity and crime, and we have to support in this country institutions which did not exist at the time of the children of Israel, whom God guided through the wilderness for forty years, but provided for them nothing in the shape of intoxicants. $7,000,000 are paid annually in Canada for the support of penal institutions, lunatic asylums, and pauper institutions, which are all largely filled through the effects of drunkeness. Touching the methods used for creating an appetite for strong drink, the reverend doctor claimed that "they are even putting liquor in the centre of some candies, so that the appetite may be kindled in children for strong drink." "I say that the devil himself would not resort to such means to create this fearful appetite in the children who are growing up around us." God had said that no drunkard can enter the Kingdom of Heaven, and there are four things which must be done to save the world:

1st—We must thoroughly purge the Church. Let it be distinctly understood that the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is a sin.

2nd—Educate the young so that they shall see the evil of strong drink. Teach them the true meaning of temperance. Temperance means the moderate use of what is proper to use, and total abstinence from that which is injurious. Teach the children the true meaning of liberty.

3rd—To save the poor drunkard.

4th—Let there be Legislative enactment putting an end to the use of intoxicants as a beverage. The Liquor Act of 1902 is the best of its kind that was ever placed on the statute book, outside of total prohibition. I do not see a loop hole through which the liquor men can crawl and evade the law. It is prohibition as far as this province can enact and has received the sanction of the highest court in the British Empire. It means that no liquor shall be bought for sold in the Province of Ontario. In conclusion, the speaker did not see why intelligent ladies should not be permitted to vote on such important measures, while men who can be bought for 50c or a dollar, are allowed to exercise their franchise.

After a hearty vote of thanks had been tendered to Dr. Galbraith, the meeting concluded by singing "God Save the King."

Another public meeting is to be held before the 4th of December.

SOUTH AMERICAN WAR

Venezuela and Columbia at Daggers Drawn

Great Britain will A'so Take a Hand in the Game

England Notifies the United States That She Will Use Force to Collect Its Debts—Germany Ready to Take the Same Course—Colombia Troops Repulsed, President Castro Says

Washington, Nov. 27.—With the ending of the civil war in Venezuela the victorious President Castro has become involved in fresh troubles. News comes from our Minister at Caracas that Colombian troops have invaded Venezuela, and it has been learned here that Great Britain and Germany have determined to bring Castro to terms for neglecting to liquidate certain obligations that have remained unfulfilled for several years.

Minister Bowen's message to the State Department says that an official bulletin has been issued that armed forces from Colombia invaded Venezuela on Nov. 10 and were defeated on Nov. 19.

The information contained in the bulletin may mean that war is on between Colombia and Venezuela. Each country has just concluded a long and exhaustive civil war, and it has been predicted that as soon as the internal strifes were over an international conflict would be on.

Colombia has accused Venezuela of furnishing arms, ammunition and men to the Colombian rebels, and it was openly charged that Gen. Uribe-uribe, the Colombian rebel leader, had organized his insurgent forces in Venezuelan territory, but it was never known here that they were furnished by the Colombian Government.

The feeling between the two countries is very bitter, but it was not supposed in Washington that, after each government had been crippled badly, financially and otherwise, by its own internal conflicts, and with Venezuela facing a crisis in her relations with England and Germany, there would be a renewal so soon of the difficulties that have threatened for a long time to involve the two Latin countries in hostilities.

Following the example set by the German Government several months ago, the British Government has inquired of the United States whether there is anything contained in the Munroe Doctrine that will serve to make obnoxious to this country any attempt by Great Britain to collect by force of arms debts due to its subjects by Venezuela.

Germany's similar inquiry was made directly to President Roosevelt by Herr von Holleben, the German Ambassador, early this year, at a time when the revolt against Castro's rule was beginning to assume formidable proportions. Obligations due to German railroad contractors and other German subjects by the Venezuelan Government had been virtually repudiated by Castro, and the imperial authorities at Berlin determined to collect them by force if the United States did not interpose objection.

The outcome of the inquiry was a declaration by the State Department that the Munroe Doctrine was intended only to prevent the acquisition of territory in the Western Hemisphere by any European nation through colonization or conquest, and that Venezuela, bring a sovereign State, could not rely on any assistance from the United States so long as the latter did not attempt to acquire Venezuelan territory.

Germany gave assurances to this Government that she intended only to seize Venezuelan custom houses and hold them until duties sufficient to indemnify her subjects had been collected, and that she had no intention of maintaining a permanent foothold on Venezuelan territory. As there is nothing inconsistent with the terms of the Munroe Doctrine in this expressed purpose, the United States Government let it be known that it would not instrfere with the German operations.

Shortly after this virtual understanding had been reached, the Venezuelan rebels made great advances, and the German Government determined not to carry out its debt-collecting policy until the internal disturbances of the South American country were over.

Great Britain, which also had scores to settle with Venezuela, did not then make any inquiries of the United States, but waited until the conclusion of hostilities to do so. She has now come forward with a request to be informed as to the views of this Government in regard to the projected seizure of Venezuelan custom houses for temporary holding, and has received the same answer as to the interpretation of the Munroe Doctrine as was given to Germany.

It is understood that both Great Britain and Germany will send squadrons to Venezuelan waters to back up demands for payment of the obligations alleged to be due to their subjects, and if Castro declines to comply, to land armed forces, seize custom houses and collect revenues until the amounts of the claims have been satisfied.

TO PUNISH CANADA FOR FANCIED WRONGS

Reason why Uncle Sam Gave Receprocity to New Foundland

Halifax, Nov. 27.—The St. John's (Nfld.) Herald is the official mothpiece of Herald is the official mouthpiece of reason it gives, therefore, for Mr. Bond's success at Washington is worthy of consideration in Canada. The Herald says:

"As a a matter of fact, Newfoundland is likely to secure reciprocity, for this reason, if no other, that it represents a slap at Canada. If the News man had any knowledge of foreign politics he would realize that the relations between the Republic and the Dominion are such that the granting of reciprocity to Newfoundland is regarded by a large section of the Americans as a means of revenging real or fancied grievances against the Canadians. The students of outside politics readily realize this fact.

In reply the St. John's News, the leading opposition journal in the ancient colony, observes:

"This, then, is the labor of love which has engaged the attention of Premier Bond all the past summer. The profit to the United States, on the one hand, or Newfoundland on the other, from the proposed treaty, is a matter of no moment as compared with the opportunity of affording to the United States a chance to have a 'slap at Canada,' and 'revenging real or imaginary grievances.' New and extensive markets for Newfoundland fish in the United States, improved trade relations for Uncle Sam with Newfoundland are as nothing compared with the advantages of punishing Canada for real or fancied wrongs.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 26—A special to The Express for Lorain, Ohio, says—

The propeller Quito last evening tried to make this port with iron ore from Escanaba. A heavy northeast gale was raging and the sea ran high. The propeller was on the beach outside the piers near the harbor. The tug Cascade immediately went to the rescue and took off twelve of the crew and the woman cook. Four other oboard, two engineers, and two mates, were in their cabins, packing up some things. The tug had to get away from the steamer, and the four men were left aboard.

Soon after the Cascade landed the rescued men, signals were made from the imperiled steamer. The men aboard feared she would go to pieces. The Cascade again went out into the storm, towing a lifeboat.

The sea was running so high by that time that the tug could not get near enough to the propellor for the men aboard to get into the lifeboat. That project was then abandoned.

Captain Bowen then took the wheel of the Cascade and shot her close enough to the propellor, so that the first mate, O. J. McGaw managed to jump to the tug's deck. The tug swept by before the other men had time to make the leap. The seas were so high that the tug did not dare to remain by the propellor any longer, and she turned and scudded for the harbor, leaving the men aboard to their fate.

Those left on board the steamer were John Anderson, second mate; B. Henry, chief engineer; W. Faulk, second engineer.

The three men were taken off the Quito early this morning by the life saving crew of Cleveland.

London, Nov. 24—The Servian outlook continues to attract considerable attention in Vienna, says a correspondent there. It is sincerely hoped, he says, that King Alexander will refrain from perilous experiments and that, above all he will not attempt another violent revision of the constitution, which would only increase the existing confusion and further endanger his own position. Russia has already manifested displeasure at the appointment of the new Cabinet and the instability of the King's character is a source of constant unrest and apprehension. It is alleged in Vienna that the King desires to secure succession for Lieut. Lunjevitza, the Queen's brother. The idea is repudiated by the King, but it repudiated by the King. but it is believed that it is being strongly advocated by the Queen.

Constantinople, Nov. 26.—Sixteen batteries of quick-firing field guns, numbering 96 in all, have been ordered from the Krupp works as the commencement of the rearmament of the Turkish artillery. The War Ministry is also authorized to purchase 230,000 small calibre Mausers, to complete the present establishment. With wagons and ammunition for the artillery the orders entail an outlay of $2,000,000.

The purchases were apparently accelerated in consequence of the recent developments of the situation in Macedonia and the Balkans, and the impression prevailing in many quarters here that a serious outbreak, possibly leading to a widespread European complications, may be expected in the spring.

THE NEW GERMAN NAVY BEING GREATLY RUSHED

Rhodesia is Adapted for Grand Future--G. T. R. Shares Fall in England

Berlin, Nov. 27—The German Emperor continues with feverish energy his policy of expansion. A few weeks ago, in this correspondence I presented official figures showing that the Kaiser's plans for the reorganization of the navy, making it formidable in new ships in guns and in men, have been pushed forward even faster than was prescribed in the act authorizing the work. While the Emperor has thus been preparing to defend his new possessions, against all comers he has added to them at a rate that would seem incredible but for the test of figures, whose truthfulness not even England has attempted to deny.

Up to 1884 Germany had no oversea territory to speak of. In that year she acquired Togoland with 33,000 square miles, and the Cameroons with 191,000 square miles.

That is to say, Germany has added 710,441 square miles to her empire, and increased her subjects by 8,330,000.

There is only one drawback to the Kaiser's complacency as to the future. And it is the existence of that body of politicians known as the Social Democrats, whom the Emperor, in one noteworthy oratorical exercise classed as the enemies of the nation and the Fatherland. The Social Democrats resent the Emperor's policy. And this fact is abundantly proved in the increase of the Social Democratic vote. In 1887, the year before the Kaiser's accession, the Social Democratic vote was 763,100; in 1898 it had jumped up to 2,107,100.

Reverting to the report on factory children, it is mainly these Social Democrats who are appealing to the Reichstag to end this shameful traffic in the lives of the innocents—for many of these child slaves, if the present system continues, will never reach maturity.

Germany legislators with their eyes on J. Pierpont Morgan, and the growing aggressions of trusts in the United States, are visibly agitated over signs that Germany cannot long hope to escape the combination octopus. At their head is Count Posadowsky, Prussian Minister of the Interior, who purposes soon to hold an enquiry preliminary to devising "protection for consumers made possible by the formation of trusts.

Montreal, Nov. 27th.—"The school question in Manitoba is not settled. It will be settled only when right will be done, and I say so, after conferring with the Bishops of Canada, at the conference held with Mgr. Falconi at Ottawa."

Such was the statement made to The Star correspondent today by Mgr. Langevin, Archbishop of St. Boniface, who left for the West to-day.

"Such a right was promised to the Catholics of the Province in 1870 by the imperial authorities. While it is true that we enjoy a certain degree of tolerance, we will not stop till we have legal recognition of our rights. We are more hopeful than ever, at the present time, because the principle of religious education, of denominational education, has received lately a new and more emphatic endorsation in the very heart of the powerful British Empire, England. We have every reason to believe that the influence of His Majesty Edward VII., our noble King, has been felt in this circumstance. We, however, appreciate the increasing good-will of the best thinking men. In the end, every true British subject will realize that what is good for England, good for Quebec, should be also good for Manitoba.

London, Nov. 27—The War Office is receiving bitter Australian complaints because the army orders deny the war medal and gratuity to troops landed in South Africa after May 31 last. The Canadian contingent is also affected. The complaint says the injustice is very great, for all those men were well on their way before the war ended.

G. T. R. Shares Fall.

The heavy fall of Grand Trunks is attributed to Provincial liquidation, which is taken to mean unloading on the part of shareholders who doubt the wisdom of the extension to the Pacific.

Canadian Pacific's friends here say the Grand Trunk's extension is not necessarily to throw the two roads into hostility. It is confidently expected that a rate agreement will be reached, affecting competive points.

Based on Supposition.

A correspondent of the Morning Post criticizes the Canadian Government for alleged readiness to grant benediction subsidies from the public purse to any scheme promoted to local political supporters. The particular reference is to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's alleged pledge to the new Canadian company for a railway from Gaspe. The correspondent adds: "Ask those who, misled by the scheme having Goovrnment support, sunk their money in the Chignecto Marine Railway and many other projects in maritime Canada."

TREATMENT OF DISEASE

The scourge of tuberculosis is being dealt with in a scientific way. The fact being established, to the satisfaction of every one, that the disease is infectious, that it can be spread by contact with the sufferers, the movement towards isolation is becoming general. The patients, must of course, be kindly cared for, but the sanitarium will afford them protection and care, and the public will be guarded from the danger of their presence.

Every city should have its consumptives' home, and every hospital its consumptives' ward. Toronto leads in its attempt to provide for the sick. It aims at erecting outside the limits — away from the dust and tumult of the city — a resort which will be gladly taken advantage of by many consumptives. Sometimes cures are effected by prompt and effective treatment. In any case relief is granted, and to a large and appreciable extent.

The campaign of the New York Charity Organization Society is highly commended. Its representatives visit the poor, in the congested quarters, and instruct and educate them in regard to the disease. Only a general movement under scientific and competent direction, can secure the protection which is desired, and reduce the dreadful mortality from tuberculosis. The experience of France is suggestive of what can be done in any country where the people receive the education which they need.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A Buffalo barber who used one towel on two customers has been arrested and fined for the offence. This calls attention to the fact that a sanitary shaving law is in existence in New York State, but the question of how carefully it is unobserved in many quarters, is another matter.

A Missouri man who went to Washington, D. C., to sell horses, reports the following conditions there: "The people travel on electric cars and do not need roadsters; they ride bicycles and automobiles and do not need fast trotters; they gamble by wire and do not need race horses, and the government is run largely by jackasses, and there you are."

Everybody in the land of education will agree with John Mitchell that the proper place for boys up to the age of fourteen at least is the school. To rob a boy of the opportunity of getting a good elementary education, or to permit him to escape it, is to lay up so much trouble for the nation.

A photographer in Hoboken, N.J., took a flashlight picture of a crowd in a local theatre the other night and placed it on exhibition in his show case. A man passing by paused to look at it and saw the picture of his wife sitting affectionately next to a strange man. A divorce has resulted; which is an awful warning against the pernicious practice of public exhibition of pictures of private persons.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers, Fortune's Spot, Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc.

I thought you did. But that is a detail, isn't it, since you're here to-night? And that our dinner may be no formal, conventional affair, like those of ordinary society that doesn't know how to enjoy itself, I want to introduce you and my other friends, who've come especially to meet you, to each other."

Still holding her hand so tightly that she could not wrench it away, Macaire led her further into the room, nearer to the group of men and women, who had stopped their conversation to listen and look at the new-comer.

The men were already on their feet, but the women remained seated. Four or five painted faces under hair bleached golden or dyed to the sheen of copper stared up at her with bold, laughing eyes. Winifred shrank back with a horrified catching of her breath. She was an innocent girl who had known little of the world until she began to earn her living on the stage, but instinct rather than knowledge told her with one blinding flash of enlightenment what these women were whom Lionel Macaire had asked her to meet.

Some of the men she had seen before, though not to one had she ever spoken. There was a Frenchman with royal blood in his veins; there was a great city magnate; there was a young English earl who had lately been made bankrupt; there was a man better known on the racecourse than in drawing-rooms.

A word from Macaire to the Frenchman brought him to be introduced to "the Miss Gray of whom he had so often heard." He bowed with a broad compliment, and looked at Winifred from head to foot as no man had ever looked at her before.

"Dinner is served," announced a footman. Macaire pulled Winifred's resisting hand under his arm, and held it firmly as he made her walk by his side across the room. The girl was deadly pale, but she did not cry out, as Macaire's watchful eyes told that he half expected her to do.

They reached the marble dining-room, with its purple hangings, its pink granite pillars and blue-domed ceiling. Winifred's place was by Macaire's side, and she sank into the chair which a footman offered her. She must drink her cup to the dregs, or Macaire would say that she had not kept to the bargain. Having gone through so much, she must endure to the end, or she might better never have come to this horrible house. She could only hope that she knew the worst now. And perhaps, she told herself, even this was better than to have been forced by her promise to dine with Macaire alone.

"Why don't you eat?" asked Macaire, when she had let several courses go by untasted.

"I do not wish to," she answered in a low tone, lost in the babel of hilarious voices.

"Then I shall not consider that you have kept your word. To dine with a man is not merely to sit at his table, but to eat his food and drink his wine. If you can't bring yourself to do that in my house I am freed from my half of our bargain."

Desperately Winifred made a feint of eating something from her plate, not even knowing what she ate.

"That is better. Now drink some wine. I insist, or you know the consequences. Surely it isn't much to ask. I don't often have to urge my guests to touch the wine that comes from my cellars."

Champagne, in a jeweled Venetian glass, was sending up from its depths to the golden gleaming surface a stream of bubbles. Winifred raised her glass to her lips and drank. As she did so her tortured eyes met Macaire's, and the glint of satisfaction that darted from his, though he would have hidden it, startled her. She set down the glass quickly. What had that look meant? Was he pleased that she had drunk his wine only because of his triumph in compelling her obedience, or was there a more subtle reason?

Her heart knocked against her side, and her hands grew cold as her gaze traveled questioningly from one hard face to another. Was there one in this strange company who would sympathize or help her if she went down on her knees to implore it? She did not believe that there was one. And Baron von Zellheim did not come.

Fearful lest she had made a serious mistake, she watched her own feelings. Had she experienced any different sensations, she asked herself, anxiously, since she had drunk those few sips of wine?

At first she hoped that her excited fancy alone conjured up the imagined difference, but slowly she was obliged to acknowledge that she felt a slight giddiness, a weakness of the limbs of which she had not been conscious before. Her eyelids drooped, and she lifted them with an effort. There was a faint prickling in the palms of her hands and the soles of her feet. The beating of her heart, which had been like the wild fluttering of a bird against the bars of a cage, slowed to a heavy, measured throbbing at longer intervals. The shrill laughter of the women at the table sounded metallic, unreal, and far away. A mist rose between her and the faces to which a few minutes ago she had turned a vainly appealing gaze.

CHAPTER XI.

The Eye of the Moonstone.

How the dinner went on Winifred did not know, for she was like one in a dream. Macaire had talked to her and forced answers at first, but now he let her alone, well pleased, perhaps, with the progress of events. Some of the guests who appeared to know each other well, had addressed a remark to her now and then, but when she scarcely replied they turned their attention elsewhere.

"I've been drugged, I've been drugged," Winifred kept saying to herself, as if the repetition of the startling words must rouse her failing energies to some supreme effort. But, though her mind struggled with the creeping lethargy, the body would not answer the call to arms.

As the champagne went round the laughter grew louder, the women bolder. Strange jests were made, such jests as Winifred had never been forced to hear even behind the scenes at the Salisbury, nor did she hear them now. The words drummed upon her ears without conveying a meaning. All the voices seemed to join in a wild babble, inarticulate as the voice of a river fed from many rushing brooks.

Winifred was going to sleep, and so dulled were all her faculties that she no longer cared.

Her head, with its crown of bright, waving hair—so different from the artificial structure of her neighbors'—nodded on the slender throat, like a lily shaken on its stem by the wind. Her lashes fell.

"Ha, ha!" laughed Macaire. "See, our Miss Ingenue is missing her beauty

ISSUE OF

$1,000,000 7% Preferred Stock in 10,000 Shares of $100 each at par.

CANADIAN STEEL & COAL CO

CAPITAL.

0,000 shares Common Stock, par value $100 each, issued and fully paid	$5,000,000 00
10,000 shares 7 per cent. Cumulative Preference Stock, par value $100 each	$1,000,000 00
Total Capitalization	$6,000,000 00

PREFERENCE STOCK

This Stock is preferred both as to Capital and Dividends.

The shares are entitled to cumulative preferential dividends from the net earnings of the Company, at the rate of 7 per cent per annum, payable half-yearly on the first days of April and October. They may, at the option of the holder, be exchanged for common shares. They are subject to be called in, in whole or in part, by the Company, at $115.00 per share, at any time on or after 1st January, 1909.

The total issue of Preferred Stock is only $1,000,000 00, the whole of which is now offered.

Subscriptions for 10,000 shares of $100 each of the 7 per cent Preferred Stock of the CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY will now be received at par, that is, $100 for each $100 share as follows:—

per cent on application.
20 per cent on allotment.
25 per cent each 30 days thereafter.

One share of common, par value $100.00, given with each share of preferred.

The whole of the instalments remaining unpaid at any time may be prepaid in full. A discount of one per cent will be allowed upon the par of each share prepaid at time of allotment.

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company.

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are:—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey:—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4 05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5 23
	100.00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 1350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows:—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4.00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows:—

		ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902,	to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2 70
July 1st, 1903,	" " 1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904,	" " 1905	1.65	1.65
July 1st, 1905,	" " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906,	" " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows:—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6½ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000.00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000.00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is $20,000,000.00, earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

GENERAL STRIKE IN HAVANA

Men of Many Trades Go Out to Back up the Cigarmakers

Havana, Nov. 26—Various labor unions have agreed to a sympathetic strike to support the cigarmakers on Monday. Today the coach drivers, cooks, carpenters and masons went out. On Monday, the longshoremen and cartmen will quit work.

The Mayor hopes to be able to settle the strike next week. The cigarmakers refused to treat with the Havana commercial body save through a central committee. The commercial people say they will deal with the men directly.

It is said that through lack of funds the men may be compelled to come to terms.

HANGED HIMSELF TO A BEDPOST

Suicide of a German Who Became Despondent Over His Wife's Death

Hudson, N.Y., Nov 26—Louis Hedwig, a German, 62 years of age, committing suicide this morning by hanging himself to a bed post. He was discovered by his daughter. His wife had been troubled with hallucinations for years, and two weeks ago became so violent that she had to be removed to the Poughkeepsie Asylum for the insane. She refused nourishment and died yesterday. Her body reached here last night and Hedwig made arrangements for the funeral. Her death preyed on his mind and getting up toward morning, he got a piece of rope, and, tying it about the bedpost and his neck, must have strangled to death slowly. There will be a double funeral.

WOMAN KILS A NEGRO

He Had Come to Assault Her—Seized His Pistol and Shot Him

Columbia, Nov. 26—Mrs. Mary E. Elliott living in the West Wateree region of Kershaw county, has won the congratulations of the Coroner's jury, as well as her neighbors for miles around for slaying Edward Kendrick, a negro, in her house last night. Mrs. Elliott is a widow and lives with her son, a boy in his teens in a lonely part of the country, the nearest white neighbor being beyond call.

Kendrick came to the house late last night and demanded assistance. He said he had friends with him and if the boy showed himself outside of his room he would be killed. The negro broke down the door with an axe. Mrs. Elliott had no weapon.

The man declared that he would kill both mother and son if any resistance was made. Before the woman was forced to decide between her honor and her son's life, the boy dashed out of his room and at Kendrick. His mother threw herself before him and both grappled with the man with pistol in hand.

Mrs. Elliott pressed the negroe's pistol arm to his side. In the struggle all fell to the floor, and in exerting himself to hurl Mrs. Elliott from him let his pistol drop. The women seized the weapon and fired. Kendrick died almost instantly.

GOLD Is the World's Wealth!

YOU WANT IT

We have it. The property of the ORO RICO MINING SYNDICATE located in San Bernardino County, California, consists of THREE GREAT GOLD MINES, a total of 30 mining claims, comprising 600 acres, which under several years operation and development have reached a state of profitable production. For the purpose of erecting a suitable mill and plant for treating the ores we offer a moderate block of stock (par value $1) at 20 cents a share. This Mill we expect to have in operation early in 1903, at which time we expect to commence the payment of Ten Per Cent. Annual Dividends on the PAR VALUE. We solicit an opportunity to place before you the prospectus, reports of mining experts and actual facts regarding this great gold property. We believe in our mines. There is a fortune for all of us "knocking at the door" NOW. Fortune, they say, knocks but once. Write or call today.

Piano Tuning

Mr. James Maitland, representing Heintzman & Co., Toronto, will be in Peterborough, Dec. 1st and remain one week and would be pleased to tune and repair any persons piano or organ. Leave orders at C. B. Routley's store.

Trip to Sugar Plant

About 600 people visited Berlin yesterday and inspected the Beet Sugar Factory in that town. The Peterborough deputation arrrived there last night, and will inspect the beet sugar plant today.

The Span of Life

The above was the play put on at the Opera House last night by the Donazetta Company. The play is a good one and the company made a very creditable presentation of the author's production. The scenic effects were good, and the acrobatic and tumbling performances were decidedly clever and entertaining.

The Fortnightly Club

The Fortnightly Club will meet next Thursday evening in the board room of the Y.M.C.A. The subject for this meeting will be "The Nationalization of Railways." The introductory paper will be read by Mr. F. D. Kerr and thediscussion led by Mr. R. M. Dennistoun and Mr. T. A. S. Hay.

Charged His Wife with Theft

Cobourg, Nov. 25—Acting on a telegram, Chief Constable Rush met the noon express from the east and arrested Thomas Faraides and Mary Ethel Sager. On the same train was George J. Sager, husband of the woman, upon whose information the couple were arrested. In his information Sager charges his wife with the theft of forty dollars. The parties gave their place of residence as Deseronto and held tickets to Toronto.

Charged with Theft

In the Police Court Wednesday morning Llewellyn A. Morrison, until recently engineer for the Sapphire Corundum Co., charged with the theft of $7 and of $12 from that company, elected to go to a jury and pleaded not guilty.

The Crown called evidence to show that in sending in his wage and expense accounts to headquarters, Mr. Morrison inserted items of expense which had not been incurred when the mines were in operation under the Crown Corundum Co. He was committed for trial on both charges.—Toronto Star.

Free to Our Subscribers

Subscribers to the Daily and also to the Weekly Times who will pay up arrears and also pay a year in advance, will be presented with a magnificent picture of the Coronation of Their Majesties, King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra—(size 22x28, printed in 14 colors). They are splendid prints, and will serve as momentoes of that great historical event. The picture is now to be seen at The Times Bookstore.

The Girl Who Didn't

(a Fable.)

Once upon a time a girl decided that she would go in for health rather than fashion, and would be a true woman, such as men like to talk about in the abstract.

She wore spring heels on number seven shoes, and shivered at the very idea of corsets. Her waist measured thirty-six inches, while her hips and bust were only thirty-two. She wouldn't curl her hair, and as she thought powder vulgar, her face was always red and shiny. Her clothes were all made to hang from the shoulders, and she never bathed her spine. By the time she was twenty-five men ran when they saw her coming or going, they never knew which, and women looked at her through lorgnettes and said she was an unsexed-creature!

Moral—The easiest way is always the best if you are a girl!—N.Y. "Life."

Fire at the National

Last night shortly after eleven o'clock the fire alarm sounded and it was soon ascertained that the presence of the firemen was necessary at the National hotel. A defective furnace in the basement was the cause of the trouble. Luckily the fire was discovered in time, or the whole building would have been consumed. As it was axes had to be used and the whole lower part of the hotel deluged with water before safety was assured. It will take a considerable amount to repair the damage.

Is Your back Lame

Does it hurt to stoop or bend down? Have you a heavy dull pain at the base of the spine? If so, the best remedy is Nerviline; it will invigorate the tired, sore muscles, make them suple and strong. Nerviline will drive out pain and make you well in no time. Nothing so good as Nerviline for Lumbago, Stiff Neck, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Sciatica. Buy a 25c. bottle of Polson's Nerviline to-day, and try it.

Presented with Gold Watch

Previous to her departure for San Francisco last week, Mrs. Clark was presented with a handsome gold watch by the members of St. John's Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. Clark has long been identified with the congregation of St. John's church, and the gift was a small token of the esteem in which she is held. The watch presented was a handsome gold hunting case, engraved with Mrs. Clark's name, and the date, inside the cover, and her monogram on the outside.

Owing to Mrs. Clark's illness a public presentation was found to be impossible, and it was thought better to simply give her the watch in her home. On Tuesday at the Woman's Auxiliary sewing meeting in St. John's Guild Room, a letter was read from Mrs. Clark, acknowledging with "warm appreciation and thanks the beautiful gift."

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—Hard coal is selling at $7 a ton in Myrtle.

—The iron work for the new rink is expected to arrive today.

—The Court of Exchequer met yesterday afternoon.

—Posters will be issued today by the Town calling for tenders for snow plowing.

—The Young Mens' Guild of the George street Methodist church will meet to-night in the basement of the church. A mock council meeting will be a part of the programme.

—Those who have not answered the last call made on rink stock will kindly do so at once,. The rink can not be built with promises and good wishes.

—There will be a meeting of all ladies interested in the temperance work at the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon at three o'clock to discuss the part they should take in the pending question.

—This great family journal don't object to being borrowed. It has got past that stage. It is desired by everybody in in this county, and especially those who are not subscribers, should read it whether they borrow it or steal it. By reading it, they are likely to want one for themselves, and subscribe.

—The following from an exchange applies to Peterborough: "Towns as well as merchants, must advertise in order to prosper. When a village is allowed to go out of public notice through lack of energy and enterprise, the decadence of that village has begun, and nothing but well directed advertising backed by an infusion of new life, can restore that place to its original standing. Thus it is found that every hamlet and village which is represented in the local newspaper becomes well known through that medium.'

POOR COMFORT

Cold Water Drinker Finds a Relief in Postum Coffee

Our American people, who are nervous and overstrained, would never drink coffee if they knew ho wwell and clear-headed they would be without it.

"When I was a little child," says Miss M. D'Am of Topeka, Kans., "I commenced the drinking of coffee. Naturally nervous, it made me as the years went on, a most miserable wretch, always in an unnatural state of excitement. I found as I grew older, that I would at times stagger as a drunken person. It was coffee, for I had no desire to drink anything in liquors.

My health was very bad and my brother and I were talking of quitting coffee, until I was stricken with typhoid fever. Upon my recovery, my brother wisely allowed me no coffee and said if I wished to be well again, I must stop its use.

For a number of years cold water was my only drink, but this was poor comfort until about three years ago a package of Postum Food Coffee was left at our house. We prepared it as directed and found a wholesome, delicious drink; more than this, it has strengthened me without causing those terrible 'after effects' formerly left upon me by coffee.

I recommended Postum to all my friends and in my varied experience, I find it a safe drink without effect on the nerves and the only one which with me has filled a long felt want."

Many people who have stopped drinking coffee because of its effect on the nerves, will find the pure food drink, Postum, a beverage that when properly made touches the spot, pleases eye and palate and fills the vacancy as no other drink can.

WEDDING BELLS

Miss Rose M. McGeough of Lindsay, and Mr. F. J. McPherson, of Town Married

St. Mary's Church, Lindsay on Wednesday morning was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Miss Rose M. McGeough, daughter of Mr. Michael McGeough, of that town, and Mr. F. J. R. McPherson, of Peterborough, were united in marriage. Venerable Archdeacon Casey performed the ceremony. Mass was celebrated at eight o'clock. The bridesmaid was Miss Kate O'Loughlin, of Lindsay, and the groomsman, Mr. Jas. J. McPherson, brother of the groom.

The wedding party, including a large number of guests partook of an enjoyable wedding breakfast at the residence of the bride's parents, after the ceremony.

Upon returning from a wedding trip in the west, Mr. and Mrs. McPherson, will take up residence at 432 George st. Friends will extend hearty well wishes.

A QUIET WEDDING

Peterborough Young Lady Weds a Lorneville Gentleman

On Wednesday a quiet wedding was celebrated at the residence of Mrs. John Grose, 148 Rubidge street, the contracting parties being her daughter, Miss Susan A., and Mr. Robert J. King, of Lorneville.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. J. Jolliffe, pastor of Charlotte street Church, in the presence of the family, and about forty relatives and guests. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. John Grose. Miss M. E. Gillen was bridesmaid and Mr. Wm. Grose, groomsman. The bride wore a white silk waist trimmed with chiffon and a blue skirt trimmed with white broadcloth; she carrried a boquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid's dress was a white silk waist with applique trimmings and a blue skirt, and she carried a boquet of pink carnations. The wedding march was played by Miss Wrightmore, Toronto. The many handsome and costly wedding presents given testified to the esteem in which the happy couple were held. After the ceremony all partook of a sumptuous dejeuner.

Mr. and Mrs. King left this morning for a trip to Toronto and Orillia and will afterwards reside in Lorneville.

WEDDED A WOODSTOCK

Nuptials of Mr. Ed. Simpson and Miss Beatrice Merrigold

The Woodstock Express has the following in reference to the marriage of a Peterborough boy, Mr. Ed. Simpson, to Miss Beatrice Merigold, of Woodstock:

"A very pretty but quiet wedding took place on Wilson street this afternoon, at the residence of Mrs. Merigold, when her only daughter, Miss Beatrice Merigold, was married to Mr. Edward Gordon Simpson, of Brantford, accountant of the Waterous Engine Works, of that city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. H. Shaw, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. The bride was given away by her brother, R. H. Merigold, and she wore her going away gown of blue Venetian cloth, lined with white silk, with hat to match. The wedding march was played by Mrs. C. R. Merrigold, of Battle Creek, Mich. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with carnations and chrysanthemums. Both parties are well known in Woodstock, Mr. Simpson in hockey circles, having played with the local team a couple of years ago, and Miss Merigold as milliner at John White & Co's. Their many Woodstock friends extend their best wishes for a happy future."

The young couple are in town, the guests of Mr. Simpson's parents.

The Evils of Constipation

This dangerous condition causes sick headache, abdominal pains, piles, and in severe cases insanity and apoplexy. The most agreeable and satisfactory remedy is Ferrozone, which makes the bowels so well ordered that natural and unassisted action is established. It is mild and certain in action and never causes distress or inconvenience, and may be taken as long as required. Pains in the stomach and intestines, piles, biliousness and headache disappear at once when Ferrozone is used. Recommended and sold by Druggists, price 50c. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A Bazaar

The Faithful Workers' Mission Band of St. Paul's church intend holding a bazaar on Nov. 28th, in the school room. Refreshments will be served.

IN OLD AGE the question of health becomes mainly a question of nutrition. If the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are kept in a healthful condition there will be a well-nourished body, and little liability to disorders of the liver, bowels or such other disorders as may result from innutrition and lack of exercise.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and also diseases of other organs which are caused by the diseased condition of the stomach. By enabling the perfect nutrition of the body it increases the vital power and promotes a vigorous old age.

"I was a sufferer from chronic diarrhea for five years," writes Mrs. Mary A. Aaron, of Rolla, Phelps Co., Mo. "I tried different remedies, which would give me relief for a short time only. My trouble would return as bad as ever. I consulted you in July, 1900, and by your advice commenced using Dr. Pierce's remedies. I took two bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' three vials of the 'Pellets,' and some of the 'Extract of Smart-Weed,' as you advised. I have not had any return of my trouble since using your medicines. Am now seventy-one years old and I never had anything to relieve me so quick. I think Dr. Pierce's medicines the greatest on earth. Should I ever have any return of my trouble shall use your medicine. My thanks to you for your advice and thanks to Almighty God for restoring me to health through your hands."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the best laxative for old people. They cure constipation and biliousness.

Dying by Slow Degrees

Although not always aware of it yet thousands die by slow degrees of catarrh. It first attacks the nose or throat, then the lungs, and finally spreads all through the system. Catarrhozone is the only remedy that will immediately prevent the spread of this awful disease. Every breath from the inhaler kills thousands of germs, clears the throat and nose, aids expectoration, and relieves the pain across the eyes. Catarrhozone eradicates every vestige of catarrh from the system, and is highly recommended also for Bronchitis, Asthma, Deafness, and Lung Trouble. The Liquor Act of 1902.

Synopsis of the Measure to be Voted Upon on Thursday Next by People of Ontario

As the day for polling on the referendum, Dec. 4th, approaches, an increasing number of electors are enquiring: "What are we asked to vote upon?" It is hard to give a statement of the provisions of that act of 223 sections, and several hundred sub-sections, enough to fill 60 columns of the Times, in the compass of a newspaper paragraph, but the following may serve to aid people in obtaining some knowledge of the measure to be voted on:

The Liquor Act of 1902 is divided into two parts. The first, which contains 104 clauses, has solely to do with the means by which the electors may bring the second, or prohibitory part, into force.

The question to be submitted to the electors is this: "Are you in favor of bringing into force the Liquor Act, 1902?"

All persons who were entitled to vote at the last general election may vote on this question, provided they have remained residents of the Province. If a majority shall vote in the affirmative, and if that majority exceeds one-half of those who voted in the Provincial general election of 1898, then the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council shall issue a proclamation calling the second prohibitory part into force.

A bare majority of the votes cast in 1898 would be 212,723, so that the supporters of the law must first equal that, and, second, have a majority of the vote actually cast on the referendum.

The Prohibitory Clauses.

In considering the second part of the Act we shall first deal with the prohibitory clause. Under section 151 no person shall keep or expose for sale or barter intoxicating liquors without first having obtained a druggist's wholesale or retail license. An infraction will render the culprit liable to a fine of not less than $200 or more than $1,000, or in default of payment, imprisonment from three to six months.

Another clause, 156, makes it an offence to use or consume liquor in the Province, purchased or received from any person within the Province unless it be purchased and received from a licensee." This clause does not apply to persons who, within a private dwelling, innocently use liquor not legally purchased. The penalty for the infraction of this section is a fine of not less than $50 or more than $200 for the first offence, or in default of payment, imprisonment for not less than two months or more than four months. For the second offence the fine may range from $100 to $500, with the alternative of imprisonment of not less than four or more than eight months.

No club or society may keep liquor on its premises for sale or for use. (Section 165.) No person may purchase any liquor, under pain of heavy penalties, from persons not authorized to sell. (Section 150.) No liquor may be drunk upon any licensed premises. (Section 159.)

Who May Sell.

Wholesale and retail druggists duly registered as such, may obtain licenses to sell liquors. (Section 107.) By an interpretation clause it is enacted that a wholesale druggist may sell alcohol not exceeding ten gallons at any one time to any one person for mechanical and scientific purposes. To a medical practitioner or a licensed druggist the wholesaler may not sell more than five gallons at one time. No liquor may be wholesaled from 7 p.m. on Saturday, until 7 a.m. on Monday, or from eight o'clock any other night, until seven in the morning. A record must be kept of all sales, each of which must be accompanied by an affidavit setting forth pose for which liquor is wanted.

Retailers may sell on the bona-fide prescription of a medical practitioner, (section 143.) No more than one sale of liquor may be made on one prescription. They may also sell one pint of liquor to a dentist for use in his profession, and one gallon to a veterinary surgeon for the same purpose. To ministers of of the Gospel retailers may sell wine for sacramental purposes. All prescriptions and requests must be retained for a year, and any person may inspect them. (Section 145.). A record must be kept of all transactions.

Who May Store Liquor.

No liquor may be kept or stored in any place, other than a private dwelling, unless in the premises of a licensed druggist. (Section 152.). It is provided however, that a person using liquor for mechanical or scientific purposes may have in his possession ten gallons. A clergyman may have two gallons of wine for sacramental purposes. A public hospital may keep a supply for patients. A sick person may have liquor in his room, but must see that nobody else drinks it. A physician may carry two quarts with him when he visits a patient. A dentist may have a pint in his office, and a veterinary surgeon may keep a gallon on hand.

Importations are Permitted.

The crucial point of the whole measure is section 223, dealing with importations. That section makes it clear that everyone may import whatever he wants. It is as follows: "While this act is intended to prohibit and shall prohibit transactions of liquor which take place wholly within the Province of Ontario, except under license, or as otherwise specially provided by this act, and restrict the consumption of liquor within the limits of the Province of Ontario, it shall not affect and is not intended to effect, bona-fide transactions of liquor between a person in the Province of Ontario and a person in another province or in a foreign country, and the provisions of this act shall not be construed accordingly."

To sum up, hotels and stores may not sell. Druggists may supply liquor for specific purposes. Anyone wanting liquor as a beverage must import it from another province or a foreign country. This is the meaning of the Liquor Act, 1902."

WILL RESIDE IN PETERBOROUGH

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lang, of Omemee Remembered by their Friends

Omemee Mirror:— A number of the members of the W.M.S. of the Methodist church, accompanied by their husbands, called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Lang on Wednesday evening, Nov. 19th, to bid them good-bye before their removal to Peterborough. A presentation was made to Mrs. Lang of a sterling silver salad fork and spoon, accompanied by the following address:

Omemee, Nov. 19th, 1902.

Dear Mrs. Lang,— The members of the Women's Missionary Society feel that they cannot allow you to leave Omemee without expressing their appreciation of the help you have been in their Society, as well as in every department of church work. You will be missed especially in the service of song, which has so often been enhanced by your skill as a player and leader.

We regret that you and your husband and family are leaving our church here, as we can ill afford to lose such loyal members, faithful workers, and liberal givers, as you have all proved to be, but we know that wherever your lot may be cast, the church will benefit by your liberality and labors.

We ask you to accept this salad fork and spoon as a remembrance of your Omemee friends, and trust that pleasant memories may ever be associated with them.

We pray that God's blessing may rest upon you, so that prosperity and happiness may follow you in your new home, and when life is over that we may all meet in the Home above.

Mrs. Lang was completely taken by surprise but Mr. Lang replied for her in a few well-chosen words.

Rev. Mr. Brown and some of the gentlemen present made short speeches, all expressing their regret at the loss of Mr. and Mrs. Lang and their family to the church and the community. Refreshments were partaken of, and a pleasant, social hour spent.

POISONED CHOCOLATES MAILED TO A WOMAN

Philadelphia, Nov. 27— Mrs. Harry F. Ackerhausen, wife of a liquor dealer at 2225 Ridge Avenue, is critically ill from eating a box of poisoned cream chocolate-covered mints, mailed to her on Sunday night. A narcotic had been injected into several of the candies, while in others small pins had been placed.

Mrs. Ackerhausen received the box yesterday morning. She had swallowed several of the creams before her teeth clenched on a hard substance. In the candy she found several small pins. Investigation showed that others contained pins. An hour later she became unconscious. When physicians arrived the woman was in a state of coma. Emetics were administered, and after vigorous treatment the woman was taken out of immediate danger. It is believed that she swallowed a number of pins, however, and an X-ray investigation will be made of her stomach.

The police have been able to find no clues. Mrs. Ackerhausen is a comely woman of 25, and is Ackerhausen's second wife.

—The many friends of Miss Vernie McFarlane, Young's Point, who has been seriously ill at St. Joseph's Hospital, will be pleased to learn that she is progressing favorably.

KRUPP LEAVES $75,000,000

Will Says the Gun Works at Essen Must Remain Property of His Family

Berlin, Nov. 28.—The Tageblatt says that under the will of the late Herr von Krupp the works at Essen become the property of his widow. There is a proviso that the works shall not be sold or transferred to a company within twenty-five years of the testator's death. On the death of the widow the eldest daughter will inherit the works.

Commenting on the sudden death of Herr von Krupp the Cologne Gazette says that during the last few years the great gunmaker, at the suggestion of the Kaiser, interested himself a great deal in naval affairs. The acquisition of the Germania dock yards at Kiel was due not only to business reasons, but also to the personal interest he felt in the development of Germany's naval power.

The newspapers estimate Herr Krupp's estate at 200,000,000 marks. The funeral, which will be an elaborate one, will take place on Wednesday. Emperor William will attend.

A NOTED SCIENTIST HAS LED A DOUBLE LIFE

Professor John Goodfellow the Last Man An Acquaintance Would Suspect.

London, Nov. 28.—One of the most startling stories of double life revealed for a long time has come out at Old Bailey. Who among his acquaintances would have dreamed that Professor John Goodfellow, eminent scientist, analyst, and author, of standard works, could have been guilty of anything of the sort! At the Police Court, where he pleaded guilty of forging a check for £500 ($2,500) on Messrs. Pink, for whom he did some work as an analyst, it was stated in the evidence that he had an income of £1,500 ($7,500) a year at least. While the Professor's wife and child were living in a small room at Westham, with hardly anything to eat, he himself was living luxuriously in a bungalow at Thames Ditton, where he had a steam launch on the river, and showered money lavishly on women friends. It also transpired that, for three years he had been in the clutches of money-lenders. He was sent to penal servitude for three years, a brilliant career thus coming to a sad termination.

THE BLIND TIGER

Temperance People in Indiana Baffled by Clever Device of Saloon Men

Paoli, Ind., Nov. 28.—The anti-saloon people here are encountering an obstacle in their fight against the saloons which places them in a position there they are undecided as to what course to pursue. The saloons of the town were all defeated by remonstrances, and the town was supposed to be "dry" for the first time in many years. But since license was refused all saloon applicants here, two have assumed undue privileges and fitted up their saloons with all the equipment of "blind tigers" and the patronage of these resorts has been very liberal by the saloon element. The device is so arranged that the person seeking a drink can put his money on a wheel and it turns around behind a tight inclosure where there is someone who fills the order, but cannot be seen. In this way it makes it impossible to prosecute the offenders, as they cannot be seen and there could be no convicting evidence as to who they are. The prices of all kinds of drinks are posted over the wheel so the customer has only to place his money on the wheel, call for what he wants, and the drink is soon forthcoming.

WEDDING BELLS

Nuptials of Mr. Adam H. Gillespie, of Town and Miss Mary E. Benn of Tweed

The Tweed News has the following on the marriage of Mr. A. H. Gillespie, a Peterborough boy, and Miss Mary Benn, of that place—

A very pretty wedding was solemnized yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Benn, when their daughter, Miss Mary Ethel, was united in marriage to Mr. Adam H. Gillespie, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed in the drawing room, which was very prettily decorated with flowers and foliage, by Rev. J. W. Totten in the presence of about fifty invited guests.

The bride, who is one of Tweed's most estimable and popular young ladies looked her best in a gown of white silk organdie, wearing the regulation bridal veil and carrying a huge boquet of white chrysanthemums. The duties of bridesmaid were performed by Miss Hobert, who also wore a gown of white organdie, and carried a boquet similar to the bride. Mr. W. J. Bathgate, of Peterborough, assisted the groom. The bride was the recipient of many pretty and valuable presents, among which was a gold watch from the groom. The bridesmaid was the recipient of a brooch from the groom. After the ceremony the guests sat down to a recherche wedding dinner, to which ample justice was done. The groom, who was a resident of Tweed for some time and has many friends here, is to be congratulated on winning such an estimable young lady as his bride, and their many young friends unite in wishing them every happiness and prosperity. The happy young couple left on the 3.30 train for their new home in Peterborough. Among the invited guests from a distance who were present were—Mr. J. P. Lancaster, of the Havelock Standard; Misses Jamieson and Gillespie and Mr. W. J. Bathgate, Peterborough, and Mr. G. W. Houston, Buffalo, N.Y.

ALD. ROGER FOR MAYOR

With Mayor Denne but Five Votes Behind—Ald. Best in Third Place

Alderman Morrison Secures Second Place for Alderman, with Mr. A. W. Creasman but 20 Votes Ahead—The Position of the Other Candidates has not Been Materially Changed

Thursday's and Friday's voting for candidates for Mayor and Aldermen, leave Ald. G. M. Roger still ahead for the Chief Magistrate's position, with, however, but 5 votes ahead of Mayor Denne. For Alderman, Ald. Morrison has been voted into second place with Mr. A. W. Creasman still in the lead. Mr. R. F. McWilliams has notified the Times that, under any circumstances, he feels that he is too young to be considered a desirable candidate for Mayor, although he appreciates the interest manifested in him by those who have considered him worthy of that office. We have therefore taken the liberty to transfer his name name to the list of candidates for Alderman, and the 110 votes recorded for him for Mayor, together with 50 recently sent in with his name for both offices, places him sixth in the list. Once more we ask voters to fill up every blank in the coupon—1 for Mayor and 10 for Aldermen.

A NEW SHORT LINE

Completion of the Road From Whitney Station to Lake Opeongo

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—After fifteen months' continuous labor the railway from Whitney Station on the western division of the Canada Atlantic to Lake Opeongo, was completed last week. Lumber trains are now running daily on the new line, which connects the limits of the St. Anthony Lumber Co., bordering on Lake Opeongo, and the mill at Whitney. By the construction of the railway, which is 15 miles in length, a saving of 50 miles is effected in the transportation of the logs. Hitherto they have been moved to the mill by a round-about route which entailed a journey of many days duration. As this route was only accessible about seven months in the year the mill had to close down the rest of the time. With the transportation by rail the steam plant can be operated the year round, if necessary. Owing to the scarcity and high price of good lumber, it will probably be operated this winter. syndicates have been looking over Can-

Washington, Nov. 28.—Consul-General Bittinger, reporting ot the State Department from Montreal, says that millions of dollars of American capital have recently been invested in the Dominion in agricultural and timber lands and mining and manufacturing industries. Canada's internal development in the last few years has been remarkable. In addition to those investments Consul-General Bittinger adds that many American syndicates have been looking over the ground in Canada in the last few months.

ENGLAND AND GERMANY

Great Britain Has Nothing to Gain by Closer Friendship

London, Nov. 27.—Englishmen who keep their heads ask how a dangerous naval domination can possibly be built on such a commercial foundation. There is, moreover, the undoubted desire of England and France, and possibly also of Russia, to clear up outstanding disputes, coincident with which is the remarkable readiness of some French Ministers to slacken France's naval activities. If the Kaiser has designs on British interests this Anglo-French rapprochement must be sadly disconcerting. In any case, England has nothing to gain from a closer friendship with Germany than with France or Russia. Lord Lansdowne and Mr. Balfour show no signs of forgetting the central fact of British policy.

A MISSING CHILD

Posses of Men with Bloodhounds Scouring the Country

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 27.—Pretty little five-year-old Luna Joyner, daughter of Mrs. Ida V. Joyner, who resides about one mile and a half from Church road, Dinwiddie county, a station on the Norfolk and Western Railroad, has been missing from her home since last Monday, and nothing can be learned as to her whereabouts.

For days and nights past posses of men with bloodhounds have been scouring the country for miles around in search of the little one, but up to tonight no trace of her has been found. Mrs. Joyner is in a most precarious condition on account of the mysterious disappearance of her child, and to-day she published a notice in the newspapers of this city offering a reward for the return of the child, who, she believes, has been kidnaped.

Luna is a beautiful child with long auburn hair and curls in waving ringlets, has a bright tinted complexion and dark blue eyes. She was last seen by her mother about 11 o'clock on the morning of her disappearance.

BONES BROKEN

In Eight Places to Straighten Legs of Negro Boy, Who is Now Cured

McKeesport, Penn., Nov. 27.—An interesting operation has been successfully performed in the West Penn Hospital in straightening the limbs of Russell Hedrick, a negro boy of McKeesport. The boy's limbs were broken in eight places at the hospital in order to straighten them, as the legs were so crooked that he was unable to walk.

Physicians consider the case one of the most remarkable in modern surgery. Operations of the character are often performed, but none are on record as being successful where the patient was so badly crippled or where so many fractures of the limbs were necessary in order to straighten them.

In each leg two incisions were made to the bones. Then the bones of each leg were broken in two places, making in all eight separate fractures. The limbs were then set so as to straighten the bones, and the members encased in plaster casts. It required about the time of an ordinary fracture to heal until the bones had knit together again. youth of the patient and the pliability of the bones rendered it possible for the bones to unite at angles other than those at which they had been broken.

The child is now completely cured.

NEARLY EVERY CORPSE STOLEN FROM GRAVEYARD

A Cemetery in Indiana Almost Denuded of Its Dead

FORTY-ONE MEN ARE UNDER ARREST

On Charge of Robbing Graves and Selling Their Votes—All Have Pleaded Not Guilty

Indianapolis, Nov. 27.—The long-delayed report from the County Grand Jury came this afternoon, and 41 indictments were reported—the majority being in the grave-robbing and vote-selling cases. In addition to the indictments previously returned against the negro ghouls headed by Cantrell and now in jail, Albert Hunt, Walter and Leroy Williams, William McElroy, and Garfield Buckner, colored, and John McEndree, white, were indicted for taking and concealing corpses.

Hunt is accused of robbing the grave of Edward Pedigo; Buckner and McElroy with opening the grave of Jennie Hargrove; Leroy Williams with stealing the body of Meredith McMullen; Walter Williams that of Rosa Neidlinger, and McEndry that of Caroline Tyler.

All of these defendants were arraigned and entered pleas of not guilty. Other indictments against alleged grave robbers were withheld from publicity because arrests have not yet been made.

SAW IT DONE.

Charles Riggs, druggists, and Dr. Clarence Kincaid, former medical students, who accompanied a gang of grave robbers to see how a body was lifted, were dismissed. Immediately after the report had been received the attorneys for Dr. J. C. Alexander, demonstrator of the Central College, whose trial is set for December 1, appeared and demanded a change of venue from Judge Alford of the criminal bench, and this will be granted.

Two indictments for alleged vote-selling are reported as having been returned on the evidence of Jacob Miller and Emanuel Hull, who are openly charged with having worked a scheme in order to get $100 under the law offered to any one who furnished evidence to convict another of selling his vote. The accused say they supposed the money was given them for campaign expenses, and that the receipt signed was in earnest of the claim that the giver wanted something to show that he was using the candidate's money in good shape.

The farmers at Five Points, southeast of this city, have discovered that one of the cemetries in that vicinity has been plundered of nearly all its dead, and that the ghouls received "tips" from some one in that vicinity when burials were made. This evening Henry Hartman, representing the farmers, called upon Cantrell, requesting the names of the party giving the "tip," intimating that the case would be settled out of court if they found out who it was. Cantrell declined to tell, saying it would be unfair to the detectives, but he promised it would come out at the trial. Among the bodies purloined was that of Henry Harding, father-in-law of Hartman. The latter reported that all the farmers in his part of the country were favorable to giving Cantrell a light sentence, for, without his voluntary admissions, the grave robbing business would have gone on indefinitely.

UNABLE SERIOUSLY TO RESIST THE BRITISH.

Turkey Accepts New Frontier Fixed by the British Foreign Office

London, Nov. 28—A Constantinople correspondent of the Deutche Zeitung, in a despatch quoted by a Vienna correspondent, says that the British are pursuing their old policy of intrigue in South Arabia. It is declared that they are aiming at the constant extension of Aden territory and the absorption of independent tribes, whom they support in resisting the authority of Turkey. It is alleged that a few days ago the British Ambassador at Constantinople informed Turkey that the British Foreign Office had fixed the frontier of southern Arabia, which question had been submitted to a boundary commission. Turkey accepted the new frontier, being unable to seriously resist the British.

London, Nov. 28—In an editorial article today The Times says that Alfred Mosely's industrial commission has met in the United States with true American hospitality and open-mindedness, and Mosely's idea is one that appeals forcibly to an alert and practical American intelligence. There can be no doubt that Mosely's excellent example will be followed in the United States as well as in England with immense benefit to all concerned. One of the things that delegates most certainly have everywhere noted is the superior alertness and business keenness of the average American employer. There is, indeed, great room for another Mosely commission to take masters about the United States and show them how far they are behind the Americans.

London, Nov. 28—It is announced that Lord Reay has been elected first president of the British Academy. Lord Reay has been Chairman of the London School Board since 1897. He was formerly Governor of Bombay, and afterwards Under Secretary for India. He is now President of the Royal Asiatic Society and of the University College, London.

London, Nov. 28—The bill for the municipalization of public services says a Rome correspondent, has been severely criticized in the Chamber of Deputies by Baron Sonnino. The bill is a comprehensive measure, including its scope bakeries—in case of a rise in the price of bread—every form of locomotion, and funerals. A serious blot on the bill is the method provided for valuing properties to be expropriated, the profits being reckoned on the average for the past five years. This is obviously unfair to new undertakings, which are often worked at a loss at first.

London Nov. 28—A Paris correspondent says that Frederick Passy, president of of the French Arbitration Society, has warmly congratulated the Presidents of the United States and Mexico on the fact that those countries were the first to motion The Hague tribunal.

London, Nov. 28—A Constantinople correspondent says that the Russian Ambassador at his audience with the Sultan on Wednesday, specially recommended the dismissal of the valis of Monastir and Kossovo. He also proposed the reorganization of Gendarmerie, so that it should include a Christian element, and not consist solely of Albanian Mussulmans. The Ambassador suggested the reform of the oppressive system of tithe collection, and generally urged measures to promote the contentment of the Macedonian population.

THE RICH LANDS OF THE FAR, FAR NORTH

Prof. Macoun Tells of Boundary Line where al Grains will Grow

Ottawa, Nov. 28—There is available in the work of the Geological survey of Canada an immense fund of information with regard to the northern belt of the Dominion which there is talk of opening up by means of another transcontinental railway. It has been surveyed by these men from Labrador across to the Pacific Coast. Two members of the staff who have, between them, covered the stretch from James' Bay to the Peace River Pass are Prof. John Macoun and his son, Jas. W. Macoun.

The former said this morning of the Peace River region: "It is a country capable of immense development. There is in it the very best alluvial soil to a depth of 150 feet, and there is being grown there today all the different grains."

"Will it grow wheat without danger of frost?"

"Yes, as well as the land further south. Some people imagine that the further north you go on this continent the heavier the snowfall. But I can tell you from experience that throughout a large part of the northern country the snowfall is lighter than here in Ottawa.

"Mr Ogilvie brought down with him a few years ago wheat that had been grown at Fort Providence, away up toward the Arctic circle, eight hundred miles north of the line that separates us from the States. I myself saw at Isle a la Crosse, further east than the Peace River, potatoes growing in the fields on the 22nd of September. That was thirty years ago.

"In 1876 I brought down with me from Athabasca wheat that took the prize at the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia, and was a revelation to the world. There is no question but wheat can be grown all the way across the northern belt to James Bay.

"I am just now preparing my report on my summer's work in the Yukon, and will supply proof that from the flora I saw there, wheat can be grown even in that region. For that matter, I brought some down with me this fall.

"I have taken for many years an intense interest in the northern belt of the Dominion, and am satisfied that it has before it a great future as an agricultural and grazing country, where you cannot raise wheat, you can get more money out of other crops or out of cattle raising."

James M. Macoun corroborated his father's statements. He mentioned several points in this northern district where he had seen wheat in cultivation. Among them were Brunswick House, half way between Lake Superior and James' Bay; Norway House, North of Lake Winnipeg, five hundred miles north of the international border; Montreal Lake, in a like latitude; Lake Isle a la Crosse, further north still. But there were many other settlements in which he saw flora and vegetation that could not exist in a climate too cold for wheat. Mr. Macoun, however, thinks far more money could be made by turning these fields to grazing.

Excursions to Guelph

The Provincial Winter Fair at Guelph this year should be visited by every farmer and stockman, and by every person interested in the advancement of agriculture and the breeding of live stock and poultry. $7,000 are offered in prizes. The new buildings have increased facilities both for exhibits and visitors. Daily lectures by well known and expert authorities on the different subjects, will be found both instructive and interesting. The Grand Trunk Railway will issue round trip tickets at single first class fare, from stations west of Kingston, good going Dec. 7th, to 12th, inclusive, and valid returning until Dec. 15th, 1902. Further particulars from Agents.

KEENE.

—A very interesting event took place at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church on Wednesday morning, when Clara Maude, daughter of Charles Bell, and Thomas J. Walsh, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. Father Phelan, of Young's Point. Miss Lottie Bell, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Frank Walsh assisted the groom. The bride was dressed in a handsome traveling gown, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The marriage took place at 9 o'clock, after which solemn high mass was celebrated. Mrs. Daniel McCarthy played the wedding march, and also for the mass. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion with evergreens and flowers. After the marriage the immediate friends of the bride and groom were given a sumptuous wedding breakfast at the home of the bride. The presents were numerous and costly, testifying to the high esteem in which the bride is held. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Walsh drove to Peterborough, where they took the 5 o'clock train for Toronto, where they will reside. We join the many friends of bride and groom in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

—Rev. Mr. Lawson, of Addison, Ont., gave a lecture in the town hall on Wednesday evening, on the temperance question. There was a small attendance on account of the inclement weather. Mr. Lawson is a talented orator, and brought out his side of the question in a masterly manner.

—Dr. Halliday, of Peterborough, was in the village on Wednesday attending little Harold Robinson, who is critically ill.

—Professor Dahlberg, eye specialist, was in the village on Wednesday and Thursday, at Dr. Harrison's office.

A CONCRETE IDEA

A correspondent of the Bricklayer and Mason, the official organ of the Bricklayers' and Masons' Union, mentions several instances of the use of concrete in classes of work that formerly required bricks and masonry.

An immense establishment, one of the largest engine works in Milwaukee, he writes, "has all the foundations as well as the foundations for machinery, all fly-wheel pits, and all the water tanks, built of concrete instead of brick and stone, as heretofore."

In another establishment, which he asserts is the largest engine works in the country, "all the foundations for the buildings, as well as the engine beds, the water tanks and every machine, sets on a solid mass of concrete. The entire foundation for this great building is done by the man with the shovel. In some of our largest buildings in the heart of our city, the floors are all arched with concrete, instead of tile or brick, as in former years."

A GOOD SUGGESTION

A correspondent writing to the Toronto World makes the following suggestion with which the many friends and admirers of Sir Sandford Fleming will heartily agree: "The suggestion has been made, and it is a good one, that the King should give a peerage to Sir Sandford Fleming of Ottawa. He is the one of all Canadians that is most worthy of the honor. We have two peers already hailing from Canada—Lord Strathcona and Lord Mountstephen—both grand men and grand in the disposal of their wealth in patriotic and philanthropic matters. Reflection shows that they were rewarded largely because of wealth generously distributed. But in Sir Sandford's case we have a man who was the engineer of the Canadian Pacific railroad and the first man who suggested the wonderful Pacific cable uniting us of the West to our fellows of the far East. He not only suggested this, but to my knowledge spent money lavishly on the matter, fought the question out against a host of opponents, and now has the thanks of the world and the solid satisfaction of its completion. He has not only been for years, but now is, the chancellor of Queen's university, and has all along been the pioneer in modes of thought, the helper of the worthy and the wearer of a blameless character in private life. It is time that Canada and England should see that all those coupled with the highest scientific attainments should receive the highest of rewards that the crown can give."

CONSOLIDATED COUNTRY SCHOOLS

The consolidation of country schools in some sections of the state of Massachusetts having been tried and proved a success, the question is now a live one in the districts where the old conditions still prevail.

Some time ago fifty letters were sent to the parents of pupils attending one of the new consolidated schools. With only three exceptions all the replies showed the parents were convinced of the great improvement that had been brought about by combining three or four of the former small schools into one large central school.

The following is a brief summary, from the private letters received, showing what the parents considered had been brought about by the consolidation of the schools:

1—Better education and more desire for it among children of school age.

2—More interest taken in the schools by the parents.

3—Better teachers and greater sympathy between schools and homes.

4—Better health among the scholars.

5—The social influence had been widened and reflected itself in reading circles and clubs for mutual improvement.

6—Better roads, necessitated by the transportation of the pupils.

Some of the parents replied that they found that the pupils from the consolidated schools were in greater demand for situations as clerks and positions of responsibility than the pupils from the small, poorly equipped schools.

Many leading Canadian agricultural papers are now discussing this question to demand attention from the different provincial governments.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

They are getting along nicely in South Africa. Martial law has been suspended throughout the country — a fact which speaks volumes for the loyal manner in which the Boers have accepted the new rule. Mr. Chamberlain will not find his job in South Africa to be very hard.

KEENE.

—A very interesting event took place at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church on Wednesday morning, when Clara Maude, daughter of Charles Bell, and Thomas J. Walsh, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. Father Phelan, of Young's Point. Miss Lottie Bell, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Frank Walsh assisted the groom. The bride was dressed in a handsome traveling gown, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The marriage took place at 9 o'clock, after which solemn high mass was celebrated. Mrs. Daniel McCarthy played the wedding march, and also for the mass. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion with evergreens and flowers. After the marriage the immediate friends of the bride and groom were given a sumptuous wedding breakfast at the home of the bride. The presents were numerous and costly, testifying to the high esteem in which the bride is held. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Walsh drove to Peterborough, where they took the 5 o'clock train for Toronto, where they will reside. We join the many friends of bride and groom in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

—Rev. Mr. Lawson, of Addison, Ont., gave a lecture in the town hall on Wednesday evening, on the temperance question. There was a small attendance on account of the inclement weather. Mr. Lawson is a talented orator, and brought out his side of the question in a masterly manner.

—Dr. Halliday, of Peterborough, was in the village on Wednesday attending little Harold Robinson, who is critically ill.

—Professor DeMilberg, eye specialist, was in the village on Wednesday and Thursday, at Dr. Harrison's office.

—The pupils of the public school are working hard to make their Christmas concert a success. Mr. T. J. Wallace principal, always takes great pains training the children, and the concert is always a financial success. The money raised is used for making the school room more habitable for human beings.

—The village improvement society held a meeting on Monday evening. It was decided to hold a series of concerts during the winter, for the purpose of raising money to improve the village.

sleep! She would have us believe that she's in bed every night at ten."

"You've plied her with too much champagne, oh, generous host!" cried one of the women.

"Perhaps," confessed Macaire, while everybody laughed. "The child must not have any more to-night. Next time you meet her I warrant she'll do better. In a month she'll hold her own with any of you."

"To the next meeting!" Glasses were lifted, and much champagne was drunk.

"Poor little dear, she doesn't look very comfortable!" giggled a lady in many diamonds and a small allowance of bodice. "She won't be able to sit up with us bigger children for dessert."

"I'll give instructions for her to be taken away where she can have her nap out in peace," said Macaire, his eyes viciously bright. He nodded to a footman, who moved forward respectfully to take his master's order; and at this instant, without being announced, Hope Newcome came into the house.

"Von Zellheim!" exclaimed one of the men.

Winifred's closing eyes opened wide for the fraction of a second. They were no longer bright, but dull and curiously glassy. "Help!" she whispered, rather than spoke, straining to make her voice heard as one tries to scream and break the cold spell of a nightmare. Then her head fell forward again, and she would have slipped from her chair to the floor had not Macaire caught her.

It was the movement, not the scarcely audible whisper, which drew Hope Newcome's eyes to the drooping figure in white; and, seeing the lovely, pallid face of Winifred Gray, he sprang towards her, his eyes blazing incredulous horror at her presence here.

"This is a pleasant surprise, my dear Von Zellheim," said Macaire, his expression somewhat belying his words. "Your pardon for one moment while I see to Miss Gray's comfort, and a place shall be made for you. Our young friend's head is not as strong as it might be, and she has been overcome by a little more champagne than she's been accustomed to taking."

For an instant Hope Newcome had lost self-control; but in the short interval occupied by the millionaire's excuses he had regained it. He knew Winifred Gray; and he knew Macaire—at last! Never in his life of vicissitudes, perhaps, had he received such a shock as the sight of Winifred Gray at Macaire's house, dining in this company, had given; but, though he was absolutely ignorant of the circumstances which had led up to her coming, it took him no longer than a second to divine that she was the victim of some plot—possibly not the first web which this cunning spider had spun for her undoing. And at the end of that one second he had made up his mind how to act.

"Whatever had caused Miss Gray's indisposition it is certainly not due to champagne," he said, in a loud, cold voice, to be heard by everyone. "I know her well enough to vouch for that, since she is to be my wife. And as she is to be my wife it is my place to take care of her. I will relieve you of the trouble, Mr. Macaire."

As he spoke he stepped forward as if to remove her from Macaire's arms.

It was the first time that the millionaire had touched Winifred Gray more familiarly than to take her hand. The fragrance of her yellow-brown hair was intoxicatingly sweet in his nostrils; he had been half drunk with the joy of success at last; and with an oath he drew back from the younger man who had just announced himself his rival. There was no reason for holding his fierce temper in, so far as he knew, and he loosed it savagely.

"How dare you?" he demanded. "She's nothing to you, you liar. She's mine, or she wouldn't be here to-night."

Newcome did not answer, but grasping Macaire's wrist with one of his brown, strong hands, he twisted it back so that the joint cracked in its socket, and the millionaire gave a shrill, irrepressible squeal of pain.

Quietly Newcome took Winifred from him, holding her against his shoulder, and defying Macaire with the cold menace of his dark eyes.

Always hideous, the red, glazed face of Nero the Second was appalling in his rage. At sight of it the women sprang up from the table, pale under their paint. Glasses were overturned, and eyes that had gazed on many a strange scene opened wide to behold something of more than common interest.

"You dog; you common cur that I took from the gutter!" shrieked Macaire. "You puppet that I hired with my money to dance at my bidding! You thought you might presume on your brute strength to come here and insult me in my own house, I suppose, since our contract wasn't out yet. But it's got hardly a month more to run——"

"We'll call it cancelled now," said Hope Newcome. "You and I will have no more contracts in future."

"Everyone here shall know who you are," Macaire went on, furiously. "All the world that I've been laughing at shall know to-morrow, and where will you be then? Why, kicked back to your kennel by the women who've made you their pet."

"My kennel's rather a nice one," said Newcome, "Schloss Zellheim, on the Rhine. It is no longer a ruin. I have had it restored in these last few months. I hope to take Miss Gray there; only she will then be the Baroness von Zellheim, and any man who has told lies about her will have been horse-whipped into publicly apologizing."

"Schloss Zellheim!" sneered Macaire. "The money you've saved out of what I flung to you wouldn't have bought it."

"The ruined castle has been the property of my family for many years, though they were absentees, and too poor to restore it. That has been my privilege."

"Pshaw!" laughed Macaire, hatefully. "These friends will know how much to believe of that, and what to tell in their clubs to-morrow when I say that you've no more right to the name of Von Zellheim than I have. I gave you the name, to make sport for myself, and sport I've had, but there's better to come. For six months your pay for breaking Joey Nash and being at my beck and call was to continue—good pay, a thousand pounds a month, to say nothing of the sum you got down to start with——"

"It's trebled now," cut in Newcome, coolly. "You gave me such excellent advice as to speculations. I took it, and succeeded beyond my best hopes. That's the one thing for which I have to thank you."

"There speaks your dog's ingratitude. But many a servant's got rich in his master's service; and you're my servant—or you're bound by your own word to be—till the end of the six months, and everybody shall know it; everybody shall hear the great joke now and laugh with

10,000 shares 7 per cent. Cumulative Preference Stock, par value $100 each	$1,000,000 00
Total Capitalization	$6,000,000 00

PREFERENCE STOCK

This Stock is preferred both as to Capital and Dividends.

The shares are entitled to cumulative preferential dividends from the net earnings of the Company, at the rate of 7 per cent per annum, payable half-yearly on the first days of April and October. They may, at the option of the holder, be exchanged for common shares. They are subject to be called in, in whole or in part, by the Company, at $115.00 per share, at any time on or after 1st January, 1909.

The total issue of Preferred Stock is only $1,000,000.00, the whole of which is now offered.

Subscriptions for 10,000 shares of $100 each of the 7 per cent Preferred Stock of the CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY will now be received at par, that is, $100 for each $100 share as follows:—

per cent on application.
20 per cent on allotment.
25 per cent each 30 days thereafter.

One share of common, par value $100.00, given with each share of preferred.

The whole of the instalments remaining unpaid at any time may be prepaid in full. A discount of one per cent will be allowed upon the par of each share prepaid at time of allotment.

Notice of allotment will be sent promptly by ordinary letter.

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company.

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are:—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey:—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4.05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5.23
	100.00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 ton [illegible] re above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide water, within 100 miles of the works

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows:—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4 00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows:—

	ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902, to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2.70
July 1st, 1903, " " 1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904, " " 1905	1.65	1.65
July 1st, 1905, " " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906, " " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows:—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6½ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000 00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000.00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to ... $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is ... $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is ... $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

Sparrow Housekeeping.

Have you ever watched a pair of sparrows when first the house-hunting and building mania comes upon them? How stupendously busy they are, especially the cock, and what a tremendous lot he has to say! As a matter of fact, his missus does all the real work, and he supplies all the theory, which she consistently disregards.

Not that Mrs. Sparrow works impetuously, as though time permitted of no deliberation. On the contrary, she uses the greatest deliberation in the performance of every action, however trivial. Watch her when she is considering the eligibility of, let us say, a bit of string which she has found in the garden path, as material to be used in the building of a nest over which she is busy. First she will sit upon a gooseberry twig a yard or two away and inspect that morsel of string from the south-east.

Then she will flit over to the apple tree close by and study it from the north-west. Then she will examine it from other points of the compass. At last she will hop up to it and pull it about—apparently accepting it, but rejecting it again, still uncertain as to its suitability for some purpose exactly defined in her foolish little mind. At last she will decide to use it, and, seizing it, she will fly up to her nest with the treasure; but, vacillating once again, she drops it at the very threshold, and sits upon the roof a little while, eying it and chattering, explaining to her lord, perhaps, that it would have done well enough if it had been longer or shorter, or thicker or thinner, or heaven knows what. Finally she will flit down and carry it away to use, and behold! to-morrow she has turned it out once more, and it lies upon the garden path a rejected thing. Not for long, however, for either she herself or some other bird has removed it next time one looks for the much considered scrap.

That conceited and self-assertive little person, her lord and master, is far less deliberate in his actions. He is more certain of himself, being convinced that he knows everything, and that to consider and weigh and deliberate is a waste of time.

He is anxious to help with the nest-making, and holds forth without ceasing while his lady builds. Occasionally he lends a hand. He catches sight of a straw, it may be, or a small piece of stick, and it occurs to him that here is the very thing his foolish wife has sought for days and failed to find. What does not occur to him is that he is a garrulous old incompetent, and knows no more about nest-building than he does about the laying of eggs. His wife knows all about him, however, and the straw is turned out of the nest again as soon as his back is turned. He has probably placed it in some impossible position, and—after explaining what a marvelous fellow he is, and what a treasure he has brought up in the way of building material—departed, forgetting all about the matter in a moment or two. Even when he sees that straw lying upon the garden path, so conceited is he that he does not recognize it, because he cannot contemplate the possibility of its rejection by the missus. He thinks he has found another treasure. "There," says he, dumping it down by her side as she sits resting, perhaps laying a little egg, in the semi-completed nest; "there's another splendid straw; how is it you don't come across them? I can find them whenever I like!"—"Longman's Magazine."

Telephone Etiquette.

Just and authoritative rules are needed that will fit the caller and the called. Says "Electrician:" Mr. Smith, a busy man of business, summons his office boy, and says, "Please get Mr. Jones on the wire." The boy does as directed. It happens that neither man has attained the luxury of a desk set. Accordingly, when Jones is informed by his boy that Mr. Smith wants to talk to him over the telephone he lays aside what he is doing and walks to the instrument. There he hears the familiar "Hold the wire a minute, please," and waits patiently, or perhaps impatiently, until Smith is notified that Mr. Jones is "on the wire," and goes to the telephone in his turn. Jones has wasted some minutes of his valuable time. Smith, on the other hand, has lost no time. He could have saved Jones the waiting by directing his boy to call up Jones' office and ascertain if he were in. Receiving an affirmative answer, he could then have stepped to the telephone and called for Jones, waiting himself until Jones responded. But in that case Smith would have waited, and Smith doesn't care to stand around any more than Jones does. Little vexations, like great problems, depend so much on the point of view. What we need is a system of rules that shall be equally respected by Smith and Jones, whether either be the seeker or the sought.

The "Hen Deceiver."

A friend of mine, says "Pick-Me-Up," has invented what he calls a "hen deceiver," for the purpose of promoting industry amongst the ladies of the farmyard. The apparatus is simple, and consists of a box for a nest, with a trapdoor for the bottom, so that when the hen lays an egg it drops through into a receiver underneath, the door closing automatically. When the hen gets up to look for the egg—it has gone, and she thinks she has made a mistake, and lays another. A hen has been known in this way to lay fifteen eggs at a sitting.

Ping-pong appears to be more successful than Christianity in India. The native ladies of the Punjab have taken it up.

"What do you mean by saying she just celebrated her wooden wedding?" "She married a blockhead."—Philadelphia "Press."

"Goodness! how that railroad stock does fluctuate." "Yes, it's a wise railroad stock that knows its own par."—Philadelphia "Press."

New Woman—"Husband, I need a change. The doctor said my life is too monotonous. I need excitement." Husband—"Try staying at home."

Greene—They tell me you send a good many things to the magazines, as well as to the daily papers. Come now, is there any money in literature? Browne—If there isn't it is no fault of mine. I never took any out of it.

Gone will be de days when de sporting extra prints de name of de winner before de last horse passes under de wire; de standing of de league clubs before de echoes of de empire's voice dies, as he calls tree strikes on de last man to bat. Never again, loidies and gents, shall we know more dan Edward Sevent about de chances of a Marquis of Cleveden, alas! Opera stars and chorus goils will cease to suffer from publicity, and may pursue deir ways and lost diamonds in obscurity and peace.

"Joinalism will feed in de sweet pastures of Reform. Managing editors will go dance jigs to mile stones, deir places filled by Professors of Etics from de leading univoisities and de Century Club. News editors of to-day will be chained in padded cells, deir duties performed by members of de Autors Club who can prove dey has ever wrote a book. Headline builders, copy re-writers, and telegraft editors who take de pledge will be let to write essays on Japanese poetry and basic steel ovens. No salaries will be paid, but every poisson employed may draw as much money as he feel likes, tree times a week. No poker games is to be allowed on de editorial floor until de make-up editor has time to sit in."

"Who would read such a silly poiper?" says Widdy.

"Madame," says Mr. Paul, "did anyone ever suspect Mr. Carnegie of being a fool? An advertisement for more editors will be printed in every edition of each poiper. Applications for such jobs must be written on coupons printed, also, in every edition of each poiper. De man what has filled out de most coupons gets de foist job."

"What of it?" says Widdy.

Mr. Paul looks tautful at her a while, den he says, "De mystery of newspoiper coupons is for woman's poisse, not her understanding. But dis I'll tell you: De poiper mills will never come within a mile of supplying white poiper for Mr. Carnegie's use. I has prepared a table of figures what shows dat inside a year de only people on eart, besides Mr. Carnegie and staff, who will have de price of a meal will be a few cranks who don't want a job on a Carnegie poiper, wit privileges of de cash drawer."

"I don't tink much of de plan," says Whiskers. "If I had two hundred millions I would do something more better dan dat."

The Drinking Orchid.

A plant termed by English "Public Opinion" the most extraordinary ever discovered has been brought to light by the exertions of Mr. R. A. Saverkrop of Philadelphia, who during his trips to South America has been for some years contributing to the collection of his friend, Professor N. E. Brown, of the Herbarium, Kew Gardens, London. The wonderful plant which Mr. Saverkrop has now found is an orchid that takes a drink whenever it feels thirsty by letting down a tube into the water. When not in use the tube is coiled up on top of the plant.

One hot afternoon, says Mr. Saverkrop, I sat down under some brushwood at the side of a lagoon on the Rio de la Plata. Near at hand was a forest of dead trees which had been choked to death by orchids and climbing cacti. In front of me, stretching over the waters of the lagoon and about a foot above it, was a branch of one of these dead trees. Here and there clusters of common plants del aire grew on it, and a network of green cacti twined round it.

Among the orchids I noted one different from the rest, the leaves, sharp lance-head shaped, growing all round the root and radiating from it. From the center or axis of the plant hung a long, slender stem about one-eighth of an inch thick and one-fourth of an inch wide. The lower end of this was in the water to a depth of about four inches.

I went over at once to examine my discovery, and was surprised when I touched the plant to see the center stem gradually contract and convulsively roll itself up in a spiral like a roll of tape. I found on examination that the stem was a long, slender, flat tube, open at the outer end, and connected at the inner end to the roots by a series of hairlike tubes.

By subsequent observation I found that when the plant was in need of water this tube would gradually unwind till it dipped into the water. Then it would slowly coil round and wind up, carrying with it the quantity of water that the part of the tube which had been immersed contained. When the final coil was made, the water was poured, as it were, directly into the roots of the plant. The coil remained in this position until the plant required more water. But should the plant be touched while the tube is extended, the orchid acts like the sensitive plant, and the coiling is more rapid.

I found many of these plants, all directly over the water, or over the place where he water had been. In the latter case it was almost pitiful to see how the tube would work its way over the ground in search of water that was not there.

High "Steaks."

In the grand gambling hall there was breathless silence.

A poker game between two of the billionaires was in progress.

About their table were packed and jammed hundreds of curious, excited people, watching their play with astonishment.

"I'll bet you a porterhouse steak!" says one.

Murmurs of awe rise from the watchers.

Clear and stern comes the answer:

"I'll see that porterhouse steak and raise you two rib roasts, a pig's knuckle and a can of ox-tail soup."

Here the onlookers gasped.

One of them, indeed, muttered:

"It is such things as this that make anarchists."

But, pooh! What know the hoi polloi of sport?—Baltimore "American."

KERN COUNTY (SUNSET DISTRICT) OIL COMPANIES PAID

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS IN AUGUST ALONE

MORGAN IN THE OIL INDUSTRY--NEW YORK FINANCIER AT THE HEAD OF A $20,000,000 COMPANY TO EXPLOIT CALIFORNIA FIELDS

Bakersfield, Cal., Sept. 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan is about to identify himself with the oil business in California. On October 12, or a few days later, surveyors will be put into the field, and will run lines to the ocean from Sunset, Coaling, McKittrick, Midway and Kern River fields to determine by which route it is most feasible to transport oil to tide water. The surveys will run over the coast range at a number of points, and also will go down the San Joaquin valley parallel with the line of the Standard.

A company having a capitalization of $5,000,000 has been organized for the construction of lines, pumping stations, storage tanks, and the like. Mr. Morgan and his associates have also formed a separate company, capitalized at $20,000,000, half of which will be invested in proven ground and the other half turned into a reserve fund.

It is stated that the Morgan syndicate will be prepared to handle 2,000,000 barrels the first year, and will increase that amount at the rate of 1,000,000 a year until the whole demand of the market is met.

ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL CO.'S GIGANTIC TRACT

will be developed and should prove a formidable rival for the new company.

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY own and control a large tract of absolutely oil proven asphalt land in the very heart of the best oil producing land of Kern County, California, the district where flowing wells are situated. We have a bed of Liquid Asphalt underlying a portion of our lands. Our property is situated right at Sunset Station. A new line of railway is surveyed and will be constructed in a very short time, putting us not only in touch with Eastern cities, but in touch with tide-water. This, in addition to the railroad facilities we now have. Remember that we own our land—it is paid for and entirely free from debt.

PROFESSOR DR. RUD J. SCHIMPER, Analytical and Expert Chemist, of St. Paul, makes the following statement relative to the composition, what can be produced and the estimated profits of the Sunset Crude Oil. A copy of the original certificate can be seen at the office of the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co., which is in substance as follows:

"This is to certify that the undersigned, Dr. Rudolph J. Schimper, Chemist expert, member of Parisian Academy, according to analysis made from the crude oil furnished me by the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company, I find the following valuable products and with each beg to submit my estimate of its value:

1. LIQUID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 1,800 lbs. of liquid rubber, value of which is from 25c. per lb. and up. (Estimated value $450.00.)
2. SOLID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls) will produce 1,700 lbs. of solid rubber, value of which is from 50c. upwards. (Estimated value $450.00.)
3. FUEL BRIQUETTES—2000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 2,000 lbs. (1 ton) of fuel briquettes, which, according to government tests made, is equivalent to two tons of best anthracite coal. (Estimated value $22.00)
4. ASPHALTUM—2,000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce ½ ton of asphaltum, value $25 to $30 per ton. 25 gal. of lubricating oil, value 50c. per gal. and upward. 40 gal. illuminating oil, value 10c per gal. and up. 40 gal. of distilled oil, value 5c. per gal. and upward. (Estimated value $[illegible])
5. SOAP—2000 lbs. (1 ton) of crude oil and [illegible] will produce over 2,000 lbs. of soap, value 3c. per lb. and upward. (Estimated value $60.00.)

Id my opinion many other valuable products can be obtained from the oil of that famous field.

Respectfully, DR. R. J. SCHIMPER, Chemist Expert."

THIS goes to show the immense profits that will accrue from our products when refined. We expect to commence Building Our Refinery in the very near future. The sale of the next allotment of stock will be made for that purpose. The largest flowing wells in California were brought in adjoining our property and their stock was taken off the market. We employ the best drillers who report rapid progress on our wells and we expect to bring in gushers equal, if not to excel any in the Sunset field. Our General Manager, Superintendent and Drillers, all are experienced oil men. The officers of our company are all thorough, competent and efficient men who have always made a success of their undertaking in life and who will see that the welfare of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company is furthered, portected and promoted to the most advantageous extent possible.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS SHOULD BE PAID STOCKHOLDERS.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS should be paid to the stockholders of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company when their property is fully developed, their refinery equipped and in full operation. ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS was paid by Kern County Oil Companies during the month of August alone.

SIX MILLION BARRELS is the consuming capacity of the Southern Pacific Railway engines, which are now equipped for burning oil. Outside of this consider other railway lines, smelters, factories, steamships, stationery engines, which are all heavy consumers of fuel oil and last but not least, hotels and private dwellings are falling in line with the procession in the use of fuel oil.

A GOOD REASON WHY YOU Should Invest in the stock of St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company. More fortunes have been made in oil than any other business. Consider the immense amount of money the Standard Oil Company has made for its fortunate stockholders, and the California oil companies have done better in proportion to their capitalization than the Standard Oil Company. Here is what $100 has accomplished for those who invested that amount in the following California companies in the beginning of their career:

Home Whittier $1,600 on an investment of $100.

Kern returned $2,200 on an investment of $100.

Peerless returned $1,800 on an investment of $100.

Dillon returned $2,500 on an investment of $100.

New York returned $30,000 on an investment of $100.

Union returned $150,000 on an investment of $100.

Home returned $50,000 on an investment of $100.

THERE is no reason in the world why the St. Paul and Sunset Company's oil holdings and property, when developed and handled, should not bring like returns

CONTRARY to the general supposition the earth is the repository of all mineral wealth. When it is known and demonstrated beyond a question of a doubt where its wealth reposes and you put your money up to take it out, your money is invested. Hence you are an investor, not a speculator. A proven oil producing property does not draw its profits from the people but creates new wealth. It is therefore an investment.

Wonderful Increase in Value of Oil Stocks.

The rapid rise in the value of shares in some oil companies will be seen from the following table:	Original price per share	Present Market price
Black Mountain Oil Co.	$ .05	$ 1.00
Central Oil Co.	.30	1.50
Home Oil Co. Whittier	.25	2.50

The time will come in the near future when stock in St. Paul and Sunset Oil Co., should bring prices equal to the last.

WE CLAIM NOTHING WE CANNOT PROVE TO BE TRUE

BRIEFLY, OUR PROPOSITION IS THIS: THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY

owns its immense tract of proven Oil Land—without a penny of incumbrance. The property is located in the most wonderful and richest oil producing section in the world, in the famous Sunset District of Kern County, California. Other Oil Companies in Kern county have paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in dividends—and today their stock cannot be bought at any price. These companies in many instances have less property, and in some cases are only lessors, not owning refinery, tanks, lines, etc.

A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THIS STOCK WILL BE SOLD AT 35c. PER SHARE, PAR VALUE $1.00.

BUY NOW. THIS STOCK WILL BE ADVANCED TO 50c WITHIN THE NEXT 30 DAYS

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY

will erect their own refinery, etc. are now owners of the property they are developing, employ the best drillers in the whole State of California. The manager is an old and experienced oil man who has been connected with large California companies. The officers are all successful and reliable business men, who are investors—the same as every other stockholder. And the company, with plenty of ready capital, proposes to make the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co. a leader in the field and to develop their property to the fullest extent that money and brains will permit.

The first orders received will be the first ones to be filled. In case we are unable to fill your orders at 35c. your money will be refunded. Send Orders and Remittances to

GEM

CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY

Sparta District, Eastern Oregon

It may be equalled but never surpassed—and, frankly, we doubt, all things considered, if it has an equal. And here is

WHY:

1—A producing mine.
2—Over 200 acres, rich mineral land.
3—Title perfect.
4—No debts.
5—No high salaries paid.
6—Equipped with up-to-date mill and machinery.
7—Between [illegible] and [illegible] feet of underground workings.
8—Management in the hands of experienced miners.
9—No treasury stock has ever been sold and perhaps never will be.
10—Two hundred and fifty thousand shares in the treasury.
11—Capital only $1,000,000.
12—Par value of shares—one dollar; fully paid and non-assessable.
13—Experts and intending investors permitted to examine the mine.
14—Daily mail. Complete telephone facilities.
15—All conditions favorable for cheap mining and reduction of ores.
16—Ore averages more than ten dollars gold per ton.
17—Total expenses mining and treatment per ton not over four dollars.

The stock we are selling is private holdings upon which we have secured a limited option. To make it go quickly we are only asking FIFTY CENTS A SHARE, and will sell as small a quantity as TWO HUNDRED SHARES—of course, as much more as you wish to buy as long as we have any for sale.

Recollect this property is producing a profit to-day of not less than $60,000 annually. By "profit" we mean over and above all expenses.

References back of the mine and its managers are the best in the State of Oregon where the property is located.

We personally examined this property thoroughly, and believe it to be one of the coming heavy producers of the Eastern Oregon Gold Fields.

Send for prospectus and learn how a well-equipped producing mine looks.

ITEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE AND LETTER

London, Nov. 26—Political gossip in London among Nationalists assumes that on account of the King's personal friendship for Gladstone he has been a home ruler for years, but the idea has been termed a "fantastic invention," and equally fatuous is the theory that Mr. Wyndham has consulted with Messrs. Redmond, O'Brien and O'Connor respecting the scope and character of the new land purchase bill. It is believed, however, that great efforts will be made to conciliate the Irish party before the King visits Ireland.

Santiago, Chili, Tuesday, Nov. 25—The decision of the British Arbitration Commission in the boundary dispute between Chili and Argentina was received here with calmness, but with little satisfaction, because the new demarcatory lines have no scientific basis, and because, although Chili gets the largest amount of land, Argentina gets the best land.

The British award is a compromise between the claims of the two countries. The area in dispute was about 58,374 square miles. The award gives Chili about 33,534, and Argentina about 24,340 square miles

London, Nov. 26—A. Bertrand, a Chilian expert, who testified before the British Boundary Commission informed a representative of the Associated Press today that he regards the decision as generally rather favorable to Chili. More than half the disputed territory, although not the most valuable portion, is awarded to Chili.

London, Nov. 26—A Paris correspondent says that in the Senate the Minister of War yesterday drew attention to the unsanitary condition of the army, saying that since 1870 Germany had only lost 13,000 soldiers from disease, while France had lost 90,000 from the same cause. The War Minister said that consumption and typhoid were the principal factors in the death list. Conscripts joined the regiments in November, the very worst season for change of place, diet, and habits. The imprudence, the Minister said, had been dearly paid for, and he had issued a circular enjoining greater sanitary precautions.

London, Ont., Nov. 26—The price of oil in London has taken a sharp advance. Oil which sold some time ago to the consumer at 15 cents per gallon now retails at 20 cents. It is understood that the reason for this is the great increase in the quantity of oil being used. The scarcity of other fuel has produced an immense demand for oil stoves.

BETHOTLE RELIEVED.

Aden, Arabia, Nov. 27 — General Manning's flying column relieved Bohotle, Somaliland, November 19. He found 25 per cent. of the men composing the garrison suffering from malarial fever. The Mad Mullah is in the vicinity of Mudug, preparing to contest any advance of the British.

SOUFRIERE STILL ACTIVE.

Kingston, St. Vincent, Nov. 27 — A violent eruption of La Soufriere took place yesterday, making the fifth outburst since the catastrophe of May 7th. The crater has been smoking constantly since the terrific eruption of Oct. 6th.

DOG SAVED MASTER'S LIFE

Rockland, Me., Oct. 25—A dog to whose faithfulness and sagacity William T. Oberton probably owes his life, has become known all over the country, and the story of Mr. Oberton's sensational adventure will be told for years to come.

Mr. Oberton has a large farm on the side of Dodge's mountain, and among other stock owns a large bull. The animal had never displayed vicious tendencies, and Mr. Oberton was unprepared when the bull rushed upon him in the pasture.

Mr. Oberton had the presence of mind to obtain a firm hold of the bull's horns, but the enraged animal tossed him about with frightful energy. Failing to make Mr. Oberton release his hold, the bull pushed him toward a fence, and the man knew that unless help came he would soon be crushed to death.

Already his hands were bruised and swollen, and the strain wrought by the encounter was telling upon him.

At this critical juncture Mr. Oberton heard fierce barking and saw his bulldog coming in the direction of the struggle at full speed. The dog promptly sprang upon the bull, and fastening his teeth into the latter's throat, bit with such vigor that the bull's attention was diverted to the dog.

When Mr. Oberton reached a safe point the dog seized his attack, and trotted away, a hero.

HE FEARS FRAUD ON DECEMBER 4

Ald. Spence Says the Liquor Party Will Attempt Personation

Toronto Star.

There is a sound of a going in the Provincial headquarters of the Ontario Prohibition party in the Confederation Life Building. The click of the typewriters and the swish of the pastebrush and the rattle of tracts and papers. Ten tons of literature have gone out broadcast over the Province, comprising ten million pages of matter.

The office of the workers became too small some days ago, and two additional rooms have been pressed into the service.

From early morning till late at night a staff of 15 people have been busy sending out the stream which already has assumed the large proportion mentioned. The cost to the temperance people will be $40,000, and there are at least 10,000 people actively engaged in the work.

"The campaign has been a comparitively pleasant one, hasn't it? Not a bit like the time when the Scott Act was a live issue?" asked a Star reporter today.

"The reason for this," replied Mr. Spence, "is because the liquor interests have not shown their hand. We expect a lot of plugging from what we hear, and are appointing a strong body of scrutineers to meet it."

"What makes you think that personation is being arranged?"

"Oh, we have heard it. This will not be very difficult in cities and towns on account of the time of registration being so far from the time of voting. You see the voters were registered in May last and between May and December many people have moved away, and it is easily possible to secure a voter to take his place."

"You expect to win of course?"

"Well, we are organized thoroughly in each of the 97 constituencies. We are relying on three lines of work—first, the holding of meetings; second, the circulating of literature; third, the canvassing of votes."

"Have you hired any conveyances for election day?"

"No, that is illegal. We expect to poll a good vote, but we realize that the absence of personal leaders will make it smaller than usual. When John Brown and John Smith run the people are attracted to either of the men, but here you see, there is nothing like that as an element to attract votes."

Each canvasser is supplied with instructions. Two of the warnings are: Every polling sub-division chairman ought to select good men for inside and outside scrutineers. Do not try to canvass the whole of a sub-division yourself.

SOCIALISTS AND SOUTH ITALY

London, Nov. 27—The Socialist group in the Italian Chamber, says a Rome correspondent, declares that it is dissatisfied with both proposals of the Government and of Baron Sonnino, for the alleviation of the condition on Southern Italy and announce a third solution of the problem from a Socialist point of view.

CABLE CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

Big English Cable Steamer Expected to Begin Cable Laying on December 8th

San Francisco, Nov. 24.—Christmas greetings by cable will be exchanged between this city and Honolulu, unless something unforseen occurs in cable laying. The big English cable steamer Silverton is expected here on Dec. 6th. She will at once begin laying the cable. This ought not to consume over twelve days. The land cable here is laid, and is ready to connect with the ocean cable. The next span of the cable will be from Honolulu to Midway Island, 1,200 miles, and the next between that island and Guam. The last span is between Guam and Manila. If everything goes right, cable messages ought to be exchanged with Manila by next summer.

AN INVESTMENT IN THE
Pitkin Gold Belt Mining and Reduction Company
Which is Safe and Sure of Quick Returns, may Bring an Enormous Return at any Moment. It has the Possibilities of Rivaling the Great Mines of the Past.
This Company has a mile on a true fissure vein, in the center of the Gunnison Gold Belt, Colorado, which is the "Mother" lode or dike, which has produced 25 per cent. more gold than the total output of the Cripple Creek district.
This Mine is no Prospect. Nor is it Waiting on Your Subscription to Buy Machinery or for Development.
After a careful examination by experts, Joseph M. Bradley, M. E. and Mr. George Arlett, A. I. M. E., Amalgamated Copper Company's expert in Chihuahua, Mexico, they advised the purchase of the property. The property had shallow development upon it, showing two ore shoots from which smelting ore had been shipped to the Buena Vista Smelter.
The Company purchased and paid for the latest improved machinery and has put a shaft down 250 feet and intend to carry it down 1000 feet. On the 150 foot level 200 feet of development has been made and an ore shoot has been encountered and blocked out for 57 feet, carrying values in gold from 2 to 9 ounces or $40 to $180 per ton. The cost of mining, hauling, freight and smelters charges will be between $12 and $15 per ton.
Ed. McCarthy & Co., bankers, guarantee a shipping mine of smelting ore running from 2 to 6 ounces in gold, or $40 to $120 per ton, by January 1st, 1903, or all funds will be returned to subscribers upon presentation of receipt issued by said bank.
Also to prospective purchasers of $500 worth of stock we are offering a free trip to Colorado and return. You investigate first and purchase afterward. Could you expect anything fairer than this?
The capital stock of this company is $1,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares of stock at $1 each, full paid and non-assessable. A portion of the treasury stock is now offered at
25 CENTS PER SHARE—PAR VALUE $1.00
In one payment, or 20 per cent. down and the balance in four equal monthly payments, for necessary expenditures and improvements on a shipping mine.

Oil Strike in Kent County
(Press Despatch)
Chatham, Nov. 12—There is as yet little new in the oil situation, which is the one topic of conversation. Accounts of the Raleigh well's capacity have not been one whit exaggerated. Oil men are swarming here, some coming even from California and great expectations are entertained as to future explorations. A company which has fourteen wells at Northwood, six miles from here, on the line of the Grand Trunk, hold leases for lands adjacent to the gusher, and will begin to bore at once in their territory. The gusher is situated on the apex or crown of a sudden elevation or dome in the rock formation, and oil experts say this is a sure sign of permanency and the reason for the unusual pressure manifested.

STOCK MARKETS

Temporary Ups and Downs—Narrow Limits

New York, Nov. 28.—The market is preparing in our opinion for a considerable movement in the upward direction. Prior to the actual start there will be temporary small ups and downs, without a radius of from one to three points. Such a movement allowing a considerable move in the opposite direction is usually prefaced in this manner. The mid-week holiday also detracts to a great extent from the market. The market in all probability will also be inclined to await the outcome of the C. F. I. fight and the outcome of the deal in Manhattan stock. The announcement authoritatively of the lease of the Manhattan to the Interborough Co. for 99 years has been made. It will go far to establishing confidence, many people fearing that should it prove to have been only a speculative stock the effect upon the market would ultimately have been disastrous. The fight in the Colorado Fuel and Iron is becoming interesting. Some of the interested parties have concerned themselves in the matter owing to their strong interest in the disposal of the freight constantly offering by the concern. Colorado Fuel & Iron matters should speedily come to a finish however. The attitude of the anthracite carriers towards Mitchell also afford possibilities for working the coal shares up and down within comparatively narrow limits, which also tends to hold financial matters in statu quo, assisting in making a close up and down market such as we anticipate, for a few days at least. Such a market affords frequent and safe chances for profitable trading, however, by purchasing when weak and disposing of your holding at from 1 to 3 points advance. Many a five or ten per cent. profits has thus been credited to the account of a clever trader through the range of prices while he was making kept well within range of two or three points. It is usual safer to trade in such a market than in one more mercurial and inclined to rapid marches in the rear direction. The tangible and visible factory having a bearing upon prices, we are as bullish as ever that in time they must certainly have their effect upon values. Every week of bullish tendencies means so much more ultimate advance for stocks.

Summary—Tuesday's and Wednesday's advices of these letters veered to the bull side proved correct. To day's market witnessed improvement in prices. L. N. made the most notable advance among the railways from 124 to 130 1-2. St. Paul advanced in a lively manner, opening up 3-8 at 175 7-8, and selling up to 178 3-4. Southern Pacific, Mo. Pacific, Union Pacific and Reading issues were heavily purchased by inside interest. Manitoba was firm. The undertone of the entire list was excellent. In the industrial department sugar was the leader, recording an advance of over 4 points. Copper rose 2 points. Steels were stronger. Stocks are a good purchase at present, especially on every reaction. Money closed 4 per cent. Sales 641,2000.

WRECK OF STEAMER VENTNOR

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 27—According to advices received from Sydney, by the steamer Aorangi, H.M.S. Sparrow has has returned from a protracted cruise through the South Sea Islands. During her cruise the warship's officers annexed Suwarrow Ysabel, and Choiseul Island for Great Britain. At Malieta Islands five villages of the natives were shelled to punish the islanders for having killed a Fijian woman because she embraced Christianity. With a view to impressing the natives with the seriousness of the crime committed by them, and of warning them against a recurrence of such acts, the Sparrow visited five places in the Island of Malieta, namely, Auki, Sio, Wrae, Kwai and Port Diamond, and at each place the villages were shelled and partially destroyed.

GOLD Is the World's Wealth!

YOU WANT IT

We have it. The property of the ORO RICO MINING SYNDICATE located in San Bernardino County, California, consists of THREE GREAT GOLD MINES, a total of 30 mining claims, comprising 600 acres, which under several years operation and development have reached a state of profitable production. For the purpose of erecting a suitable mill and plant for treating the ores we offer a moderate block of stock (par value $1) at 20 cents a share. This Mill we expect to have in operation early in 1903, at which time we expect to commence the payment of Ten Per Cent. Annual Dividends on the PAR VALUE. We solicit an opportunity to place before you the prospectus, reports of mining experts and actual facts regarding this great gold property. We believe in our mines. There is a fortune for all of us "knocking at the door" NOW. Fortune, they say, knocks but once. Write or call today.

"IMPOSSIBLE, for you to enjoy the happiness of motherhood," says the doctor. Sometimes he qualifies the statement, and says: "Impossible without an operation." Yet both these "impossibles" have been made possibles by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Many times the hindrances to motherhood are to be found in womanly diseases or weaknesses, which are perfectly and permanently cured by "Favorite Prescription." This great medicine for women cures irregularity and dries debilitating drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"I wish to add my testimony to hundreds of others as to the value of Dr. Pierce's medicines," writes Mrs. Ida M. De Ford, of Latona, Hubbard Co., Minn. "Have doctored with a great many physicians—some specialists; have twice been in a hospital for treatment. My case has been regarded as a hopeless one, and they knew not what the trouble was. Heart was bad; stomach all out of order; tired out; severe pains in all parts of the body; sinking spells, and nearly every ailment a woman could have. I took many a bottle of 'patent medicines' without effect. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and ten months afterward I gave birth to a ten-pound boy. All physicians had stated as a fact that I never could bear a child. Both the baby and myself were strong, and I get along splendidly—thanks to your medicine."

Sugar Beets

The following article is taken from yesterday's Mail and Empire—

Peterborough people appear to be as prompt to act as they are quick to appreciate a good thing, and already a company has been formed in that enterprising city to operate a beet sugar industry somewhat on the lines of that so successfully conducted in Berlin. Like wise men, however, as the Peterborough people are (coming from the east) they decided to inspect the Berlin plant before doing anything, and for this purpose, a party of about 40 members of the county and town councils and board of trade arrived in town yesterday and registered at the Walker House for a few hours leaving in a special car at 5.28 p.m., for Berlin.

President Bradburn, of the Board of Trade, is head of the company. They will locate right in the city, and later on will ask for aid from the city and county. The new project is particularly interesting to the farmers in the district, a number of whom are with the deputation. The party will look over the factory this morning and return today."

Interesting Items.

A young swell wore a new style evening coat at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York the other night. It was a swallow-tail, with velvet collar and a pocket for a handkerchief in the left breast. A tiny lace handkerchief peeped from the pocket.

A man advertises in a Syracuse paper for a job as general housework servant. He is a widower, familiar with all phases of housekeeping, and says that he can pickle, wash, and iron, enact the parts of the cook and the waitress, mind the baby, dust, and take care of the furnace.

It is a good advertisement for vegetarianism that a pedestrian who doesn't eat meat came in first in the international walking-match between Berlin and Dresden. The winner made the one hundred and twenty-five miles in the record-breaking time of twenty-seven hours, thirteen minutes, and fourteen and one-half seconds.

The New York "Commercial Advertiser" estimates that Andrew Carnegie's benefactions, up to date, amount to $63,000,000, distributed in the following order: United States, $35,361,673; Scotland, $12,078,750; Canada, $376,500; Cuba, $252,000; Ireland, $65,500. And yet, Mr. Carnegie's wealth is said to be increasing more rapidly than he can give it away, owing to the enormous earnings of the properties whose securities he holds.

In his book on "The Private Life of the Sultan," Mr. Georges Dorys says that during the Armenian massacres it cost the Turkish treasury the equivalent of about $1,000,000 for hush money, or "allocations," to certain European newspapers, besides the distribution of six hundred and forty costly decorations placed where they would do the most good. Abdul Hamid seemed to believe firmly in the cynical saying of Walpole that every man has his price.

Miss Azalene Earle, formerly of Portland, Oregon, but latterly a "hello girl" in San Francisco, is now Mrs. William Halleck Deming, and will travel in Europe with her husband this summer. Says the Portland "Oregonian:" "Mr. Deming, who is a man of wealth, was attracted by her soft and gentle voice in calling 'Number?' through the telephone, and acquaintance and marriage followed. If the voices of the telephone girls in this city have lately become indistinct through muffled sweetness, the above announcement accounts for it."

Thomas A. Edison thinks that in six or seven years horses will have disappeared from the streets as beasts of burden, and automobiles will be made so cheap as to be within the reach of all who wish or need vehicles. He declares this revolution will be brought about by a storage electric battery which he has invented. "The man that cannot quite afford to keep a horse and carriage is the man that I am trying to provide for," he said the other day; "the automobile will be the thing for him. Its first cost will not be great, it will not require care, and the cost of maintenance will come far below the cost of keeping a horse."

An interesting series of experiments has been tried by the school authorities in South Germany to test the faculty of observation as it is exercised by boys and girls. A man dressed as an ordinary workman and with ordinary features was placed in a room by himself. Classes of girls of different ages were sent through the room. All that the teachers told them was that they were to go into the room through one door and out through another. When they returned to their classrooms they were asked to describe the man in the room. Nearly eighty per cent. of the girls confined their attention to the man's clothes; the others described both clothes and features. The same experiments when tried with boys revealed the fact that nearly seventy per cent. of them confined their attention to the man's features, the remainder to both features and clothes.

The Stupidity of Instinct.

Are insects, bees for instance, so very intelligent after all, or does their instinct resemble automatism instead of reason? Mr. J. Carter Beard has assembled a number of interesting instances in the "Scientific American" which lead to the conclusion that the wonderful results often accomplished by insects are due, not to intelligence, but to automatic obedience to external or internal stimuli. We might as well, he thinks, call a watch intelligent as an insect.

In one instance it appears that house-flies exhibit more appearance of real intelligence than do honey-bees. Take a large glass jar with a wide mouth, says Mr. Beard, and imprison in it a bee and some flies. Put the bottom of the jar against a window-pane, draw the curtains around the jar and then uncork the mouth. The flies will quickly find their way out of the open mouth into the room, but the bee will stupidly continue to try to get through the glass where it sees the light and will never think of exploring in the other direction. But perhaps this shows, not superior intelligence on the part of the flies, but less attraction to the light or a greater variety of stimuli to motion.

The bee's whole existence seems to depend upon routine. She always does the same things in the same way and exhibits no capacity to profit by, or repair the effects of, accident. Mason-bees, for instance, build little thimble-shaped structures of mud, half fill them with honey and pollen, then lay their eggs therein and top off the construction with a roof. If a hole is made in the bottom of one of these thimbles while the building is going on, and the honey is allowed to run out, the stupid bee, even after discovering the hole, makes no attempt to stop it up, but continues to pour in the honey at the top, allowing it to run away at the bottom, until, the proper amount required by instinct having been put in, she lays her eggs and seals up the top, content with her vain labor.

Many other instances can be cited which tend to show that the instinct of insects does not resemble human reason.

On the other hand, insects sometimes do things which do not seem to be the result of pure automatism. Darwin found that even earthworms exhibit more adaptability to circumstances than was shown by Mr. Beard's imprisoned bee in the glass jar.

Foot Badly Crushed

Master Stanley Cawthorne, the five-year-old son of Mr. Wm. B. Cawthorne, 230 Perry street, met with a painful accident yesterday morning on his way to school. It appears that while a train was passing the Grand Trunk crossing on King street, a larger boy present jumped on the rear car and the little fellow attempted to do the same. He was told by one of the trainmen to jump off, and in doing so had his left foot run over. Several toes were broken, and the foot badly crushed. He was removed to Nicholls Hospital and is doing as well as could be expected. It will not be necessary to have the toes amputated.

The People vs. Railways

The following is taken from the Cobourg Post, and speaks for itself:

"The councils of many of the counties in Ontario, having petitioned the House of Commons requesting that a best interests of the country demand commission should be appointed to deal with matters affecting the public in its relation with railway companies as follows: "We consider that the time has arrived when the House of Commons, requesting that an independent tribunal be appointed to adjust all differences arising between the people and the railway companies in reference to the freight rates, cattle guards, gates at public crossings and to enforce the provisions of the law in general." In response to these petitions, a cattle guard commission was appointed which will meet in the interests of the citizens of the Counties of Victoria, Peterborough Northumberland and Durham, at the County Buildings, Peterborough, on the 28th November at 2 o'clock p.m. It is in the interest of the public that a large number of the citizens of Northumberland

WEATHER NOTES

White Flour Starvation $20,000.00 Experiment

Post says that one pound of Grape Nuts furnishes more nourishment that the system will absorb than ten pounds of meal, wheat, oats or bread. He has a reason for the statement. The white flour makers issued millions of circulars denouncing him for the statement.

Post further says the excessive use of white bread causes disease of the bowels frequently ending in peritonitis and appendicitis.

Close under the shell of the wheat lie the phosphates, potash and other elements absolutely demanded by the body for its proper feeding, particularly for the nerve centers and the brain. Also close under the shell lie the elements of the diastase required by the body to change the starchy part of the wheat into Grape Sugar during the process of digestion

But the white flour miller throws out these important elements because they darken the flour. The white flour of the present day is almost entirely composed of starch and the elements that will help digest that starch are left out; therefore when much starch, even in the shape of white bread, is put into the stomach it passes into the intestinal tract where, instead of being digested it ferments and causes trouble.

• • •

It was to remedy this trouble that Grape-Nuts was invented, for practically the same methods that Nature uses to digest the starch are used in the manufacture of Grape-Nuts, so that the famous food goes into the body in the form of Grape Sugar—that is, the starch has been changed and the first act of digestion has taken place.

The result is that the human body is furnished with valuable food elements in the most perfect form.

• • •

Now comes along the Maine Experiment Station to question Post's claim regarding the value of one pound of Grape-Nuts. They learnedly discuss the subject and produce a statement showing more calories of food value in ten pounds of bread than in one pound of Grape-Nuts.

That is not the question at issue. Like many other pseudo-scientific debaters they befuddle themselves and become lost to the maze of scientific effort.

How much food value will the system absorb, take up, make use of, that's the question. Suppose you feed a man 10 pounds of sugar, (which is nearly all pure nourishment). Would his system absorb 10 pounds? He would probably be made sick and really lose weight and strength. But suppose you prepared the sugar so he could quickly digest and assimilate it and absorb into his system the nourishing properties of it, is it not clear that 1-2 pound of such food would furnish him more nourishment THAT HIS SYSTEM WOULD ABSORB than the 10 pounds, or even 50 pounds of raw sugar?

That is exactly the case with Grape-Nuts. The elements of wheat and barley are scientifically treated in exactly the way the human body treats them to accomplish the first act of digestion, that is the change of starch into Grape Sugar.

The makers of white flour sacrifice the most valuable part of the wheat in order to keep the flour white. A man fed on white bread alone will gradually become a shattered nervous wreck and die. He can't possibly live unless he is furnished with the food elements required by nature to sustain life, and some of the most powerful are entirely absent in white bread. Every element in the wheat and barley is kept in Grape-Nuts, and man or animal can live indefinitely on that perfect food. We have records of several thousand cases where people have been unable to maintain health, weight and strength on meat, wheat, oats or bread and have been able to increase weight, vitality and strength on the little portions of Grape-Nuts taken as a portion of each meal.

We will place $10,000.00 in any designated bank against $10,000.00 to be deposited by the Maine Experiment Scientists(?) and the total $20,000.00 less cost of experiment, to be paid to them for their trouble and work if they prove our claim untrue. If they fail, the amount to be paid us for our time and labor of demonstration.

Common earth and air contains the raw elements necessary for man's food but even if a scientific state official should tell you that, would you therefore eat 10 pounds of earth and expect to extract its nourishment? It requires the curious and wonderful manipulation of the laws of the vegetable kingdom to select and combine and prepare these food elements of the soil in such a way that man and animals can absorb and make use of them. Hence we have vegetables and grains. So it still further requires the intelligence and skill of man to cook and prepare the vegetables and cereals to make them digestible and fit.

The greater the intelligence and skill displayed in preparation and the more nearly the laws of digestion of food are followed the more perfect the result. We have the true scientific facts for the basis and the practical every day results with feeding millions of people for our proof and the statement stands on the solid rock of fact ONE POUND OF GRAPE-NUTS WILL SUPPLY MORE NOURISHMENT THAT THE SYSTEM WILL ABSORB than 10 pounds of meat, wheat, oats or bread.

We are at home every day, come and see us. If you are a Scientist(?) from Maine bring your wallet.

• • •

The London Lancet one of the greatest medical authorities in the world, has to say: "The basis of nomenclature of this preparation is evidently an American pleasantry, since 'Grape-Nuts' is derived solely from cereals. The preparatory process undoubtedly converts the food constituents into a much more digestible condition than is the raw cereal. This is evident from the remarkable solubility of the preparation, no less than one half of it being soluble in cold water. The soluble portion contains chiefly dextrin and no starch. In appearance 'Grape-Nuts' resembles fried bread crumbs. The grains are brown and crisp, with a pleasant taste not unlike slightly burned malt. According to our analysis the following is the composition of 'Grape-Nuts': moisture, 6.02 per cent; mineral matter, 2.01 per cent; fat, 1.60 per cent.; proteids, 15.00 per cent. soluble carbohydrates, &c., 49.40 per cent.; and unaltered carbohydrates, (insoluble), 25.97, per cent. The features worthy of note in this analysis are the excellent proportion of proteid, mineral matters and soluble carbohydrates per cent. The mineral matter was rich in phosphoric acid. 'Grape-Nuts' is described as a brain or nerve food, whatever that may mean. Our analysis, at any rate, shows that it is a nutritive of high order, since it contains the constituents of a complete food in a very satisfactory and rich proportion and in an easily assimilable state."

ATTEMPTS MURDER FOR THIRTY FIVE DOLLARS

Farmer Oliver Shot Cheesemaker Skellon--Police Cannot Find Him

Took His Intended Victim Out for a Drive and Put a Bullet in His Head—Wounded Man will Recover

Tweed, Nov. 29.—A shooting affray, which looks very like an attempt at murder, occurred near here last night, Oliver, a farmer about 40 years of age, living near Rednersville, Prince Edward County, the victim being Albert Skellon, a cheese maker from Cannifton, near Belleville. Skellon's story is that he had been visiting at Oliver's home since last Monday. Yesterday morning Oliver invited him to drive out to his (Oliver's) father's for a visit, and when they arrived at a lonely place on the road Oliver drew a revolver and shot him. The ball entered about an inch in front of the left ear, and came out just below the outer corner of the right eye. The wound is serious, but Skellon has good chances of recovery. Oliver would, no doubt, have finished his job, but for the opportune arrival of a farmer named David Lockwood. Lockwood drove the wounded man here. Oliver has not yet been secured. Skellon says he counted Oliver among his best friends, and can imagine no motive for the crime, unless it would be to escape a debt of $35 which Oliver owes him.

POLICE CAN'T FIND HIM.

Belleville, Nov. 29.—A shooting affray occurred at Bridgewater near this city, last night, which may end fatally. It appears that a man names James Oliver, hired a livery team in this city yesterday, saying he was going to Madoc. Instead of going there he went to Bridgewater, and this morning a message came that he had last night shot a man named Albert Skellon, and there was a possibility of the wound proving fatal. Oliver returned to this city about 2 o'clock this morning, and put abck his team in the livery stable. The police are now looking for him, but up to the present with no success.

UNITED STATES WARNING ALL EUROPEAN POWERS

Of Her Ability to Enforce the Obnoxoius Monroe Doctrine

Significance of the Great Fleet Gathering in the Carribean Sea—Her Powerful Navy

Washington, Nov. 29.—The greatest war fleet ever assembled under the American flag is gathering to-day in the the Caribbean Sea. More than 60 ships of war compose the fleet.

More than 15,000 men will be engaged in the war game.

The mobilization of this great war fleet at this time is regarded by foreign diplomats here as America's warning to all European Powers of her ability and readiness to defend any application of the Munroe Doctrine that she may make, to impress upon the world her political and commercial supremacy in the "American Mediterranean" and to demonstrate her absolute power of control over any interoceanic canal that may be built.

President Roosevelt himself is credited with having planned this master stroke in world politics.

With the assembling this month of our great war fleet in the East, which is to reveal to the world the true might of Uncle Sam, there comes together at the rndesvous selected, Culebra Island in the West Indies, the mightiest force of warships ever assembled under one flag.

From the North has gone the North Atlantic squadron, from the South the South Atlantic squadron, from across the ocean the European squadron, from the waters adjacent to Cuba and the Spanish main, the Caribbean division. Admiral George Dewey, the hero of Manila, will command the entire fleet.

Altogether the exercises will take up most of the winter months and the cost in maintenance of ships and ammunition will be upward of $1,000,000.

G. T. R. INCORPORATION

WAS ORIGINALLY CHARTERED BY PARLIAMENT IN 1851

Successive Changes and Extensions—Present Total Mileage 3,158 of Which 450 is Double Tracked—Total Cost $336,990,043

The Grand Trunk Railway Company passed the Canadian legislature in 1851, empowering the company to build a railway between Toronto and Montreal, a distance of 333 miles, the capital of the company to be three million pounds. But it was not until the amalgamation act of 1854 that the company really took the name of "Grand Trunk," the several chartered projects thus united in common enterprise being the construction of railways from Montreal to Portland, Me., from Quebec to Richmond, from Toronto to Sarnia and from Quebec to Trois Pistoles. Then sections were built between 1853 and 1858 and the original system completed Dec. 19th, 1859, when the Victoria Bridge was opened for traffic. The line from Detroit to Port Huron was leased in 1859; the Champlain lines in 1864. the Buffalo and Huron road in 1867. In 1873 the International Bridge at Niagara was leased.

In 1879 the Dominion Government purchased from the Grand Trunk the line from Levis to Riviere du Loup, 124 miles, for $1,500,000, and with this money the Grand Trunk purchased two railways in Michigan, and formed the Chicago and Grand Trunk system. In 1881 the Georgian Bay and Lake Erie system of 171 miles was incorporated into the Grand Trunk. In 1882 amalgamation with the Great Western railway, including 904 miles, took place. In 1893 the Welland line was leased, the Champlain lines extended and the Midland system of 473 miles absorbed. The Northern railway was leased in January 1888. In 1899 the Victoria Bridge was rebuilt at a cost of $1,810,553, the Dominion Government contributing $500,000 by way of subsidy.

The total length of the Grand Trunk system is 3,158 miles of which 450 is double tracked. In 1867 the Grand Trunk carried 2,950,165 passengers and 2,933,789 tons of freight. In 1896 5,977,071 passengers and 7,567,148 tons of freight were carried.

POISON WORKED AS HE SANG

Tragic Story Told by Mother of Dr. N. G. Ross

Detroit, Nov. 29.—The sad story of the suicide by strychnine of Dr. Norman Garibaldi Ross, son of the late Dr. A. M. Ross, of Toronto, was related to a reporter by the mother of the unfortunate young man.

"He was a brilliant young man," if I do say it myself," said Mrs. Ross. "I was always proud of him because of his intellectual attainments. Though only 27 years of age, he is said to have been a Gladstone in literary ability. But years ago my boy became addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors, and this really led to his untimely death. We have been living alone here for about six years, ever since we came from Toronto, where we lived before my husband died.

"My son liked jolly company, and he would often stay out very late at night. Wednesday night he went away and did not return. We had arranged to have a Thanksgiving dinner yesterday, just for ourselves, and I had prepared for it. But he didn't come. At 2.30 o'clock last night he walked in quietly, and almost the first words he said to me were 'Mother I wish I were dead.'

"I told him then that if he intended to dissipate like that it might be better if he were dead. He had often spoken to me about committing suicide, and had several times scared me.

"Last night I left him alone in the parlor and went upstairs. In a few minutes I heard him go down into the basement, and I could hear the water running from the tap. I was nervous, but, a few minutes later, I was glad to hear him playing on the piano. He was an accomplished pianist, and sang several songs, including 'The Shade of the Sheltering Palms,' from the Florodora Opera.

"As the last words of the song died away, I heard a moan, and my son's voice saying, 'It's beginning to work now.' Several minutes elapsed, and then his moans were frightful to hear. I found him lying on the floor. He had taken a cushion from the lounge, and placed it on the floor for his head to rest on.

"'Mother,' he cried, as I went into the room. 'I am dying; hurry and get the doctor!'

"I told him to get up and go to bed, but he got worse, and I hurried out for Dr. J. J. Mulheron. When I got back from the doctor he was lying quite still. I guess he was dead then. He never regained consciousness, anyway. That is exactly how my boy died."

The remains will probably be cremated, according to the expressed wish of the suicide, and the ashes taken to Toronto for interment.

ONTARIO APPLE CROP

The Yield Large But Quality of Fruit is Inferior—Prices Make Advance

This year has been the best apple-producing year in this district, and in Ontario generally, for many years, the yield being fully 70 per cent. greater than last year. The quality is not so good as in small yields, owing to the ravages of the apple scab, caused by the oyster shell bark louse, assisted by the wet season, which caused much mildew. In many places apple crops were injured by hail. The market has been very satisfactory for the best fruit, but the apple buyers have found it difficult to get their applies in good shape. Last year about 40,000 barrels per week were shipped abroad from Canada, while the exports during the past season have reached as high as 140,000 barrels per week. The prices have not been so good. The buyers have been paying an average of about 75 cents per barrel but last week they advanced. A local buyer stated a few days ago that wherever the growers were in the habit of spraying and manuring they always expect to find perfect fruit and were seldom disappointed.

LUMBERING OPERATIONS

Times are Brisk in the Lumber Camps This Season

The Bobcaygeon Independent says: The lumber operations are now in full activity and throughout the great district north of this village there is a strong demand for men to work in the woods, and very high wages are paid. Only a few years ago the wages paid to a shantyman ranged from $18 to $24 a month, and there were crowds anxiously waiting to be hired, but to-day men are scarce, and hard to obtain and are paid from $28 to $30 a month. Only a few Frenchmen from the Province of Quebec are now employed in this district whilst formerly they formed a majority of the men engaged in the shanties. Those employed in the shanties which are now called "camps" are much better fed than they used to be, and are supplied with sugar, stews, pies, puddings and cakes, whilst formerly their only food was merely bread and salt pork. Thus we see that not only are the wages much higher, but the cost of feeding greatly increased. All the other expenses connected with lumber operation have also increased, and this season the cost of production will be still further advanced. As the area of lumber production diminishes and is pushed further back it is impossible to foresee what will be the price of sawed lumber a few years hence. It is noticeable that all lumber camps are now subjected to medical regulations, and are in consequence much healthier than was once the case. It is probable that within fifty miles north of this village there are twenty lumber camps or shanties containing fifty men each. The supply of men is inadequate to the demand, and more men are needed at once. If the demand for timber and lumber continues to increase as it has done of late, in twenty years all the trees for a hundred miles north of this village will have been cut and manufactured.

PETERBOROUGH GAS GOOD

Results of the Official Tests of Illuminating Gas

In forty-odd towns official tests of the gas were made each month, and the results are given in the annual report of the Inland Revenue Department. Sixteen candle-power is the standard which must be maintained by the gas companies. The tests show that the best gas in Canada is supplied in Woodstock the candle power of the Woodstock gas averaging 22.62 throughout the year; while the worst gas is that used in St. John, N.B., the candle power of which averaged only 16.45. Revolution in Newfoundland

Since the introduction into Newfoundland of the new Inhaler Remedy, "Catarrhozone," the treatment of catarrhal diseases has been entirely revolutionized. The old-time snuff and internal medicine has been cast aside and everyone is inhaling Catarrhozone; it clears the head and throat in two minutes, and is very agreeable and pleasant to use. Catarrhozone is a wonderful cure for Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, Lung Troubles and Deafness. It relieves quickly and cures permanently. We advise our readers to try Catarrhozone. THE BERLIN SUGAR INDUSTRY INSPECTED

Large Delegation from Peterborough Visit the Beet Sugar Factory

THE BUILDINGS AND PLANT

The Deputation Returned on Saturday Delighted with what They Saw—Factory to be Erected in Peterborough

The deputation which on Thursday went to inspect the Berlin Beet Sugar factory, returned on Saturday morning, delighted with what they saw. The party included the following: Warden T. G. Eastland, County Councillors Wm. Anderson, M.P.P., E. A. Peck, G. W. Fitzgerald, P. Costello, R. Shaw, J. B. Pearce, Dr. Jeffs and W. H. Casement; His Worship Mayor T. H. G. Denne, Alderman G. M. Roger, H. Rush, Joe. Batten, J. J. Turner, B. Shortly, and Robert Clinkscale, John E. Belcher, County Engineer; R. P. Watt, County Clerk; E. M. Elliott, and Wm. Collins, President and Secretary respectively, West Peterborough Farmers' Institute; R. Fair, John Carnegie and D. Hughes-Charles, representing the Peterborough Board of Trade; George W. Bennett, Wm. Galton, T. M. Hunter, J. J. Lundy, Wm. Langford, E. H. D. Hall, Town Solicitor; John Smith, Reeve of Ashburnham; John McDonald, T. E. Bradburn, J. W. Garvin, W. H. Robertson, of the Times, F. H. Dobbin, of the Review, and E. S. Clarry, of the Examiner.

Through the efforts of Mr. Wm. Bunton, City Passenger Agent, a special car was placed at the disposal of the party by the Grand Trunk Railway. At Berlin the party were met at the hotel by President R. Smyth and Mr. G. M. DeBus, of the local Board of Trade.

Friday morning Mayor Eden called early to present the compliments of the local Council, and leading citizens tendered greeting. Through the kindness of Mr. S. J. Williams, Managing Director of the Ontario Sugar Company, a special car on the electric line was provided to take the party out to the works, and on arrival they were conducted over the plant and an intelligent and interesting explanation given of the various operations included in making from beets the finished product.

THE BERLIN FACTORY.

The preliminary work was begun in April, 1900, by the planting of test plots by local farmers. There was a sufficient percentage of sugar to interest capitalists, who came over from Scranton, Pa., and decided to locate in Berlin. The town gave a bonus of $25,000, and exemption from taxation for ten years. It had been proposed to ask the township for a bonus, but this not being entertained, the counter proposition was made and agreed to that next year the farmers should give to the company one point of the percentage, instead of bonus. This is explained by stating that the present season, farmers are paid $4 per ton, flat, next year they will be paid by percentage of sugar, the standard being set at 12 per cent. Should a farmer's beets show 14 per cent. of sugar he agrees to accept 13 per cent., giving the company the benefit of his extra one per cent. Fourteen per cent. of sugar would give nearly $4.75 per ton for beets.

The capital stock amounts to $600,000, $450,000 being held by outside capitalists, and $150,000 in Berlin. The stockholders are well satisfied with the prospects, and the distribution of about $150,000 among the farmers residing in a radius of eight or nine miles, has proved a thing for the merchant.

Delays in getting the factory completed prevented a start being made until October 7th, on which date beets were delivered. About 500 tons are now arriving daily, while nearly 10,000 tons are piled up in the sheds at the factory.

THE FACTORY BUILDINGS.

Constructed of white brick and steel, with cement floors, the factory is of a most substantial character. The operation of the plant is continuous, running day and night, week days and Sundays.

At one end of the factory are the beet storage sheds, each 350 feet in length and capable of storing 9,000 tons of beets in large bins. These bins have sloping bottoms, with a sluice running beneath, about a foot wide and two feet deep, covered with short planks. To convey beets to the factory a plank is removed; the beets, with a little persuasion, drop through the hole and are carried quickly forward by a rushing stream, which partly cleanses them. The arrangement of sluices is said to be the most perfect on the continent.

The beets are automatically picked out of the water and forced through a washing machine, which drops them into an immense wheel, with buckets on the inside of its perforated rim. This drains them and dumps them into an endless chain of buckets, which carries them to the automatic scale in the third story, a beautiful piece of mechanism, that dumps when it contains 1,000 pounds. With a roar the 1,000 pounds of beets fall into the cutting machine, where they are sliced into pieces about the thickness of large maccaroni. The outlet from the cutter is a great pipe revolving in the ceiling below, of which the lower end connects in turn with each of the fourteen cells of a "diffusion" battery. These "cells" which lie on a circle, hold each 2 1-4 tons of the sliced beets, and it takes 6 minutes to charge one with that quantity. In the cells the beets are subjected to a water pressure of 15 pounds to the inch, and 2,400 litre of juice is thus extracted, the litre being a little over a quart. The juice from the diffusion battery flows to the measuring tank and thence to the carbonators, square tanks of moderate size, in which it is saturated with carbonic acid gas, generated by the burning of lime in the company's kiln, and with slaked lime. From the carbonators it is forced by powerful pumps through a filter press of which there are thirteen, each containing ofwhich there are thirteen, each containing. The juice flows from the presses in a clear stream, and is carried off to go through a somewhat similar saturation with sulphuric acid gas, made by burning sulphur. Then it goes through a bag filter, and thence to the evaporators, four huge square boiling tanks of most ingenious construction.

The first evaporator is heated by waste steam from the factory, passing through coils beneath the tank. The air in this tank is exhausted to a vacuum of about five or six, so that the juice in it boils at about 95 degrees Centigrade. The steam from this boiler is drawn off by suction at the top and is utilized to boil the contents of the next tank by means of coils similar to those beneath the first tank. In this tank there is a greater vacuum and a lower boiling point, and so on, until in the fourth evaporator the temperature is only 60 degrees Centigrade, the vacuum being from 22 to 26. The juice is boiled down to about 1-75th of its original volume. From the evaporators it goes to the "strike pan," where it is grained into sugar. It flows from the strike pan in a great, heavy mass, which lies in a trough with a series of propelling screws agitating it, called the mixer. From the mixer it drops through the floor to the centrifugals, where the molasses returns to be treated again, and the sugar is washed with pure water before going to the dryer, an immense revolving tank, which emits the pure white sugar into barrels, ready for shipment or storage in the great warehouse at the end of the building remote from the beet bins. The whole process occupies about forty hours. The molasses thrown off by the centrifugals is placed in what is called crustallizers, great tanks kept at a certain temperature, in which it is agitated for sixty hours. Then it returns to the centrifugals, and more first-class sugar is obtained. This refuse mollases is taken to another part of his building, and put through what is called the osmos process, which depends on the use of a prepared paper, and still more sugar is obtained.

The water directly used in the making of sugar is obtained from artesian wells. But that used in the sluices, washers and other preliminary processes is furnished by the company's pumping plant, situated on the Grand river, about one mile from the factory.

The securing of contracts with farmers for the growing of 5,000 acres is no easy task, although it is believed that there will not be very much trouble experienced in Peterborough in this regard. The labor involved in thinning and harvesting the beet is the most serious aspect of the case.

The farmers to whom we talked, who had contracts with the company, spoke very hopefully of the future. They are, with a few exceptions, satisfied with their experience so far. The average crop is about 4 tons to the acre.

TESTING BEETS.

Each wagon load of beets is weighed as it reached the sheds. The wagon is afterwards weighed separately and the net weight of the load determined. From the centre of the load a sample basket of the beets is taken and the lot tagged and marked. They are carried to the test department and weighed as they stand. Each beet of the sample is gone over, and should not enough of the tops have been removed in topping, then the surplus is taken off. The sample of beets is thoroughly washed, sliced, the juice extracted, subject to test and the result determined. The difference between the weight of the sample as taken on the load, and afterwards as washed and topped, determines, as an average, the weight of the load. As a general thing to much soil is allowed to remain on the beets. This should be removed when pulling the beet, as the earth does not count in the load.

The company acts on the principle that its and the farmers' interests are identical. An industry that will expend $400,000 per annum among the growers and its staff is now worth encouraging.

QUEBEC WINS FROM PETERBOROUGH

At Montreal on Saturday by a Score of 8 to 0

The Peterborough and Quebec Rugby teams played off for the intermediate championship in Montreal on Saturday afternoon on the M.A.A.A. grounds. In the first half Quebec scored one point, while Peterborough failed to score. In this half Hal Burnham had the misfortune to have his knee injured, and was unable to continue the game, and weakened the Peterborough team considerably. In the second half Quebec added 7 more points to their favor. Peterborough failing to score. The following players represented the teams:

Peterborough—Back, Lee; half-backs, McPherson, Burnham, Rickey; quarter, Bell; scrimmage, Dennard, Hurtubise, Thornton; wings, Dillon, Revell, Asseltine, Meagher, Crowley, Craig Noble, Cameron.

Quebec—Pugh, Toffield, Stock, Drum, Wetmore McWilliam, Chambers, Carter, Goode, Lindsay, Scott, McGillivray, Power, Watson, McGreevy, Rattray, Ross Belanger and Salfort.

HOCKEY.

Galt, Nov. 29.—Mr. H. G. ("Dutchy") Morison, Captain of last year's Galt hockey team, received a telegram last night announcing his promotion from the Merchants' Bank here to the banks' branch at Winnipeg. He leaves Galt this evening for Toronto, and Toronto for the West on Monday or Tuesday. His departure has caused much regret, particularly in sporting circles, as he was counted on to captain this year's hockey team. The best wishes accompany him to his new field of labor.

London, Ont., Nov. 29.—At the organization meeting of the London Hockey Club held last night it was formally decided to apply for membership in the O.H.A.

Both officers, players and all connected with the hockey movement will be confined absolutely to locals. There will not be the least suspicion of anything but clean sport. Of the players likely to be on this year's line-up are said to be Smith, recently returned from South Africa; McMahon, of last year's team; and one or two others. A fast Stratford forward of the Classic City's junior team is also said to be in the city, and will be with the Londons this season.

Simcoe, Nov. 29.—The annual meeting of the Simcoe Hockey Club was held at the Battersby House, when it was decided to enter a team in the intermediate O.H.A. Mr. Arthur G. Slaght was chosen delegate to the annual meeting.

THE BRITISH TROOPS EVACUATE SHANGHAI

Orders State That Evacuation will Take Place About December 20th

Corruption is Increasing in China—Ingratitude of Present Administration—Religious Orders in France

London, Nov. 29.—The British troops have received orders to evacuate Shanghai, says a despatch from that city. The evacuation will take place about December 20.

London, Nov. 29.—A despatch from Pekin says that no effective attempt has been made to secure fiscal reforms, and corruption is, if anything, increasing. The Pekin Octroi under administration of Prince Su, yielded about $1,100,000, compared with about $230,000 previously, but Su was promptly transferred to another office, and condemned for exposing the true earnings of Octroi. Under his successor, Ching, the speculation is worse than ever. China has to pay in January about $30,000,000 on account of indemnity. At the present exchange rate she must remit an additional $5,300,000 to meet the deficiency. Ingratitude also marks the present Administration. While the British held the railway from Pekin to the Great Wall they built two extensions, paid two coupons of the loan, left a balance of $150,000, and restored the line to perfect condition. When Russia restored to China the line from the Great Wall to Niu Chwang, all the rolling stock was damaged, and China had to pay $1,500,000 for the expenses of maintenance. Yet adds the correspondent, China rewarded Russia by granting on favorable terms a concession for a railway from Ching Ting to Tai Yuen Foo, while refusing to the British leave to ubild a railway from Shan Si to Yangste, though this right was formally conceded in the agreement signed in September, 1898.

London, Nov. 29.—The French Government, says a Paris correspondent, will only recommend Parliament to grant authorization to the religious order, Cistercians of Lerins, on conditions that the members of the order give up their liquor distillery. The correspondent adds that the application of authorization by the monks of Grande Chartreuse, is among those that the Government proposes to refuse.

London, Nov. 29.—The order issued yesterday by the Board of Agriculture, prohibiting the importation of cattle from six New England States, is based upon the action of the United States authorities against the foot and mouth disease, and is simply a scientific sanitary precaution.

The order does not apply to shipments of cattle from New York, nor from Canadian ports, where there is no evidence of existence of the disease. About 150,000 beasts have been imported from Boston alone during the present year. This trade will be temporarily suspended, and the effect can hardly fail to be a rise in the price of meat.

Portland will also be included in the official order, and this will turn shipments usually made from that port to St. John and Halifax. The German authorities will probably follow the British example, since they have been enforcing rigorous laws of sanitary inspection against Russian cattle.

CANADIAN PRECAUTIONS.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—The Dominion authorities are alive to the seriousness of the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease in the New England States. Orders have been issued by Dr. Rutherford, chief veterinary inspector of the Department of Agriculture that all stock cars coming from the Eastern States shall be thoroughly cleansed and disinfected before crossing the frontier into Canada. The officers of the department are strictly carrying out the new regulation.

Montreal, Nov. 29.—"Undoubtedly the problem of irrigating the large area of land in the Northwest Terrirories situated in Western Assiniboia, and Southern Albert, in which the rainfall during the majority of years is insufficient to bring crops to maturity, is one of the greatest problems the Canadian Pacific Railway is at present trying to solve in the Northwest. We have been studying it for some time past, and to-day we are in a position to submit a report to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the President of the Company."

The speaker was F. S. Dennis, for a number of years acting Deputy Minister of Public Works, who was appointed by the Canadian Pacific Railway to study the possibilities that would be effected by irrigation, and to-day he announced to a reporter the result of his investigations.

"Irrigation, I may say," Mr. Dennis went on to say, "has now passed beyond the experimental stage, and at the present time there are certain very large areas of land, particularly in Southern Albert, owned by the C.P.R. which only require the construction of irrigation canals to turn them from uninhabited districts into thriving villages. Among these there is in particular a district of some two and a half million acres lying east of Calgary which is traversed by the C.P.R., and which will be irrigated by water taken from the Bow River near Calgary. Its construction will mark a great advance in the development of Southern Alberta, and in large areas lying contiguous to the main line of the C.P.R."

MR. HULL GETS $10,500

Besides a Lot for Which the Crown Paid $1100

The Exchequer Court which has been in session here before Hon. Geo. W. Burbidge, in the case Rex. vs. Hull has concluded its labors. The question involved was one in reference to compensation for land expropriated from John Hull, of Lakefield, in the construction of the Trent Canal. After the case had been heard, judgment was given, in favor of Mr. Hull for $10,500, and he was also granted the absolute right in fee simple of a lot known as the "Davis lot," which cost the Crown $1,100, together with certain rights of way and privileges. This sum is in full compensation for lands, buildings and general injury by reason of the expropriation. It includes cost to the amount of $450 allowed by the judge.

G. F. Shepley, K.C., of Toronto, and R. R. Hall, Peterborough, for the Crown. D. W. Dumble, K.C., Peterborough, and George H. Watson, K.C., Toronto, for defendant.

Excursions to Guelph

The Provincial Winter Fair at Guelph this year should be visited by every farmer and stockman, and by every person interested in the advancement of agriculture and the breeding of live stock and poultry. $7,000 are offered in prizes. The new buildings have increased facilities both for exhibits and visitors. Daily lectures by well known and expert authorities on the different subjects will be found both instructive and interesting. The Grand Trunk Railway will issue round trip tickets at single first class fare, from stations west of Kingston, good going Dec. 7th, to 12th, inclusive, and valid returning until Dec. 15th, 1902. Further particulars from Agents.

WELSH COLONY DOING WELL

Body Blow to the Cobden Club—Canadian Trade Should Benefit

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—The Department of the Interior states that the reports as to destitution in the Welsh Patagonian colony, near Saltcoats, are very much exaggerated and practically unreliable. The latest information in the department is that these people have done very well, considering their financial condition on arrival in this country last spring, and have been able to earn a considerable amount in good wages this year. A departmental officer is, however, being sent to the colony to make a very close examination into the circumstances of the people.

London, Nov. 29.—Some dismay was felt in Cobden Club circles on the morning after their long-planned demonstration against Chamberlainism and Imperial protection at the disclosures in the Daily Mail, showing that the club is chiefly alien in membership. More than half the members are foreigners, living in France, Germany, Austria, the United States and Spain. Many others are foreigners living in England. What right, asks the Mail, have they to speak for England?

SUNDAY IN TOWN

Events Connected with the Church Services Yesterday

In the Charlotte street Methodist church yesterday Rev. J. J. Rae, of Oshawa, preached in the morning to a large congregation, and Rev. W. J. Jolliffe in the evening.

Rev. W. L. Armitage preached at both services at All Saints' yesterday. The subject in the morning was, "St. Andrew," and in the evening "Malachi and his age applied to the present," which was the first of a series on the Book of Malachi.

At St. Andrew's church yesterday the pastor, Rev. J. G. Potter, occupied the pulpit in the morning, and Rev. E. D. MacLaren, D.D., of Vancouver, one of the most prominent men in the Presbyterian church, in the evening. There was a large congregation at both services.

Rev. E. D. MacLaren, D.D., formerly of Vancouver, B.C., and recently appointed to succeed Dr. Robertson, as superintendent of Presbyterian Missions in the North-West, preached in St. Paul's Presbyterian church yesterday morning.

In the Murray street Baptist church yesterday, Rev. Mr. Bastow preached in the morning on "Searching the Scriptures," and in the evening dealt with "Our duty with regard to the coming referendum."

Permanent Cure for Neuralgia

Experienced sufferers state that no remedy relieves neuralgia so quickly as a hot application of Polson's Nerviline, the strongest liniment made. Nerviline is certainly very penetrating and has a powerful influence over neuralgic pains which it destroys almost at once. Nerviline is highly recommended for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, and Toothache. Better try a 25c. bottle, it's all right.

STARVATION IN SWEDEN

France has a larger submarine navy than any other nation, but perhaps it will not be useful enough to give her any advantage. Captain Hellman, commander of the French submarine flotilla at Cherbourg, has forwarded to the proper naval authorities his report of the work of his boats during the recent fleet manoeuvres. He is said to have expressed the conviction that only the vessels known as submersibles are of any practical use, or can be depended upon at sea. The French submarines are divided into two categories. The first are the submersibles, which are fitted with engines that propel them on the surface, and, at the same time, charge the accumulators, which are brought into use when they plunge beneath the waters. Thus if their accumulators should give out below, they can come to the surface, set their engines at work, and remanufacture energy for another dive. The other class are simply fitted with accumulators, which contain all the energy at their disposal, and they are obliged not only to return to get their accumulators recharged, but to port before they become entire helpless. These vessels Captain Hellman condemns. He says that submarines of the Mors type can never be considered as more than auxiliaries, and he declares that the difficulties of navigating them are such that the crew are bound in the end to become the victims of alarming demoralization. With the submersibles, however, an attack upon an iron clad steaming at the rate of twelve knots an hour is possible.

PEACE IN THE MINES

Compromise is now the talk between the miners and the operators in the hard coal regions. Those most interested are inclining to the idea of making their own agreements with the Commission decides only such points as the contestants cannot determine for themselves without an arbitrator.

This is only following the natural course of events. Men who are deeply interested in a labor proposition, on either side of it, are seldom satisfied to adjust it until there has been a trial of strength over it; in other words, a good stiff fight. Then both sides find out in a definite was how strong they are, and, in modern times, learn how far public opinion goes with either party to the quarrel.

The coal question in the anthracite region is clearly one that had to be fought over strenuously. The latest struggle was but an incident in a long war. It may be that peace has returned to stay since the desperate contest of the past season, for no one can doubt that there is more of a feeling of mutual respect than has been known in a long time before. Such a sentiment usually precedes a final adjustment of a controversy, and it is the hope of the country now that both sides have had all the fight they want for a generation.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Mr. Joseph Gibson, of Ingersoll, in a recent public address on the referendum said he thought the vote required to carry it was not too high, and if that number (212,723) did not turn out in favor of the proposed law it would show that public sentiment was not sufficiently advanced. Mr. Gibson is a very pronounced prohibitionist, but in this opinion he is directly at variance with other leading advocates of the measure, who think that a bare majority of the vote cast should suffice.

The prevalent belief that suicide is a product of the higher civilization is contradicted by the fact that in India suicides by opium are committed by the natives for the most trivial reasons, even children destroying themselves after being scolded, and wives because husbands complain of their dinners. There are no regulations for the sale of poison, and anybody can go into a bazaar and buy as much as he wants.

White American forests are decreasing at an alarming rate. Germany had in 1900 356,173 acres of wood more than it had in 1882. Millions of feet of timber might be saved in this country annually if the German custom were followed of cutting trees about six to twelve inches from the ground, making logs a foot or two longer than they are here.

A novel project has been put forth in Wisconsin for the sale in the form of ice of mineral water, and a company has been formed to exploit it. It is proposed to dispose of the water in this form so as to save to the consumer the cost of the ice ordinarily bought to cool the various mineral waters as sold now in bottles and cans. Ordinarily, the ice to cool mineral waters, as kept in tanks, business offices, clubs, hotels and homes, costs more than the water itself, and it is proposed to cut in half the cost of water, ice and freight and distributing charges. In the first place, ice will be made of the spring water, retaining all the original mineral properties, the water melting in the consumer's tank and returning to its natural form as pure as when taken from the spring. The ice can be furnished, it is declared, at less cost than the water.

Mr. Henry Loomis Nelson writes to the Boston Herald that the coming session of Congress is likely to adjourn without any definite action in regard to the Isthmian canal. No treaty with Colombia satisfactory to the administration has yet been negotiated, and even if one should be before the Senate meets in Mr. Nelson's opinion, Senator Morgan, who is as determined as ever that the Nicaraguan route shall be selected, will be able to prevent its ratification until the session of Congress has expired. Mr. Nelson firmly believes, however, that eventually the canal will be built, and will go by the Panama route, because of its great advantages over the Nicaragua route.

It is thought that the Chinese Government is planning another upheaval. It has become known that the Empress Dowager has received secret reports from all the viceroys and governors regarding the number of soldiers and the amount of war munitions that could be raised, and that instructions have been given to retain the instructors in the use of the rifle and in Western drill. If the Empress Dowager starts another anti-Christian movement she may find no escape from the penalty of her crimes.

me. You bound yourself, in your gold-greed, to do anything I exacted of you when the six months should be up. What I meant to make of you was a groom in my stables, a place you're well fitted for, and you can't refuse it without breaking your pledge, the same as obtaining eight thousand pounds on false pretenses. How will Miss Gray fancy being the wife of my groom? We must ask her when she wakes from her fainting fit."

"Let me first ask you a question" said Newcome. "Whose property is this?"

He supported Winifred's slender, white-clad body with his left arm, and pressed it close against his heart. With his right hand he held up a moonstone, cut in the shape of a Sphinx's head. As he raised it aloft the light touched the stone, and struck out a strange blue gleam, like an eye that peered through a cloud, searching, searching for something that sooner or later it would find.

"That is mine!" said Macaire, and sprang towards it. But Newcome lifted the stone beyond his reach.

"You are sure it is yours?" he asked again.

"I've had it for years, till it was stolen from me. Unless you want to be called 'thief' as well as dog and liar, you will hand it back."

"You have had it for years?" Newcome echoed. "I thought so. It was you who stole it from Harold Norman."

For once in his life Lionel Macaire visibly quailed. His hideous face seemed literally to wither, his body to shrink; but in a moment he was himself again, all traces of emotion gone, save for a quivering of the nostrils, a slight twitching of the marred eyelids.

"I don't know the name," he said.

Hope Newcome turned a sudden blaze of hatred and contempt upon him. "You know it as well as that of Leland Marmion, the Californian murderer!" he flung at the millionaire.

Speechless, Macaire stared at him, with mouth falling open, jaw dropped down. Then, his voice coming back, he gasped: "You scoundrel!"

"I am Harold Norman's son," answered the man who had called himself Hope Newcome. "His son, and the son of F. R. Z. I am Harold Norman's namesake, and I have lived for this night, lived to be his avenger."

"Great Heavens!" he heard Macaire mutter, beneath his panting breath. Even for that iron self-control, the stubborn courage that could inflict horrible self-mutilation for bare life's sake, and safety's sake, was broken down. But again it was only for a moment.

"I wonder if you know what you are talking about?" Macaire sneered, his voice coming back to steadiness. "I only know that you seem to be threatening. Take care or I will have you arrested."

Hope Newcome—or Harold Norman—laughed. "Try it," he said. "You will never have so good a chance. The police are outside now, for they have seen certain letters found long ago, but not too long for justice, in the pocket of a dead man—one of those whom you, Leland Marmion, murdered."

As that last word leaped like a sword from the accuser's lips, a strange thing happened. The women at the table cried out in terror, and in the same instant utter darkness fell. The brilliant lights that had made vivid the blue and gold and purple and marble-white vanished like a burst bubble, and the room was black as a night of plague. The screams and the sudden darkness came together. The quickest eye and ear could not have sworn with certainty which was first.

Someone had turned off the electric lights—how, nobody knew. There was a soft fluttering and rustling of women's dresses, hysterical exclamations, and the crash of breaking dishes and falling chairs as people pushed away from the table, blinded and confused by the black darkness.

Only Hope Newcome did not move. Even if he lost his revenge, he would not put Winifred away to recover the chance slipping from him. She was waking from her stupor, and clung to him, murmuring the name by which she had known him. And, stooping closer, he thought he heard her whisper:

"Partner, partner, if you could forgive!"

CHAPTER XLI.

The Mills of the Gods.

Never for one moment had Lionel Macaire been unprepared for the possibility of the blow which had fallen to-night.

He had not expected it; he had told himself a thousand times that it would never fall upon him—that it could not fall. Still he loved life, and he had worked hard to make it worth living. He had shed blood to make it worth living, and he did not mean that Nemesis should strike him from behind.

The millionaire had not a house nor a room of his in one of his houses where all electric lights could not be turned off by means of a single button. His steam yacht, waiting his orders in harbor, was always ready to start at ten minutes' notice. Once he would have had to depend upon horses for a dash to the sea, but now he had the means by which he could outdistance the fastest horse on earth.

In his stables stood a racing Daimler auto-car of fifty horse-power, though its seating capacity was but for two persons. Like the yacht, it was kept ready by its engineer for an instant start, filled with petrol and water, its machinery oiled.

To-night, as he switched off the lights from the dining-room, he flung himself at a swinging door behind the purple drapery—a door by which the servants entered through a passage leading to the huge kitchens. The door moved noiselessly, and Macaire's artificial foot limped over the thick felt with which the floor was covered faster than it had ever done before.

Half-way down the passage was a door which opened near the stables. A moment, and Macaire was in the room where the motor-car was kept, for the key was on his chain, and only the engineer, absent now, had a duplicate.

Macaire sprang to the car and lit the electric lamps, his heart pounding in his ear, for the great crisis had come, and he was working for life or death.

True, Hope Newcome might have lied; he might suspect, yet not have the proofs he hinted at. But it would not do to risk his having lied. If Macaire could reach Gravesend, where the "Diavolo" lay (he hoped that few knew she was there), before the police of London had warned the police of Gravesend by telegraph, there was a chance for him still. He would trust the yacht to show her heels to anything afloat. The seas were wide. There were countries where he could hide himself, and there was money on board the "Diavolo"—money and thousands of pounds' worth of diamonds which he kept there in a safe in case of such necessity as had arisen to-night. He

It is intended to apply to the Stock Exchanges in New York, Boston, Montreal and Toronto for the listing of the stock of the company.

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are :—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey :—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4.05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5.23
	100.00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 1350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 ton [illegible] te above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide-water, within 100 miles of the works

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles ; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows :—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4.00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows :—

	ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902, to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2.70
July 1st, 1903, " " 1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904, " " 1905	1.65	1.65
July 1st, 1905, " " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906, " " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows :—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6⅔ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000.00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000 00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to .... $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is .... $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is...... $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

GOLD Is the World's Wealth!

YOU WANT IT

We have it. The property of the ORO RICO MINING SYNDICATE located in San Bernardino County, California, consists of THREE GREAT GOLD MINES, a total of 30 mining claims comprising 600 acres, which under several years operation and development have reached a state of profitable production. For the purpose of erecting a suitable mill and plant for treating the ores we offer a moderate block of stock (par value $1) at 20 cents a share This Mill we expect to have in operation early in 1903, at which time we expect to commence the payment of Ten Per Cent Annual Dividends on the PAR VALUE. We solicit an opportunity to place before you the prospectus, reports of mining experts and actual facts regarding this great gold property. We believe in our mines. There a a fortune for all of us "knocking at the door" NOW. Fortune, they ay, knocks but once. Write or call today.

STOCK MARKETS

Present Level Foundation for a New Rise

New York, Nov. 29.—matters marketwise are shaping properly for future prices. At the present time prices are below values. The present level at which stocks are again being accumulated by the original promulgators of past bull campaigns represents an extreme basis of solidarity, the most needful essential of any market. The people behind the present accumulation of stocks are not the crowd of new western speculative plungers, who are bulls to-day and bears to-morrow, proclaiming loudly at times their market opinions, with the view to inducing the public to or sell as best suits their own market situation; but they are the people that foster and encourage the course of prices during the market era of the two McKinley administrations. There are less brass band accompaniments to their market ventures, but the opportunities they afford in the market for money making are far superior and accompanied by indefinitely less risk to the outsider. Their recent success in shaking out the menacing and noisy interests lately in the market to a large extent, was their first act of preparation for a more or less extended bull campaign. It has removed the great market menace recently existing, and placed the floating supply of stocks into the strongest hands of Wall street. These people foster a growing speculation, and do not immediately destroy it whenever there are a few dollars in sight and to be made by so doing. Their profits are larger in the end. Directly ahead are strong existing facts, which will be the basis of sustained advance, and the magnet will steadily draw outside support to the campaign for advancing prices. Such market movements grow like the rolling snowball until they attain such dimensions and weight that they can be rolled no longer. Then comes the finis of the campaign. The best evidence of a nearing of the end is when everyone generally is engaged in buying stocks. The movement only ends with the absolute satiation of the public. Their satiation is merely limited to the full extent of their buying capacity. There can be no disputes as to the smallness of public holdings at present. Existant facts and the absolute certainty with which their maintenance for some months to come can be definitely figured warrant confident buying of stocks at present. The bullish tinge to the speculative kaleidoscope will again become visible to speculative vision, and very shortly.

Summary.—L. & N., B. R. T., and sugar were very strong, and considerable covering took place in the first hour. After the Bank statement prices declined from 1-2 to 2 per cent. The market rallied slightly at the close. Copper was freely purchased by Standard Oil interests. The market was in conformity with usual half holiday speculation. Traders evened accounts. The market next week should be higher. Monday's letter will deal with those two tractions. Money closed 3 and 4 per cent. Sales 235,100.

NEW OIL FIELDS OF ONTARIO

Our Mr Fox has just returned from a trip of personal investigation to the NEW WONDERFUL OIL GUSHER field in the Township of Raleigh, in the County of Kent. He reports that the whole country is literally with excitement. Chatham—respectable, easy going old Chatham—stands amazed, while oil operators from Pennsylvania, Ohio, Texas, California and from the big refineries at Petrolia and Sarnia fill her streets and hotels to overflowing—all seeking OIL! OIL! OIL!—offering figures for land that would have been considered sheer madness a few weeks ago. The roads to the oil fields are lined with all kinds of carriages, wagons and loads of machinery and derricks. Several drilling rigs are already partly erected and contracts have been made for the sinking of at least FIFTY WELLS within the next thirty days.

ON FIRE

LANDS HAVE QUADRUPLED IN PRICE WITHIN THE LAST TWO WEEKS outside of the Gurd & Co. syndicate.

The Ontario and California Oil Co., Limited,

were first on the ground, and have the largest holdings, amounting to about ONE THOUSAND ACRES, RIGHT IN THE BIG GUSHER FIELD IN RALEIGH, while at the scene of operations our Mr Fox closed negotiations with the representatives of two of the largest oil refineries in Canada to sink a number of wells IMMEDIATELY, and at least FIVE WELLS must be completed within sixty days.

At NORTHWOOD—about ten miles from Chatham—our eighteenth well is down about three hundred feet. Here the company is operating about SIXTEEN HUNDRED acres of great promise - every well sunk so far has been a paying oil producer. Watch this field also very closely. But advertising space is limited—send for Ontario & California Oil Co's November report, etc., and see for yourself.

The volume of enquiries to this office show that our people are becoming alive to the great possibilities lying right at our doors.

The block of stock which is being offered is going very rapidly, and at any time may be withdrawn.

Linton's Bank Failure

Lakefield News: The affairs of Messrs. James Linton & Co., private bankers, are being brought into shape, and in a short time the creditors may expect another dividend. Mr. Linton has transferred his assets into the hands of seven trustees, viz., Messrs. W. H. Casement, A. E. Kennedy, W. Young, W. J. Bullock, I. Church, and W. Sherin, subject to the approval of the creditors, in consideration of their giving him a release from all further obligations. In the event of the creditors accepting the proposition, Mr. Linton's family agree to abandon claims which they have against the estate amounting to $1200. A general meeting of the creditors is called for Friday, December 5th, at 2 o'clock, p.m., in the town hall, when this proposition will be submitted to them. If this arrangement is consented to by the creditors, a dividend will at once be declared of 20 cents on the dollar. It is expected that the balance of the assets will realize a dividend of about 15 cents on the dollar. We understand that the Trader's Bank is advancing money on the assets, and are doing all in their power to help Mr. Linton in his efforts to satisfy his creditors.

Interesting Items.

A salmon weighing 200 pounds is not to be found every day. It is therefore interesting to learn that such a huge fish was caught with hook and line off Gabarus Harbour, near Sydney, Nova Scotia, a short time ago. Being too large to be taken into the boat, it was towed from the fishing ground to the harbor. The men were codfishing at the time.

The State Legislature of New York has authorized the authorities of New York City to plant trees in the tenement districts. In this connection it is pointed out that it is not shade alone that makes it cooler under a tree in summer. The coolness of the tree itself helps, for its temperature is about forty-five degrees, Fahrenheit, at all times, as that of the human body is a fraction more than ninety-eight degrees. So a clump of trees cools the air as a piece of ice cools the water in a pitcher.

"Don't spit on the sidewalks!" is the new command of the New York Board of Health. Three years ago the board began its anti-spitting crusade by forbidding expectoration upon ferry-boats, trolley and elevated cars, and in car stations; and now the side walks are to be protected. The justification of these measures is the statement that twenty years ago almost six deaths in every hundred in New York City were caused by tuberculosis, whereas last year the deaths from this cause numbered only about two and a half in the hundred.

According to the statistics gathered by the United States Weather Bureau, 713 persons in the United States were killed or fatally injured by lightning during the year 1900. Of these 291 were struck under the open sky, 158 in houses, 57 under trees and 54 in barns. The circumstances attending the death of the remaining 151 victims were not ascertained. During the same year 973 persons were injured by lightning, but survived. The Bureau, upon statistics extending over 10 years ending with 1900, estimates the average annual number of deaths from lightning at from 700 to 800.

An engineer of Zurich, L. Thormann, reports, after a careful examination, that sufficient electric power could be developed from the waterfalls of the Alps to run all the railways of Switzerland. There would be little or no reduction of cost, he says, but the time may come when the change from steam to electricity may be desirable, because Switzerland has to import all the coal she uses. From 21 waterfalls, some of which are already partially utilized for industrial purposes, 38,000 horse-power could be developed, but only 60,000 horse-power would be required to replace the steam-power now used on the railroads.

Ruined by a Pig.

Fiction narrates many incidents wherein animal pets figure as causes of the ruin or salvation of their owners. In real life such instances are by no means rare. Not long ago there died in an English workhouse a man named John Evans, who, ten years ago, was a prosperous farmer, but who was brought to poverty by a pig. One day John discovered that his pigsty needed patching up, so he transferred his pigs to a hastily constructed enclosure under an old shed. The mother pig began rooting around and turned up some ancient gold pieces. There was a legend that the farm had once been the site of an old monastery, and that in the troublous times of the eighth Henry the monks had hidden their treasure in the garden. What more natural than that John should think his pig had discovered the hiding place of the monkish gold? He gave up working his farm and devoted all his time to digging about the barnyard, pulling down old walls and generally taking up the profession of a treasure-seeker. His spare time was spent in looking over old manuscripts, trying to find some records of the former owners of the place. His business went to pieces, his men robbed him and he was eventually a pauper and went to die in the poorhouse—all on account of that pig who turned up the gold pieces.

Has Been.

An Englishman went into a restaurant in a New England town, and was served for the first course with a delicacy unknown to him. So he asked the waiter what it was, and the waiter replied: "It's bean soup, sir," whereupon the Englishman, in high indignation, responded: "I don't care what it's been; I want to know what it is."—Philadelphia "Times."

The man on the stage who does the trick of escaping from firmly tied ropes, submits to the bonds with a smile. He knows he can get out of the ropes that are being knotted. Put the same man in the woods and let Indian captors bind him to a tree for torture and he would struggle to the last against the bonds.

When the stomach is diseased there are bonds being woven every hour about the organs dependent on the stomach—heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, etc. The folly of mankind is to passively submit to the fastening of these bonds with no effort to escape until the pain they cause arouses fear.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of heart, liver, lungs, kidneys and other organs, when these diseases, as is often the case, have their origin in the diseased stomach.

"For a long time I was suffering and was hardly able to get about," writes Mr. Andrew J. Jennings, of Thomas, Tucker Co., W. Va., Box 194. "Was bothered with kidney trouble and my whole system was out of order; had no appetite. A friend of mine told me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I did so and the first bottle restored my appetite. I took six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and some of the 'Pleasant Pellets' and feel like a new person."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the clogged system from impurities.

PRESSURE IN BEHALF OF CANADIAN CATTLE

British Government Asked to Rush Through a Bill Suspending the Embargo--Still the British Public are Getting Cheaper Meat Than for Some Time Past

London, Dec. 1.—The Elder-Dempster Company write the Times, warning St. Lawrence navigators that, according to Captain Jones, of the steamer Lake Simcoe, Belle Isle light is not correctly sectored. He urges that either the chart of the light be altered, preferably the latter, for the consequence to some stranger might possibly be disastrous.

London, Dec. 1.—The stoppage of the importation of cattle from Boston has increased pressure upon the British Government to rush a short Act through Parliament admitting Canadian cattle. Hon. Mr. Hanbury, speaking on Saturday, repeated his refusal to relax the embargo on Canadian cattle, asserting that the Board of Agriculture must at least protect the British farmer against the importation of disease, though, of course, no one knows better than Mr. Hanbury, that, seeing that one million Canadian cattle have been landed without the smallest suspicion of disease, it is ridiculous to suggest any risk from Canadian herds. Large cattle arrivals at Liverpool are keeping prices below recent quotations. The highest prices obtained at Liverpool on Saturday for the best quality were five pence to five and a quarter pence per pound, against seven pence two months ago. Second-class beef also was never so plentiful, and the immense further supplies now on the sea make better prices improbable for the present.

DENY HAZING KILLED HIM

Diabetes Caused Death of a Young Student from Lakefield

A rumor has been circulated in Peterborough and Lakefield for some weeks, to the effect that Harry McKibbon, of Lakefield, had been so severely treated at college that death had resulted. Principal McCrimmon, of the College, says the student was suffering from diabetes, which troubled him shortly after he came to the school, on September 1st. Dr. Sinclair treated him for the disease, and the boy was confined for some time in the college hospital. He went bought $1.04 in goods and handed out November 1. Principal McCrimmon says there is no foundation for the rumor that McKibbon died from the effects of hazing. Dr. Sinclair's statements in regard to the case concur with those of the principal. The boy never told him that he had been hazed, but it appears that his grandfather, with whom he lived, suspected that the illness was brought on by hazing. The doctor says the disease was coming on before the unfortunate student entered the college.

A SHOCKING FATALITY

G. T. R. FIREMAN KILLED AT VICTORIA JUNCTION LINDSAY

The Unfortunate Man Was Underneath His Engine Extracting a Poker From the Fire Box When the Engineer Pulled Ahead

A most distressingly sad accident happened about 5.30 Friday morning at Victoria Junction, on the outskirts of Lindsay, when a man named Joe. Barnes, of Lindsay, formerly of North Toronto Junction, lost his life. The unfortunate man was a fireman in employ of the G.T.R. Early this morning he was called to go on a double-header train bound for Midland. This train pulled out at 5.25 in charge of Conductor R. Greenbury. Mr. J. Storey was engineer on the first engine, No. 114, and Mr. J. Costello, the engineer on the second, No. 467. At Victoria Junction a stop was made to allow the conductor to book the time of his arrival at that point. While waiting, Barnes who was fireman for engineer Storey, informed the latter that the poker had got caught in the grate of the fire-box and it would be necessary for him to go under the engine to shove it back. It is reported that Storey told Barnes to go and tell the engineer of the second engine that he was going under the engine, and that he failed to do so. While Barnes was underneath his engine the train moved and the poor fellow was run over, the large wheels passing over his head, one leg and one arm, amputating the latter two and killing him almost instantly. Deceased was only about twenty-two years of age, and has been in the service of the G.T.R. for about five months coming to Lindsay from Allandale. Previous to this Barnes was a fireman on the C.P.R. and is a very popular official. The crew of Conductor Greenbury's train, in addition to the engineers named, were Fireman G. Gerrod, Brakesman Geo. Harrison and G. Graham and deceased.

Coroner Burrows summoned a jury, but on account of several of the witnesses being out of Lindsay, the inquiry was adjourned till 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon next.

FARMERS TELEPHONES

Inauguration of a New System in Province of Ontario

The farmers of the States have, many of them, little independent telephone services of their own at small cost. The first of these is now being put in in Ontario.

The modern Telephone Company has signed contracts for the establishment of a rural telephone service embracing in its circuit Markham, Locust Hill, Whitevale, Green River, and Brougham. About thirty farmers will be benefitted by the service and have 'phones. Work on the installation has been started, and poles are now being erected. In thirty days the service will be running. Each farmer on the system pays $40, which completes the expenditure, with the exception of a small annual payment for maintenance. There is no central exchange on the system; subscribers have communication with each other through a code of signals. Privacy is secured in all conversations, although nine or ten can talk over the two wires at the one time. The instruments are of long-distance equipment.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL

In Regular Session Last Night—Accounts Ordered to be Paid

The following members were present at the regular meeting of the Ashburnham Council last evening: Reeve Smith and Councillors Adams and Pollock. The minutes of the last regular and special meetings were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the secretary of the Peterborough Water Commissioners, re the payment of water rates before the 10th of December, and furnishing a statement of the number of water services in the village, and revenue received therefrom. The above communication was received and the clerk instructed to comply with their request in accordance with the terms of their agreement.

On motion of Councillors Adams and Pollock, the following accounts were ordered to be paid:

Peterborough Light & Power Co.	$ 1 80
Peterborough Examiner	1 50
W. Pocher	3 00
Pay Sheet No. 21	75 00
Pay Sheet No. 22	19 85
Peterborough Light & Power Co. (when certified)	325 00
Total	$425 35

The total expenditure from the 4th to the 29th November was $345.50, and the receipts $1273.86.

The following motion was passed by the Council: That the treasurer be authorized to pay the Peterborough Water Commissioners before the 19th inst. the amount due them under the terms of the agreement for hydrants and street watering, and for private water supply, one half the amount paid or to be paid for the year 1902, by the water consumers in Ashburnham.

The Council adjourned to meet again on the 15th inst., the statutory meeting being then held.

A RICE LAKE LADY MURDERED IN PARIS

SHE WAS A MEMBER OF THE GORE FAMILY OF GORE'S LANDING

The Family were well Known in Peterborough – They Gave the Locality at Rice Lake its Name

Few doubtless who have read of the tragic shooting in Paris, France, of a lady named Mrs. Gore, on Wednesday last, would think of connecting the lady with the Gore family who years ago made their home at Gore's Landing, Rice Lake, and gave that picturesque place its present name. Mr. Tom Gore, the husband of the deceased lady, was one of the well known family of that name who will be remembered by many in this vicinity. Only last summer Mr. Gore visited his aunt, Mrs. Hunt, Cobourg, says the Post, and spent a few days before taking his departure for Europe. Mrs. Gore was the daughter of a very wealthy Mexican army officer and married Mr. Gore about fifteen years ago, the couple living for a time in Mexico City, where they built a magnificent residence, which they called "Gore's Court." She was a leader in both musical and social circles, her husband being noted for his interior exploratory tours into the wilds of the Canadian Northland. Mrs. Gore was then only budding into womanhood. One day the chance remark of the director of Emma Abbott's company then touring in the West, that a voice such as hers belonged to art and the public, rather than to the family circle, fired Mrs. Gore's ambition, and she determined to enter upon a professional life. Her husband opposed the step, and finally Mrs. Gore went to San Francisco, where a divorce was conveniently obtained upon a technical charge of cruelty and nonsupport. Then the divorcee drifted out of the orbit of her former husband's life and he had since heard only casual reports of her in Mexico, at Naples, St. Petersburg, and Leipzig. On July 12th this year Mrs. Gore sailed from New York for Europe, and has been a pupil of the famous composer, Moszkowski, until her death in the room of a Russian actor in the city of Paris. Her maiden name was Nellie S. Stegdall, and being orphaned at an early age she was brought up by an aunt in Alameda, California.

Mrs. Gore was wrapped up in her music, and her business interests were in constant charge. She is credited as being a refined woman of irreproachable character. Her husband made the money to [illegible] and [illegible], and although wealthy, is [illegible] supposed to be staying in [illegible]. The couple had one child, which died.

GREAT BRITAIN WILL REWARD THE LOYALISTS

Wonderful Strides Already Made in the Work of Repatriation

AT A TOTAL COST OF A MILLION A MONTH

Only About 30,000 Persons Now to be Provided for—The Colonial Secretary's Visit

London, Dec. 1—In the last speech made by Mr. Chamberlain upon South African affairs, after the decision had been made that he should visit the new dependencies, the Colonial Secretary endeavored to avoid all controversial points, stating that he desired to sail "with the mind as open and unprejudiced as possible;" but, incidentally in his advocacy of an Imperial grant of an additional eight million pounds to the Transvaal and Orange River Colonies, he stated some interesting facts which show that the re-settlement is proceeding at a rate which is a surprise both to Lord Milner and to the Home Government. At the close of the war, the number housed in the concentration camps was about [illegible] men, women and children; on October 1st, last, there remained only 34,000. "I marvel," said Mr. Chamberlain, "when I think of what the local administration has done. Within a few months of the close of the war we have been able to repatriate something like 70,000 persons. But let it not be thought that we retain one man, woman or child there against their will, unless we are convinced that to allow them to go would be to expose them to suffering, and, possibly death. In the 34,000 there are many people who have come since the end of the war to the concentration camps as camps of refuge and returning prisoners have also stayed there pending their return to their farms. We should see the dispersal of these camps, which are costing us £300,000 a month, with the greatest satisfaction, and we would have closed them on the day the war was over had we not known that it would involve the death of thousands and tens of thousands of the people we had been protecting."

The Colonial Secretary was very outspoken as to the proportion of assistance to be given, laying down the definite proposition that "the defeated must, as a general principal, suffer more than the victors," adding as regards Cape Colony: "In the case of the second invasion the responsibility lies with the Colony itself. With regard to Cape Colony, we have expressed in the clearest terms that not one penny of Imperial money shall be given to compensate those who have rebelled against the Imperial authority. That is independent of the vote to-night, which is for those loyal British and Dutch subjects—of whom there are many—who stood by us in the conflict and who suffered loss in the two Colonies. Lord Milner is of opinion that the sum will enable him to compensate these persons in a larger measure, with a greater percentage of their loss, than in the case of those who fought against us. That is fair and right. What are we giving to our enemies? It is right that the principle should be clearly stated, for here we are creating, for the first time in the history of the world a new precedent. We have often been referred to the great Civil War in America as an instance of the magnanimity which victorious troops and a victorious Government could show to those who had opposed them. Up to the war in South Africa no greater instance of magnanimity had ever transpired, but we are going much beyond that."

The North pensioned those who fought and suffered for its cause, but gave no farthing to those who fought against them; Britain is advancing the money to rebuild the homesteads, and to restock the farms of her late enemies.

Turning from this aspect of the war, it is interesting to note that time has already begun to prove that Britain had powerful European influences at her back even when the situation appeared most serious and the attitude of the Continental press was most menacing. Sir Horace Rumbold, the late Ambassador at Vienna is authority for the statement that in January, 1900, a date when "our plight in South Africa was almost at its worst—he was standing between the representatives of France and Russia in the official circle before a great Court ball in Vienna. The Emperor, Francis Joseph, came up to him and at once said: "In this war I am altogether on the side of England." Such an assurance so spoken, and at such a time is a very different thing from the private protestations of good will which Britain received freely enough from other quarters when the supremacy of her arms was established.

The poor response made to the appeals for pecuniary assistance by the Boer generals in their European tour is likely to facilitate the settlement which Mr. Chamberlain hopes to bring forward by his visit; despite the British blood shed it is from the British Government and from the charitable British public that the main contributions are being made to alleviate—so far as monetary aid can do so—the miseries the war has caused, and to engender that future good feeling between the two races which is evidently necessary to their mutual prosperity.

Bishop Wilkinson, of Zululand, also gives a timely reminder of another factor in the struggle between Boer and Briton which has too often been lost sight of. He says: We are now entering upon the third anniversary of the period surrounding our dark Christmas of 1899, when all seemed hopelessly going against us, and our hold upon South Africa hung upon a very slender thread indeed.

That we should have lost South Africa had they been against us there can be no doubt whatever. That they stood so firmly by us was undoubtedly owing not only to our just and equal rule, but to the amount of mission work we had done amongst them. As Bishop Baynes of Natal, testified, "The natives saved the British Empire in South Africa and I do not hesitate to largely attribute this loyalty to the result of Christian missions."

It was in the neighborhood of our oldest mission stations on the Zulu border, where I lived when in South Africa that one of the finest instances of native loyalty was recorded.

When Botha endeavored to bribe the native chief of that district with large herds of cattle—a bribe well nigh irresistible to a native—if he will join the Boers against us, he replied, "No; I will remain loyal to the British King; take your cattle and yourselves away, or I will drive you out of my country." As it was the same everywhere. Hundreds of warlike Zulus, Ama-Swazi, Basutos Matabele Bechuanas, all through the war, were only waiting a sign from the British Government to rise against the Boers and make short work of their commandos.

It may be years before the full effect of the South African war will be realized; its substitution of British for Boer methods of dealing with the enormously preponderating native races must inevitably beneficially influence an immense area of that "Dark Continent," which Livingstone gave his life to Christianize as well as to explore.

DEMANDS THE RECOGNITION OF SCHOOLS

British Ambassador's Request of the Porte--Tariff Affairs in Germany

Restrict Audience to Grown-Up People---Beerbohm Tree Wishes Only Adults to Witness Tolstoi's "Resurrection"

London, Dec. 1.—Mr. Beerbohm Tree, who announced that when he produces the English version of Tolstoi's "Resurrection," he will endeavor to restrict the audiences to grown-up people, has not yet determined how he will go about the attainment of that result. He was not prepared yesterday to say that he would refuse admittance to any person holding tickets, even if they have not reached the age of discretion. One thing Mr. Tree intends to do is to make known through the newspapers and other advertising mediums that "Resurrection" is a play that should be seen only by those of a certain age and experience.

London, Dec. 1.—A Politische correspondent, in an article quoted by the Vienna correspondent, says it hears that the British Ambassador at Constantinople has demanded recognition by the Porte of several Protestant schools established in Turkey, to which recognition has not previously been accorded, though the Porte promised to grant it. Turkey previously recognized the Russian and French schools founded without official sanction.

London, Dec. 1.—Notwithstanding the general disapproval of the recent obstructive tactics of the Social Democrats, says a Berlin correspondent, it is impossible to ignore the growing storm of indignation excited among the educated classes of Germany by the action of the present majority in Reichstag. This majority is but a thing of yesterday, a coalition of heterogeneous atoms which may be dispersed to all winds tomorrow. It has been arranged in secret behind the scenes and the uncertain and hesitating demeanor of some of its sectional leaders shows the shifting and fallacious nature of the foundations on which the crazy edifice has been erected. The oldest and most experienced National Liberals in the country are, in the words of the National Zeitung, appalled at the weakness which permitted the leaders of their Parliamentary party to trifle with their policy, in which the reactionary Prussian junkers greet the first signs of that attempt on the life and constitutional liberties of the German nation for which the reactionaries have seldom been able to conceal their longing. Almost every influential organ of the educated middle classes is up in arms, says the correspondent.

Boer Leaders Going to Africa

Kruger Has Another Application in to Get Back to His Old Associates

London, Dec. 1.—General Schalkburger and Messrs. Wessels and Wolmarans, the former Boer delegates, sailed yesterday for South Africa. The general carries a letter from Kruger asking that the ex-president be allowed to go back too. Messrs. Wessels and Wolmarans have been refused permits to proceed to the Transvaal colony, but they hope the prohibition will be rescinded after their arrival in Cape Colony.

A WARM WINTER PREDICTED

Man Figures It Out By Intervals of 13 Years

Mr. P. Jones, of West Bay City, Michigan, in writing to a local paper says a mild winter is in store for us, and gives his reasons for the prophecy as follows.—It may seem very strange, but in 1863, when I was only eight years old, my father came home from his first enlistment in the army. The winter beginning in 1863 was a very warm winter, rainy and soft, with some cold weather the last of February and the first of March. This was in Ohio. In 1876, thirteen years later, I was on the Northern Pacific Railroad in Minnesota. It was very warm until February and March then. There was some cold weather, but not long at a time, two or three days at the longest. Just thirteen years later, in 1889, in Ohio, it did not freeze to exceed two inches at any time all winter. The year 1902 brings it thirteen years later. Now when the sun crossed the line each of these years the wind was in the south or southeast. I have a perfect remembrance of these years, why it comes every thirteen years is a mystery to me. I think some of the lumbermen will remember some of these dates, as in [illegible] there were but few logs banked in Minnesota or Wisconsin. This fall the wind was about two degrees east of south when the sun crossed the line.

ITALY BRITAIN'S FRIEND

Will Give England Permission to Cross Her Territory

London, December 1 — An official connected with the Italian Foreign Office said the other day that the King would gladly welcome the request from Downing street for a passage of British troops across Italian Somaliland and would most cheerfully grant such a petition. At the same time, while several papers freely state that Italy must give every assistance to England in bearing civilization to the African barbarians, they maintain that she should, at the same time, form no complications for herself.

H. Succio, of Milan, warns the country against any adventurous proceedings in the neighborhood of Erythrea, while an article in the Mattino of Naples, demands that the Government shall only allow the passage of British troops through Italian territory if sufficient compensation is received. On the other hand, I find La Tribuna of Rome, calling attention to the insurrection in Arabia, and suggesting that it would be well for Italian warships to be on hand when the inevitable division of that part of the Ottoman dominion shall take place.

SHOT HIMSELF IN THE TEMPLE AT HIS BANK

Banker Howarth, of Oakville, Shoots Himself in the Presence of His Daughter

Oakville, Dec. 1.—This town was thrown into a state of excitement at noon today by the news that Mr. Thomas Howarth, of Howarth and Andrews, private bankers, had shot himself. The affair took place in the bank, the only person present being the banker's daughter. It appears that Howarth fired a bullet into his right temple with a revolver, the case being undoubtedly one of attempted suicide. The daughter at once gave the alarm, and Dr. Urquhart was called in to attend to the unfortunate man's injuries. At 2.15 o'clock Howarth was still living, though Dr. Urquhart stated that the wound will undoubtedly be fatal. He is about fifty years of age, and has been a resident of the town for several years. One of his sons is Rowland Howarth, of the Ontario Bank, Toronto.

Later.—Mr. Howarth died shortly after three o'clock. It is now common talk that he committed suicide, and that the rash act was the culmination of financial troubles.

Exclude Canadian Cattle

London, Nov. 29.—The order of the Board of Agriculture excluding live cattle from Boston because of the foot and mouth disease is bound to increase the prices of meat on the eve of the great meat-eating season, Christmas. Canada must benefit considerably, unless the board finds an excuse to include Canadian ports in the exclusion order.

ARE NOT RECEIVED LIKE PRODIGAL SON

Doukhobors Do Not Kill the Fatted Calf for the Pilgrims on Their Return Home

ANOTHER PILGRIMAGE IN VIEW

Government Agent Says Many are Sorry That They Left Their Villages

Winnipeg, Dec. 1—"The Doukhobor pilgrims did not receive a 'prodigal son' welcome on their return to their respective villages," was the remark made by C. W. Speers, general colonization agent for the Dominion Government, on his return from a visit to the colony of those settlers west of Yorkton, to a reporter.

"The 75 per cent. who remained at home are giving them the cold shoulder, and the large bulk of the wanderers now see the folly of their ways and they do not hesitate to admit that they were in the wrong."

"They have all returned to their homes?"

"Yes, and they are comfortable again. They are well supplied with vegetables and grain, and they have plenty of clothing. The police are patrolling the district as usual, and are, of course, keeping a little closer watch on them for a short time. Their reports are of the most favorable character. The Doukhobors who went out on the pilgrimage have undoubtedly gained by their experience.

THEY BUY HORSES.

"One thing is very noticeable, and that is the change in their opinions in regard to the working of cattle. One farmer I visited, Mr. R. B. McKenzie, of Fort Pelly, had sold them nine pairs of horses. I expect to see some of them eating meat before long.

Their grist mills are all in operation again. One mill I visited had ground 700 sacks of flour, and they said that this was not the largest mill they had.

"'When the Doukhobors left their villages their houses were in perfect order, and little harm was done by their wandering; in fact, I think in the long run, good will result from it, for it will open their eyes to the absurdity of their notions. Fully 75 per cent. of the Doukhobors who remained at home and could not be influenced by the agitators, recognize this already."

PREPARE FOR WINTER.

P. Harvey, immigration officer, also returned. Mr. Harvey went through the southern villages. Both officials took an inventory of the provisions of the Russian settlers to ascertain how they were prepared for the winter. They reported that the Doukhobors have a sufficient food supply for six months and their houses were in perfect order.

Mr. Harvey visited twelve colonies and found the inhabitants all happy. Some of them were still singing their dolorous chants, and still expected the Redeemer to come to them. At Blazovinska he found 14,000 bushels of grain in store with supplies of potatoes and other vegetables.

He found the villages where he stayed clean and the inhabitants hospitable.

Only twenty of thirty 'pilgrims' left each village, with the exception of the two largest, which contributed about seventy or eighty to the horde which started on the fanatical march. Those who remained at home, are remonstrating with the pilgrims and pointing out the error of their ways.

Some of the residents of the colony known as Spasoovka told Mr. Harvey that they were willing to register for their lands, and the twenty-four who left there with the fanatics promised not to do so again. Only those who went on the march gave up their animals; those who remained in their villages are purchasing more horses and animals, including a $3,000 stallion, which was brought from Brandon.

THE DEFENCES OF LONDON

Periodically a wave of apprehension sweeps over Great Britain in regard to a possible foreign invasion. Of late it seems to have seized upon the public mind that Blucher's observation concerning London as "a good place to sack," might be translated into actuality, and accordingly proposals are afoot to provide defensive works in the vicinity at a cost of $15,000,000. Prince Bismarck was credited with the remark that an invading army might get into England, but the difficulty would be found in getting out again. As a fact, no foreign army has ever gained a footing in England when the nation was united. When the Armada was sent by Philip of Spain it was on the expectation of a rising that would paralyze resistance. Napoleon the First, Louis the Fourteenth, and Charlemange, each threatened Great Britain with invasion, relying on internal dissention. The latter wrote letters to Offa, King of Mercia, in a tone of menace, which led Offa to turn his thoughts to the proper method of securing his dominion from foreign attempts, which he concluded could be done in no other way than by keeping up a strong naval force. He raised so formidable a fleet that Charlemange was very glad to make terms of friendship. Offa left on his deathbed this useful lesson to his successors, "He who will be secure on land must be supreme at sea." He, rather than Alfred the Great, was the real founder of the British navy. King Offa was the originator of the first real answer to a threatened invasion, in the creation of a powerful fleet. Sir Walter Raleigh wrote three centuries ago, "Surely I hold that the best way is to keep our enemies from treading on our ground," which is as true now, as it was then, or as when Offa gave his immortal lesson over twelve hundred years ago. Yet Great Britain has been greatly addicted to spending money on her forts as well as on her fleets, to the extent, forgetful of the great principle that has been handed down from generation to generation, that preventing a landing is better than the cure of driving out an invader. Two great lessons appear in the record of history—first, that projected invasions of England have always been planned on the belief in a disunited nation, and have invariably been frustrated when ever she possessed an efficient navy; second, that the loss of naval supremacy implies ruin or decadence to a commercial people. The best system of defence against any enemy, is and always has been, a vigorous offensive. For this reason the phrase, "the first line of defence," as applied to the navy, is inaccurate and misleading. The British military frontier, like that of the navy, is not the shores of England. Beyond the naval frontier lies that of the army, whose true function is not defence against invasion, but a far flung offensive battle line, based upon and supported by a mobile navy. If the projected defences of London are based upon any theory of a divided people at home, then it is a phase of panic that must be inexplicable abroad.

A KICK FROM A VOTER

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—As I understand the columns of your independent journal are open to the discussion of any subject, an opportunity presents itself for a ratepayer to express his opinion of our Peterborough Council. As election times are approaching it is all important that the voters publicly express their opinion, that the faults of the present council be corrected, or if they possess too many to correct, let us put others in their places. I think it would not be hard to get a better council than the present one. A council that ignores the voice of the voters should be fired out as soon as possible. This has been done by our present council, not once, but the second time, to my personal knowledge. Last summer a petition signed by twenty-three voters was sent to the council to have a ditch opened (this ditch was closed up and was the cause of flooding many cellars). Now these petitions were ignored, as if those twenty-three voters were of no importance. But when election day comes we will try to show them what we can do. Such a council deserves expulsion, and that's just what we will try and do on January first. Again, the streets of Peterborough were never in a worse condition, and nothing seems to be done to better them. I'd like to know what they are for, if not to keep our streets in repair, and listen to the voices of those who placed them there. Now let us make a change in the government of our city, by electing men who are able and willing to do their work. I know a few hundred at least, who intend to do all in their power to reform our council, or place in power one that is already reformed.

Yours respectfully,

A VOTER.

A TEMPERANCE SUGGESTION

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—I see that the temperance people have again taken up their case, and come to the country for help, which, sir, I am afraid, they will not get. But what I want to ask them is, Why do they not get something up in place of saloons? or in other words, some place where the young and old can go and spend their evenings in the winter time, and teach them the way in which they should go, for I may honestly say that seven out of every ten do not go out with the intention of going to a saloon; but you see they have to walk up and down the streets night after night, till they get tired and perhaps it may be too early to go home. They go and get a drink for a change. They may not stand at the corners, for if they do they only insult people.

Now, sir, to state one way that might be a good thing to help the cause—I suppose our church people have seen the Northern Messenger of some weeks back, with the likeness of one of the great clergyman of the city of London, Newman Hall, and if they read that article they will find other names, such as Roland Hill, and Mr. Murphy, the last named the great temperance gentleman. Now, what did he do? He did not keep getting the country to vote on temperance, but he turned round the other way and rented the Lambeth swimming baths during the winter months and had concerts every evening, free of charge. One night he would get soldiers to come and play and sing, another the policemen, and so on; then the newsboys to come and play on their tin whistles. The audience was the judge who played the best, and the chosen performer got a prize. Saturday nights were called newspaper reading nights, for which a penny was charged, that is, two cents, and no higher. The place got so it could not hold the people who wished to attend. Now they have temperance theatres the old Victoria, and lots of others. Temperance sentiment is growing every year.

Yours,

W. B. C.

LIQUOR LAW FINANCE

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—I would like to say a few words through the columns of The Times on the on the liquor question.

Among the early records in Canada was an Act for the payment of salaries to the members of the Legislature of Upper Canada in 1794. This fund to be raised by means of a license to sell liquors. Every person keeping a house of entertainment, or selling liquors, was compelled to take out a license, and pay therefor the sum of £2 16s, and to have written or printed over the door of his house the words:—"Licensed to sell wine and other spirituous liquors." He should also enter into a bond to keep a decent and orderly house. A failure to comply with these conditions was punishable with a fine of 5s, "to be recovered before any justice of the peace," one half of the fine to be paid to the informer.

The liquor trade has always been levied upon more or less for the expenses of Government. For Dominion purposes it is taxed about $9,000,000 a year.

In 1901 the Ontario Government collected $386,872.53 in license fees, or $80,000 more than the total Provincial charge under the head of "Legislation" for that year, and the total gifts to "hospitals and charities" combined.

This is a heavy tax, no doubt, but it is one which the trade has appeared willing to pay.

The municipalities received a share of the license money, instead of the whole of it, as formerly, but the municipal share is not included in the $376,000 returned to the Ontario Government.

The expenses of prosecuting infractions of the license law are now paid by the municipalities.

Were the liquor act of 1902 to be adopted by the referendum, the task of enforcing it would fall by its terms to the Ontario Government, which would have no control over municipal police, and would have to organize a special and very extensive detective service at Government expense. As the revenue from licenses would then not be a tithe of what it is under the License Act, the expenses would fall heavily upon the people, having to be collected in some other way than by license fees.

The loss in reduced license revenue, and the cost of enforcement together would probably foot up three-quarters of a million dollars.

This sum could be deducted from the annual grants now given to Education and Hospital and Charities, which together make over $800,000. It is hard to see how else it could be made up, unless by direct taxation.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers, Fortune's Sport, Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc.

would be comparatively poor, yet he would want for nothing, and he would at least have defied the hangman.

In two minutes the car was ready to start, the stable doors flung open. By this time those whom he had left groping in the dark would have light again. The police would be in if the dead man's son had told the truth—but they were not here yet.

He ran limping from the opening doors back to the car and climbed on board. Then with a rush and throbbing of its machinery, the Daimler tore into the street.

Let them come now if they would. What did he care? Who could catch him now? What was there fast enough to follow even so far away as to guess at his destination?

Out in the street he put on the fastest speed, recking nothing of the law, for none could stop him.

With its two electric lamps like great white dragon-eyes blazing in the night, the Daimler tore through the streets at the rate of thirty miles an hour. People flung themselves wildly out of the way, shrieking for the police, shouting that here was a madman on a motor-car; cabmen lashed their snorting horses up side streets to avoid destruction or drove in desperation on to the pavement, the wheels of their vehicles here and there smashing a window, adding the keen, high treble of crashing glass to the uproar.

Policemen yelled to the hatless man bent forward over the steering gear, bidding him stop on pain of desperate penalties, but Macaire only laughed. Rain had begun to fall, and the wind and the water, spraying against his hot face, cooled his brain, giving him a sense of power and exhilaration. He felt like Juggernaut, and longed for victims for the wheels of his rushing car, which flew faster than the flying minutes, bearing him out of danger to a new life.

He did not think of all that he had left behind, all that he must sacrifice, for that way madness lay. Yet Winifred's sweet girlish face would rise before him. He would not have had this thing happen until he had crushed the butterfly under his heel and broken its wings so that it must lie for ever in the dust. And Hope Newcome, the son of the man he had done to death; he would fain have sent him after his father.

"To think that she should have been Harold Norman's wife, and I never guessed it! Fool—fool!" he railed madly against himself.

He had passed the suburbs now. London and London's lights would soon be left behind. He would do the trick. The Daimler and his "Diavola" would save him yet.

Suddenly it was as if a figure rose out of the earth before him, flitting in front of the car as it rushed on along a white ribbon of winding road. It was radiant with a strange, pale radiance, and out of a faint golden mist gleamed a face—the face of F. R. Z.

The CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY was organized to mine and manufacture iron and coal, coke and steel in Canada at Atlantic tidewater.

The raw materials for these manufactures are:—

1.—COAL. 2.—IRON. 3.—LIMESTONE.

All these materials we have at hand.

1.—COAL.

The Company controls 3,000 acres of excellent coal areas in the Province of Nova Scotia, and efforts are being made to increase this to 10,000 acres by the purchase of some very valuable additional coal fields.

The coal has been thoroughly tested and found to be suitable in every way for the manufacture of iron and steel, and the supply is practically inexhaustible. The following analysis was made by the Canadian Geological Survey:—

ANALYSIS.

Moisture	4.05
Vol. Comb. Matter	30.72
Fixed Carbon	60.
Ash	5.23
	100.00

COAL VEINS.

The several layers or seams of coal available aggregate 27 to 30 feet in thickness.

TITLES.

These areas are held under Crown Lease for a period of 80 years. Royalty 10 cents per ton of coal sold.

2.—IRON.

The Company has acquired by purchase immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 ton re above sea level, with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and the United States, where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities f. o. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

3.—FLUX.

We are now negotiating for valuable deposits of dolomite and limestone of the most satisfactory quality, situated on the tide-water, within 100 miles of the works.

MARKETS.

For six months in each year the Canadian markets can be reached by water at low freight rates, and at all times by rail. As Cape Breton is distant from Liverpool only about 2,300 miles; is nearer to Pernambuco, Brazil, than any point in the United States, and also nearer to Cape Town, South Africa, it has the advantage, in point of distance, for export business over any American steel-producing points, which, with scarcely any exceptions, are situated some distance from tide water. Under any conditions of the world's market, it is believed that the output of these works can be disposed of at satisfactory prices.

OUTPUT

When in full operation, the output is expected to be about as follows:—

1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total	$400,000 00
200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4.00 per ton, total	800,000 00
100,000 tons steel blooms, showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total	300,000 00
2. COAL.—600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, of $1.00 per ton, total	600,000 00
3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years	100 000 00
Total yearly revenue	$2,200,000 00

GOVERNMENT AIDS.

To encourage the manufacture in the Dominion of iron and steel the Parliament of Canada has granted bounties as follows:—

	ON PIG IRON.	ON STEEL.
Apl. 21st, 1902, to July 1st, 1903	$2.70	$2 70
July 1st, 1903, " " 1904	2.25	2.25
July 1st, 1904, " " 1905	1.65	1.65
July 1st, 1905, " " 1906	1.05	1.05
July 1st, 1906, " " 1907	.60	.60

If the production of steel from the Company's works be as estimated, 300,000 tons per annum, the bounties to be received from the Canadian Government will be as follows:—

1904	$225,000
1905	215,000
1906	145,000
1907	85,000
or an average of $100,000.00 per annum for 6½ years	$670,000.00

NET REVENUE

Total net annual profits		$2,200,000.00
LESS FIXED CHARGES:—
7 per cent. interest on preferred stock	$70,000.00
Sinking Fund	60,000.00
Incidentals	25,000.00
		155,000.00
Net yearly profits		$2,045,000.00

Equivalent to yearly dividends of over 30 per cent., or 15 per cent. half yearly on total capitalization.

If the capitalization was increased to ... $20,000,000.00 this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent. per annum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is ... $20,000,000.00 earning fully 12 per cent., and is paying 8 per cent. guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum.

The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. is ... $28,000,000.00 on which it is believed 6 per cent. dividends will be earned.

The capitalization of the Canadian Steel & Coal Company is only $6,000,000.00 controlling, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends.

Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron & Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value.

With such low capitalization the Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares should show tremendous profits, and it is confidently believed they will.

Invaders of the Sanctum.

A united states newspaper once announced that a notorious thief, well known locally, had been lynched for horse-stealing. The man called at the office, sound in wind and limb, and demanded a withdrawal of the unfounded statement. "We cannot retract," said the editor; "we never do." "But the 'Mail,' which published a similar report, has withdrawn it," said the man. "That may be," replied the editor. "The report appearing in the 'Mail' was no doubt without foundation; but our news is always true. However, we don't mind saying in the next issue that the rope broke, and that you escaped with a slight contusion."

If a story told in journalistic circles be well founded, a somewhat similar incident occurred in London. One day a gentleman called at the office of a well-known newspaper and said to the editor, a famous man in his time: "Sir, it is announced in your paper that I am dead." "Well," replied the editor, "if it is in our paper it is correct." "It is not correct, for here I am alive," rejoined the other. "Well, it can't be helped," said the editor. "But I expect you to contradict it," said the gentleman. "No, I cannot do that," said the editor, "as we never contradict anything that appears in our paper. I will do the only thing I can do to bring you to life again. To-morrow I will put you in the list of births."

Sometimes the editor gets the better of these unpleasant intruders into his sanctum. A friend of ours was seated in his editorial chair in a Yorkshire town, quietly snipping paragraphs from contemporary journals, when in walked, unannounced, a big, ferocious-looking man with a heavy stick in his hand. "Is the editor in?" he asked. The menacing tone in which the question was put showed that he had not come to make a friendly call, to insert an advertisement, or to pay a subscription to the journal. "No, sir," replied the editor, with admirable presence of mind—"he has just gone out. Take a seat and read the paper; he will return in a minute." Down sat the indignant visitor, crossing his legs, with his club between them, and commenced reading a paper. In the meantime the editor quietly vanished downstairs, and at the landing he met another excited man, with a cudgel in his hand, who also asked if the editor was in. "Yes, sir," was the prompt response, "you will find him seated upstairs, reading a newspaper." The second visitor, on entering the room, commenced a violent assault upon the first, which was resisted with equal ferocity. The fight was continued till they both rolled to the foot of the stairs and had cudgelled each other to their hearts' content.

New Round Dances.

Three new round dances have just been approved and adopted by the Normal Association of Masters of Dancing of the United States and Canada, which recently met in New York. They are the Military Dip Waltz, the Olympia Schottische, and the Antler's Gavotte. The Military Dip Waltz is said to be the simplest and most graceful of the three. It has been predicted that this dance will sweep the country, and may take the place of the two-step in the matter of popularity. The movements are thus described: Take a position facing your partner, as if for waltzing. The left foot of both lady and gentleman should be in the fourth position, front; that is, about the length of one step in front of the right foot. At the beginning of the strain the gentleman dips forward upon his left and the lady backward upon her right; then both reverse the movement. The gentleman next makes a quick change, stepping forward on the left and then on the right. The balance is repeated in this position, the two dip movements having occupied just four measures in all. From this point glide into the waltz, waltzing four measures; then repeat the balance movement again, and so on ad libitum. The dance is simple, easy, and fascinating. The Olympia Schottische is designed for the more agile and spirited dancers. It is begun in the open position assumed for any schottische, the gentleman holding the lady's left hand with his right, the two facing one another. The lady starts with the right foot, the gentleman with the left. Dip backward with a graceful bend of knee, then bring the rear foot forward and rise on the toes. Repeat the movement with the other foot; glide four times to the right, repeat both movements, face forward and hop on left foot, kicking right with toe touching the floor; then hop on right, kicking left. Next assume the closed position and take four glides, a half turn, finishing with four more glides in the same direction. The Antler's Gavotte is made up entirely of familiar steps. This is begun in the closed position. March two measures, two-step four, take three glides to the left, finishing on the right foot, and waltz to the close of the strain. This is a new combination of the two old favorites, two-step and waltz, with the march step for variety.

A Valuable Clue.

"Please, sergeant," exclaimed a lady, as she rushed into the police station, half out of breath. Then she hesitated.

"What is it, ma'am?"

"I don't like to tell you."

"Proceed. Have you been robbed, or ——?"

"Robbed, sir; cruelly robbed. Last night someone stole a lot of clothes from off my line."

"Just give me a list of the articles stolen."

"I couldn't do that, for they took two pairs of ——"

"What?"

"Oh, no; I really couldn't say; but, Mr. Policeman, if you see anybody wearing them, arrest them."

With this brief explanation she departed, and now she is telling all the neighbors that the police force of this country are too stupid to detect crime, even when they get a clue at first hand.

Verestchagin, the artist who is painting a large picture of the Battle of San Juan Hill, with President Roosevelt as the central figure, was very much depressed over New York's sky-line, when he visited the metropolis fifteen years ago. He said that the occasional skyscraper was a painful blot on the landscape; that it made the sky-line one terrible thing to behold. The other day, after long contemplation of it and the scores of big buildings which lead down the Island of Manhattan, he is said to have turned to a friend and remarked: "Really" (a pause), "it begins to be grand."

Interpreting Dreams.

"Can you interpret dreams?" asked Beatrice, eagerly.

I could not, but I saw no reason why I should make the confession.

"Certainly," I replied; "I never fail."

"Oh, I'm so glad," she returned. "Lately I've been dreaming such a lot, and—well, I'm sure there must be something in it."

"I haven't the least doubt about that," I said, thinking of those charming, if slightly indigestible suppers which we had been having.

"Perhaps if you could tell me some of the dreams," I suggested.

"Well, last night I narrowly escaped being burned to death in a fire in the house at which I was staying."

"No difficulty there," I said promptly. "It means marriage."

"Not—not death?" she asked, somewhat anxiously.

"Death? No. What put that into your head?"

"The night before I dreamed that I saw a coffin and ——"

"My dear Bea! You must allow me to congratulate you."

"Why?"

"It is quite evident that you are to be married soon. The coffin is—er—marriage again."

"A second marriage?"

"No—I mean it corroborates the fire."

She looked at me with some distrust.

"I hope you know what you are talking about. The coffin couldn't very well corroborate the fire, as it came first, and——"

"Ah, you don't understand dreams," I cut in, anxious to restore her faith in my powers. "In real life, of course, the corroboration couldn't come first, but it's quite different in dream life."

"Oh—oh!" She waited for a moment or two and then added: "I suppose dreams always mean something exactly opposite?"

She seemed anxious that I should answer the question in the affirmative, so, of course, I hastened to do so.

"That is the case. I never heard of a dream episode being enacted in real life."

She gave a sigh—of relief, I imagined.

"Three nights ago I dreamed that I was being married," she said. "What did that mean? That I am to be an old maid?"

"It meant——," I said, and then paused. It was my earnest wish that she should be married to me.

"I'm sure I have puzzled you now."

"Anything but," I returned. "I was only wondering whether—was the man fair or dark?"

"Dreams always go by contraries, you said," she remarked, studying my golden locks intently. "Yes; he was fair, very fair."

"Tall or short?"

She took in my six feet one.

"Tall."

"Stout or thin?"

"Medium."

"Very like——"

"Very like yourself," she interrupted. "But of course that doesn't matter, so far as I can see. All I want to know is, what does dreaming about marriage mean? You say that it can't mean marriage?"

"I didn't say anything of the sort, Bea. It—er—does mean marriage. The only question is as to the man you are going to marry. That's why I required a particular description of him."

"You certainly said that a dream must mean the opposite," she insisted.

"But surely you don't mean to hold me down to a foolish statement of that kind."

"A foolish statement! Why, Hugh, I thought—do you know anything about dreams at all?" she asked, suspiciously.

"To be candid, I do not, Bea. But ——"

"Well, I'm sorry that we have wasted so much time," she said. "I'm going now to see Aunt Sarah. I'm sure she knows all about dreams, and—and that coffin really troubles me."

"Don't go," I implored. "The fact is, Bea, I can help you—if you'll let me."

"I gave you the opportunity," she said.

"Oh, I know, but I can't—I mean—I ——"

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"I mean that I can interpret your coffin dream for——"

"But you admitted a moment ago that you couldn't," she said, looking at me tantalisingly.

"You might allow me to finish," I said. "The dream may mean marriage or not. But you can make it mean marriage if you like."

She looked mystified.

"Marry me," I said, "and then—and then the dream can't mean anything else."

"And if I don't?" she asked.

"If you don't I refuse to answer for the consequences. The dream might mean—something dreadful. In fact, I'm sure it would."

She gave a little shiver.

"Oh, anything rather than that. Hugh, I am yours."

I sealed the bargain with a kiss, but she did not respond to the caress. It was evident that she had something on her mind.

"What is it?" I asked presently.

"I suppose," she replied slowly, "that whether I had dreamed about a coffin or not you would have——"

"Have asked you to marry me?" I cut in eagerly. "Of course I should."

"And so—it doesn't really matter whether I dreamed or not."

"Bea! What do you mean?" I asked.

"I hate to have everyone wondering when we are going to become engaged," she remarked calmly, "so I hastened matters a little, and invented some dreams."

"But—how did you know that would —or——"

"When you said that you could interpret dreams, I knew," she replied. "A man nearly always makes out that marriage is the interpretation of"—she bowed mockingly—"a fairly good-looking young woman's dream. And when the would-be interpreter happens to be in love with the fairly good-looking ——"

"Bea," I interrupted, "you ran a great risk."

"Why?"

"Because you are not a fairly good-looking young woman," I replied, letting my eyes rest on her with open admiration. "And if it is only to women of that sort that men interpret ——"

"In all the great affairs of life one must run some risk," she remarked; and she looked so charming as she spoke that I was constrained to tell her that she had run no risk at all.—"The King."

Now is the Last Chance to Buy the St. Paul & Sunset Oil

COMPANY'S STOCK AT 35 CENTS

California Oil Stocks Have Paid Millions in Dividends

KERN COUNTY (SUNSET DISTRICT) OIL COMPANIES PAID

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS IN AUGUST ALONE

MORGAN IN THE OIL INDUSTRY--NEW YORK FINANCIER AT THE HEAD OF A $20,000,000 COMPANY TO EXPLOIT CALIFORNIA FIELDS

Bakersfield, Cal., Sept. 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan is about to identify himself with the oil business in California. On October 12, or a few days later, surveyors will be put into the field, and will run lines to the ocean from Sunset, Coaling, McKittrick, Midway and Kern River fields to determine by which route it is most feasible to transport oil to tide water. The surveys will run over the coast range at a number of points, and also will go down the San Joaquin valley parallel with the line of the Standard.

A company having a capitalization of $5,000,000 has been organized for the construction of lines, pumping stations, storage tanks, and the like. Mr. Morgan and his associates have also formed a separate company, capitalized at $20,000,000, half of which will be invested in proven ground and the other half turned into a reserve fund.

It is stated that the Morgan syndicate will be prepared to handle 2,000,000 barrels the first year, and will increase that amount at the rate of 1,000,000 a year until the whole demand of the market is met.

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY own and control a large tract of absolutely oil proven asphalt land in the very heart of the best oil producing land of Kern County, California, the district where flowing wells are situated. We have a bed of Liquid Asphalt underlying a portion of our lands. Our property is situated right at Sunset Station. A new line of railway is surveyed and will be constructed in a very short time, putting us not only in touch with Eastern cities, but in touch with tide-water. This, in addition to the railroad facilities we now have. Remember that we own our land—it is paid for and entirely free from debt.

ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL CO.'S GIGANTIC TRACT

will be developed and should prove a formidable rival for the new company.

PROFESSOR DR. RUD J. SCHIMPER, Analytical and Expert Chemist, of St. Paul, makes the following statement relative to the composition, what can be produced and the estimated profits of the Sunset Crude Oil. A copy of the original certificate can be seen at the office of the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co., which is in substance as follows:

"This is to certify that the undersigned, Dr. Rudolph J. Schimper, Chemist expert, member of Parisian Academy, according to analysis made from the crude oil furnished me by the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company, I find the following valuable products and with each beg to submit my estimate of its value:

1. LIQUID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 1,800 lbs. of liquid rubber, value of which is from 25c. per lb. and up. (Estimated value $450.00.)
2. SOLID RUBBER—2000 lbs of this crude oil (6 bbls) will produce 1,700 lbs. of solid rubber, value of which is from 50c. upwards. (Estimated value $450.00.)
3. FUEL BRIQUETTES—2000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce 2,000 lbs. (1 ton) of fuel briquettes, which, according to government tests made, is equivalent to two tons of best anthracite coal. (Estimated value $22.00)
4. ASPHALTUM—2,000 lbs. of this crude oil (6 bbls.) will produce ¼ ton of asphaltum, value $25 to $35 per ton. 25 gal. of lubricating oil, value 50c. per gal. and upward. 40 gal. illuminating oil, value 10c per gal. and up. 60 gal. of distilled oil, value 5c. per gal. and upward. (Estimated value $64.50.)
5. SOAP—2000 lbs. (1 ton) of crude oil and filling will produce over 2,000 lbs. of soap, value 3c. per lb. and upward. (Estimated value $60.00.)

In my opinion many other valuable products can be obtained from the oil of that famous field.

Respectfully,

DR. R. J. SCHIMPER, Chemist Expert."

THIS goes to show the immense profits that will accrue from our products when refined. We expect to commence Building Our Refinery in the very near future. The sale of the next allotment of stock will be made for that purpose. The largest flowing wells in California were brought in adjoining our property and their stock was taken off the market. We employ the best drillers who report rapid progress on our wells and we expect to bring in gushers equal, if not to excel any in the Sunset field. Our General Manager, Superintendent and Drillers, all are experienced oil men. The officers of our company are all thorough, competent and efficient men who have always made a success of their undertaking in life and who will see that the welfare of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company is furthered, portected and promoted to the most advantageous extent possible.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS SHOULD BE PAID STOCKHOLDERS.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS should be paid to the stockholders of the St. Paul and Sunset Oil Company when their property is fully developed, their refinery equipped and in full operation. ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS was paid by Kern County Oil Companies during the month of August alone.

SIX MILLION BARRELS is the consuming capacity of the Southern Pacific Railway engines, which are now equipped for burning oil. Outside of this consider other railway lines, smelters, factories, steamships, stationery engines, which are all heavy consumers of fuel oil and last but not least, hotels and private dwellings are falling in line with the procession in the use of fuel oil.

A GOOD REASON WHY YOU Should Invest in the stock of St. Paul & Sunset Oil Company. More fortunes have been made in oil than any other business. Consider the immense amount of money the Standard Oil Company has made for its fortunate stockholders, and the California oil companies have done better in proportion to their capitalization than the Standard Oil Company. Here is what $100 has accomplished for those who invested that amount in the following California companies in the beginning of their career:

Home Whittier $1,000 on an investment of $100.
Kern returned $2,200 on an investment of $100.
Peerless returned $1,800 on an investment of $100.
Dillon returned $2,500 on an investment of $100.
New York returned $30,000 on an investment of $100.
Union returned $150,000 on an investment of $100.
Home returned $50,000 on an investment of $100.

THERE is no reason in the world why the St. Paul and Sunset Company's oil holdings and property, when developed and handled, should not bring like returns.

CONTRARY to the general supposition the earth is the repository of all mineral wealth. When it is known and demonstrated beyond a question of a doubt where its wealth reposes and you put your money up to take it out, your money is invested. Hence you are an investor, not a speculator. A proven oil producing property does not draw its profits from the people but creates new wealth. It is therefore an investment.

Wonderful Increase in Value of Oil Stocks.

The rapid rise in the value of shares in some oil companies will be seen from the following table:

	Original price per share	Present Market price
Black Mountain Oil Co.	$ .05	$ 1.50
Central Oil Co.	.30	1.90

The time will come in the near future when stock in St. Paul and Sunset Oil Co., should bring prices equal to the last.

WE CLAIM NOTHING WE CANNOT PROVE TO BE TRUE

BRIEFLY, OUR PROPOSITION IS THIS: THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY

owns its immense tract of proven Oil Land—without a penny of incumbrance. The property is located in the most wonderful and richest oil producing section in the world, in the famous Sunset District of Kern County, California. Other Oil Companies in Kern county have paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in dividends—and today their stock cannot be bought at any price. These companies in many instances have less property, and in some cases are only lessors, not owning refinery, tanks, lines, etc.

A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THIS STOCK WILL BE SOLD AT 35c. PER SHARE, PAR VALUE $1.00.

BUY NOW. THIS STOCK WILL BE ADVANCED TO 50c WITHIN THE NEXT 30 DAYS

THE ST. PAUL & SUNSET OIL COMPANY will erect their own refinery, etc. are now owners of the property they are developing, employ the best drillers in the whole State of California. The manager is an old and experienced oil man who has been connected with large California companies. The officers are all successful and reliable business men, who are investors—the same as every other stockholder. And the company, with plenty of ready capital, proposes to make the St. Paul & Sunset Oil Co. a leader in the field and to develop their property to the fullest extent that money and brains will permit.

The first orders received will be the first ones to be filled. In case we are unable to fill your orders at 35c. your money will be refunded. Send Orders and Remittances to

GEM

CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY

Sparta District, Eastern Oregon

It may be equalled but never surpassed—and, frankly, we doubt, all things considered, if it has an equal. And here is

WHY:

1—A producing mine.
2—Over 200 acres, rich mineral land.
3—Title perfect.
4—No debts.
5—No high salaries paid.
6—Equipped with up-to-date mill and machinery.
7—Between 3000 and 9000 feet of underground workings.
8—Management is in the hands of experienced miners.
9—No treasury stock has ever been sold and perhaps never will be.
10—Two hundred and fifty thousand shares in the treasury.
11—Capital only $1,000,000.
12—Par value of shares—one dollar; fully paid and non-assessable.
13—Experts and intending investors permitted to examine the mine.
14—Daily mail. Complete telephone facilities.
15—All conditions favorable for cheap mining and reduction of ores.
16—Ore averages more than ten dollars gold per ton.
17—Total expenses mining and treatment per ton not over four dollars.

The stock we are selling is private holdings upon which we have secured a limited option. To make it go quickly we are only asking FIFTY CENTS A SHARE, and will sell as small a quantity as TWO HUNDRED SHARES—of course, as much more as you wish to buy as long as we have any for sale.

Recollect this property is producing a profit to-day of not less than $60,000 annually. By "profit" we mean over and above all expenses.

References back of the mine and its managers are the best in the State of Oregon where the property is located.

We personally examined this property thoroughly, and believe it to be one of the coming heavy producers of the Eastern Oregon Gold Fields.

Send for prospectus and learn how a well equipped producing mine looks.

G. T. R. INCORPORATION

Successive Changes and Extensions—Present Total Mileage 3,159 of Which 450 is Double Tracked—Total Cost [illegible]

The Grand Trunk Railway Company passed the Canadian legislature in 1851, empowering the company to build a railway between Toronto and Montreal, a distance of 333 miles, the capital of the company to be three million pounds. But it was not until the amalgamation act of 1854 that the company really took the name of "Grand Trunk," the several chartered projects thus united in common enterprise being the construction of railways from Montreal to Portland, Me., from Quebec to Richmond, from Toronto to Sarnia and from Quebec to Trois Pistoles. These sections were built between 1853 and 1859 and the original system completed Dec. 19th, 1859, when the Victoria Bridge was opened for traffic. The line from Detroit to Port Huron was leased in 1859; the Champlain lines in 1863; the Buffalo and Huron road in 1867. In 1869 the International Bridge at Niagara was leased.

In 1879 the Dominion Government purchased from the Grand Trunk the line from Levis to Riviere du Loup, 124 miles, for $1,500,000, and with this money the Grand Trunk purchased two railways in Michigan, and formed the Chicago and Grand Trunk system. In 1881 the Georgian Bay and Lake Erie system of 171 miles was incorporated into the Grand Trunk. In 1882 amalgamation with the Great Western railway, including 904 miles, took place. In 1883 the Welland line was leased, the Champlain lines extended and the Midland system of 473 miles absorbed. The Northern railway was leased in January 1888. In 1899 the Victoria Bridge was rebuilt at a cost of $1,810,355, the Dominion Government contributing $300,000 by way of subsidy.

The total length of the Grand Trunk system is 3,151 miles of which 450 is double tracked. In 1867 the Grand Trunk carried 2,850,143 passengers and 2,011,700 tons of freight. In 1896 5,077,071 passengers and 7,867,148 tons of freight were carried.

AN INVESTMENT IN THE

Pitkin Gold Belt Mining and Reduction Company

Which is Safe and Sure of Quick Returns, may Bring an Enormous Return at any Moment. It has the Possibilities of Rivaling the Great Mines of the Past.

This Company has a mine on a true fissure vein, in the center of the Gunniston Gold Belt, Colorado, which is the "Mother" lode or dike, which has produced 55 per cent. more gold than the total output of the Cripple Creek district.

This Mine is no Prospect. Nor is it Waiting on Your Subscription to Buy Machinery or for Development.

After a careful examination by experts, Joseph M. Bradley, M. E., and Mr. George Arlett, A. I. M. E., Amalgamated Copper Company's expert in Chihuahua, Mexico, they advised the purchase of the property. The property had shallow development upon it, showing two ore shoots from which smelting ore had been shipped to the Buena Vista Smelter.

The Company purchased and paid for the latest improved machinery and has put a shaft down 250 feet and intend to carry it down 1000 feet. On the 150 foot level 200 feet of development has been made and an ore shoot has been encountered and blocked out for 97 feet, carrying values in gold from 2 to 9 ounces or $40 to $180 per ton. The cost of mining, hauling, freight and smelters charges will be between $12 and $15 per ton.

Ed. McCarthy & Co., bankers, guarantee a shipping mine of smelting ore running from 2 to 6 ounces in gold, or $40 to $120 per ton, by January 1st, 1903, or all funds will be returned to subscribers upon presentation of receipt issued by said bank.

Also to prospective purchasers of $100 worth of stock we are offering a free trip to Colorado and return. You investigate first and purchase afterward. Could you expect anything fairer than this?

The capital stock of this company is $1,000,000, divided into 1,000,000 shares of stock at $1 each, full paid and non-assessable. A portion of the treasury stock is now offered at

25 CENTS PER SHARE—PAR VALUE $1.00

in one payment, or 20 per cent. down and the balance in four equal monthly payments, for necessary expenditures and improvements on a shipping mine.

Write for further particulars and prospectus. Remit by postal, express money order, draft or check to Ed McCarthy & Co., Trustees, Galveston, Tex., or

WELSH COLONY DOING WELL

Body Blow to the Cobden Club—Canadian Trade Should Benefit

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—The Department of the Interior states that the reports as to destitution in the Welsh Patagonian colony, near Saltcoats, are very much exaggerated and practically unreliable. The latest information in the department is that these people have done very well, considering their financial condition on arrival in this country last spring, and have been able to earn a considerable amount in good wages this year. A departmental officer is, however, being sent to the colony to make a very close examination into the circumstances of the people.

London, Nov. 29.—Some dismay was felt in Cobden Club circles on the morning after their long-planned demonstration against Chamberlainism and Imperial protection at the disclosures in the Daily Mail, showing that the club is chiefly alien in membership. More than half the members are foreigners, living in France, Germany, Austria, the United States and Spain. Many others are foreigners living in England. What right, asks the Mail, have they to speak for England?

POISON WORKED AS HE SANG

Tragic Story Told by Mother of Dr. N. G. Ross

Detroit, Nov. 29.—The sad story of the suicide by strychnine of Dr. Norman Garibaldi Ross, son of the late Dr. A. M. Ross, of Toronto, was related to a reporter by the mother of the unfortunate young man.

"He was a brilliant young man," if I do say it myself," said Mrs. Ross. "I was always proud of him because of his intellectual attainments. Though only 27 years of age, he is said to have been a Gladstone in literary ability. But years ago my boy became addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors, and this really led to his untimely death. We have been living alone here for about six years, ever since we came from Toronto, where we lived before my husband died.

"My son liked jolly company, and he would often stay out very late at night. Wednesday night he went away and did not return. We had arranged to have a Thanksgiving dinner yesterday, just for ourselves, and I had prepared for it. But he didn't come. At 8.30 o'clock last night he walked in quietly, and almost the first words he said to me were 'Mother I wish I were dead.'

"I told him then that if he intended to dissipate like that it might be better if he were dead. He had often spoken to me about committing suicide, and had several times scared me.

"Last night I left him alone in the parlor and went upstairs. In a few minutes I heard him go down into the basement, and I could hear the water running from the tap. I was nervous, but, a few minutes later, I was glad to hear him playing on the piano. He was an accomplished pianist, and sang several songs, including 'The Shade of the Sheltering Palms,' from the Florodora Opera.

"As the last words of the song died away, I heard a moan, and my son's voice saying, 'It's beginning to work now.' Several minutes elapsed, and then his moans were frightful to hear. found him lying on the floor. He had taken a cushion from the lounge, and placed it on the floor for his head to rest on.

"'Mother,' he cried, as I went into the room, 'I am dying; hurry and get the doctor!'

"I told him to get up and go to bed but he got worse, and I hurried out for Dr. J. J. Mulheron. When I got back from the doctor he was lying quite still. I guess he was dead then. He never regained consciousness, anyway. That is exactly how my boy died."

The remains will probably be cremated, according to the expressed wish of the suicide, and the ashes taken to Toronto for interment.

LUMBERING OPERATIONS

Times are Brisk in the Lumber Camps This Season

The Bobcaygeon Independent says: The lumber operations are now in full activity and throughout the great district north of this village there is a strong demand for men to work in the woods, and very high wages are paid. Only a few years ago the wages paid to a shantyman ranged from $18 to $24 a month, and there were crowds anxiously waiting to be hired, but to-day men are scarce, and hard to obtain and are paid from $28 to $40 a month. Only a few Frenchmen from the Province of Quebec are now employed in this district whilst formerly they formed a majority of the men engaged in the shanties. Those employed in the shanties which are now called "camps" are much better fed than they used to be, and are supplied with sugar, stews, pies, puddings and cakes, whilst formerly their only food was merely bread and salt pork. Thus we see that not only are the wages much higher, but the cost of feeding greatly increased. All the other expenses connected with lumber operation have also increased, and this season the cost of production will be still further advanced. As the area of lumber production diminishes and is pushed further back it is impossible to foresee what will be the price of sawed lumber a few years hence. It is noticeable that all lumber camps are now subjected to medical regulations, and are in consequence much healthier than was once the case. It is probable that within fifty miles north of this village there are twenty lumber camps or shanties containing fifty men each. The supply of men is inadequate to the demand, and more men are needed at once. If the demand for timber and lumber continues to increase as it has done of late, in twenty years all the trees for a hundred miles north of this village will have been cut and manufactured.

STOCK MARKETS

The Other Two Tractions

New York, December 1—The doings in Manhattan stock draws scrutinizing attention to the shares of the other two great surface roads of New York and Brooklyn, namely—The Metropolitan and the B. R. T. The former is a seven per cent. guaranteed stock selling entirely too low at the present time. The latter has for some time past as well as on Saturday last, shown the strongest kind of indications of steady accumulation, which would portend something doing. In both instances it is quite logical and plain that their shares would be excellent purchases at the moment. The readers of these letters have known that we have always maintained that the underground company would operate Manhattan, we also maintain that they will be equally interested in the surface roads of Manhattan Island also B. R. T.. The tunnels under the East river will afford the connection. B. R. T. will have the right of way there, and the general combine through the controlling company will be master of the transportation facilities of greater New York. Common sense indicates that one great company can operate all this vast mileage infinitely cheaper than various independent organizations. Shareholders will be benefitted in the vast saving through decreased cost and the great stimulation of travel through increased transfers, and improved facilities. Electrical power to operate all furnished from one great source can be much more cheaply furnished than by each system providing its own power and plants. Metropolitan is absurdly cheap at present. In 1899 it sold above 250 and is worth far more today that it was then. B. R. T.'s outlook at present is far superior to what it was when it sold considerably above par. We believe no one can make any mistake in purchasing these two issues at present. The general market conditions are also greatly improved. In fact they are better at the present time than they have been any time since the beginning of September. We confidently expect an important and extended advance in both Metropolitan and B. R. T., consequently we earnestly urge their purchase immediately.

Summary—Today's market indicates better prices. Metropolitan and B. R. T. were favorites brought to the front and advanced sharply. They at present look like higher prices immediately, consequently they are good to purchase, especially on reactions. Louis & Nash., Rhode Island and Mo. Pacific were in good demand, while some realizing sales were apparent in Manhattan shares. The coalers were very strong, Reading selling up to 68 while Philadelphia advanced under investment purchases. Balt & Ohio and Norfolk closely followed. The Gould shares were all in good demand. Buying of A.C.P. was extremely good. We like its market appearance and recommend its purchase. A. B. rallied sharply upon a better understanding of its position on the silver market, which commodity has been very weak recently, making a new low record price. We favor the bull side. To-morrow's letter will deal with Continued Stock Accumulation. Money closed 5 per cent. Sales 660,-100.

NEW OIL FIELDS OF ONTARIO

Our Mr Fox has just returned from a trip of personal investigation to the NEW WONDERFUL OIL GUSHER field in the Township of Raleigh, in the County of Kent. He reports that the whole country is literally with excitement. Chatham—respectable, easy going old Chatham—stands amazed, while oil operators from Pennsylvania, Ohio, Texas, California and from the big refineries at Petrolia and Sarnia fill her streets and hotels to overflowing—all making OIL! OIL! OIL!—offering figures for land that would have been considered sheer madness a few weeks ago. The roads to the oil fields are lined with all kinds of carriages, wagons and loads of machinery and derricks. Several drilling rigs are already partly erected and contracts have been made for the sinking of at least FIFTY WELLS within the next thirty days.

ON FIRE

LANDS HAVE QUADRUPLED IN PRICE WITHIN THE LAST TWO WEEKS outside of the Gurd & Co. syndicate.

The Ontario and California Oil Co., Limited,

were first on the ground, and have the largest holdings, amounting to about ONE THOUSAND ACRES, RIGHT IN THE BIG GUSHER FIELD IN RALEIGH, while at the scene of operations our Mr Fox closed negotiations with the representatives of two of the largest oil refineries in Canada to sink a number of wells IMMEDIATELY, and at least FIVE WELLS must be completed within sixty days.

At NORTHWOOD—about ten miles from Chatham—our eighteenth well is down about three hundred feet. Here the company is operating about SIXTEEN HUNDRED acres of great promise - every well sunk so far has been a paying oil producer. Watch this field also very closely. But advertising space is limited—send for Ontario & California Oil Co's November report, etc., and see for yourself.

The volume of enquiries to this office show that our people are becoming alive to the great possibilities lying right at our doors.

A Large Increase

The revenue at the local customs office for November exceeded that of November a year ago, by a very large sum, being $16,140.83 and $8,236.00 respectively. The collections for the three months ended November 30th, 1902, were $51,827.-00, as against $32,272.36, for the corresponding three months of 1901, an increase over last year of $[illegible], or over 60 per cent.

The local members of the Coronation Contingent have received their medals, as follows: Regimental Sergt.-Major Goldy, Sergt. Trumpeter Goldy, Sergt. Heaton, Squadron Sergt.-Major Cleghorn and Sergt. Duffus. The medals are of bronze guilt, and has a neat little red, white and blue ribbon attached to it. The inscription, "June 26th, 1902," is on one side of the medal, while the picture of the King and Queen is on the other side.

News for Farmers

Many farmers in this district are growing peas for American and French companies. Some years ago this was the principal products of some sections, but had to be discontinued, owing to the destruction caused by the pea weevil. This same insect is causing considerable trouble and the farmers will be glad to learn that energetic measures will be taken by the Department of Agriculture to stamp out the destroyer, and the best means will be communicated to the various Farmers' Institutes before spring opens.

Death of Harry Walters

Ex-Mayor Harry Walters, of Lindsay, died in the Hospital at Winnipeg on Friday of last week. The deceased was well known in Peterborough. He was in the employ of the Canadian Northern Railway, in charge of a construction gang, with headquarters at Fort Frances. About a week ago he was taken ill and went to the hospital at Winnipeg for treatment, his trouble being diagnosed as an attack of dropsy. A few days ago a letter was received from the head nurse, stating that he was progressing nicely, consequently the sad news received today came as a very great shock to the relatives. His death will be much regretted by many in Peterborough.

The Guelph Winter Fair

For the above, the Grand Trunk will issue round trip tickets at single first class fare from points in Canada west of Kingston. Good going Dec. 7th to 12th, inclusive, and valid returning until Dec. 15th. The Fair promises to be a great success this year, with new buildings and increased exhibits. $7,000 will be offered as prizes for cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. Further particulars, time tables, etc., on application to Agents of the Grand Trunk Railway.

CHEQUE FAKIR CAUGHT

AND IS NOW BEHIND THE BARS IN KINGSTON

Swindler of Ontario Merchants Caught at Work in the Limestone City

Kingston, Ont., Nov., 30.—Saturday evening the man who has been passing forged cheques on the merchants in a number of towns and cities in Ontario and securing money in exchange was secured, and is now under lock and key at police headquarters. It was about 6.30 o'clock when he entered the store of Daniel Couper, grocer. He to his home in Lakefield, and died there a cheque on the Rathbun Company, per Chadwick, issued to Joseph Graham. He had endorsed it. Mr. Couper, knowing about the work of the forger, was suspicious, and said he could not cash it, but would go out and try and get the change. He telephoned the Rathbuns and was advised that no such cheque had been issued, and asked that the man be detained. The police were advised, and Sergeant Snodden took the man in charge. At police headquarters her was registered as Charles H. Carter. He had over 20 cheques on him, made payable to Graham, and signed by the Rathbun Co., Manager Chadwick being represented as the issuer.

Carter, who is about 22 years of age, admitted his guilt, and said he had been passing the forged cheques in many places in Ontario. He told the police that his home was in Toronto, that he frequently cleared up $100 in a town he worked. Ordinarily he is a fine looking man, well dressed, and quite business-like in appearance, but when at his work, he dressed as a working man, in overalls, peaked cap, black shirt, and shabby overcoat. He had $2.15 on his person.

Carter, who registered at the British-American Hotel as Charles Lee, had all the apparatus on hand to aid him in his business. The rubber stamps in making up a name were all secured, as well as dyes for fixing his complexion. He said that in Belleville and Peterborough he walked the railway station platforms while the police searched for him. His disguise was so good that he deceived the constables. He had Standard Bank cheques made out, and a big bunch of blank Bank of Montreal cheques. In other places he had gone under the name of Evans. He will be held here for trial.

Carter declined to give his address, in Toronto, as he did not want his friends to know about his incarceration, and it is thought the name he gave is a fictious one. His mother and sister reside, he said, in the United States. He is quite cheerful, saying that he is ready for punishment. He had enjoyed the fun resulting from the way he made the money, and having been caught, there was no need for crying. He said he frequented the Toronto theatres, and had good company, but the expense of suppers and kindred pleasures quickly used up the money he made by his dishonesty.

Telephone Company's Assessment

As a result of the newest change in the Ontario assessment law the valuation of the Bell Telephone Company's property in Toronto has been increased by $400,000. Consequently the city will collect $8,000 more in taxes on them it has previously received. The change is the result of about five years of efforts before and by the Ontario Legislature to draft a clause that would say what the movers desired. It means not only money to the municipalities, but that somebody in or about the Legislature has mastered the English language.

Death of a Promising Young Lady

We very much regret to record the death of Miss Georgina Lasure, daughter of Mr. Arthur Lasure, which sad event occurred at the family residence, 34 Parnell street, on Sunday evening, at 8 o'clock. The deceased was only 14 years of age, and her death is sincerely regretted by many. Of a loving disposition, her death at so early an age, is particularly sad. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the community in their irreparable loss. The funeral will take place this morning at 9 o'clock to St. Peter's cathedral, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

A Night with Dickens

The "Evening with Dickens," presented in the opera house last night by Mr. H. S. Williamson, was a very enjoyable affair, and proved a rare intellectual treat. The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Peter's cathedral, under whose auspices the lecture was held, are to be congratulated on the success of their efforts. The hall was well filled, by an appreciative audience. During a brief intermission in the course of the evening an instrumental duet was rendered by the Misses Hurley, and recitations by Miss Carrie White. The choir of St. Peter's concluded the evening's entertainment by the singing of the National Anthem.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

—The Hon. J. R. Stratton spent Sunday in town.

—Mr. F. M. Vanderwater, of the Thos. Barrie Co., is in Toronto to-day.

—Mr. D. J. Devine, District Manager of the National Life Insurance Company, is in Toronto on business to-day.

NEED TEETH

Serious Failure of Body Comes from Lack of a Good Grinding Mill

A few years ago Mother had her teeth all taken out, hoping in that way to relieve her suffering, but failed, and it left her gums so sensitive that the wearing of false teeth or the proper mastication of food were equaly impossible, so that in the spring of 1901 she failed rapidly, mind and body both giving way and for many weeks life and reason were despaired of.

At one call of her physician he said she absolutely must take more nourishment, something easily digested, "try Grape-Nuts." I immediately obtained a package, prepared with some good, rich cream, and fed her from a teaspoon. She began to take it regularly and liked the food so well she would ask between times if we had any ready for her. She began to improve at once.

It is now three months since she began eating the food. She has fully recovered her health, looks better and is fleshier and stronger mentally and physically, than for many months previous.

Grape-Nuts furnished the nourishment for her that it seemed impossible to get from any other kind of food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek., Mich.

COBOURG BOY DROWNED

Andrew Dickson Drowned in the Yukon River Last Week

Cobourg, Ont., Dec. 1—A telegram was received this week by Mrs. James Dickson conveying the sad news that her son Andrew was drowned in the Yukon river on Saturday last. The young man was 27 years of age, and left Cobourg about ten years ago. A younger brother has been with him, and both expected to have been home to spend Christmas with their mother. The news was quite a shock to the mother and relatives, for whom the greatest sympathy is expressed.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

The Regular Monthly Meeting Held Yesterday Morning

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Ministerial Association was held in the Y.M.C.A. yesterday morning. In the absence of Rev. J. P. Wilson, the chairman, Rev. J. Bastow presided. The feature of the meeting was the paper which was read by Rev. Dr. Torrance, a resume of "Ecce Homo."

A special meeting of the Association will be held on December 15th to make arrangements for the week of prayer.

TO PUBLISH THE ROLL

The Typographical Union Want Assessment Roll Published

At the regular meeting of Peterborough Typographical Union, No. 248, the following resolution was adopted:—"That the Secretary of Peterborough Typographical Union, No 248, be instructed to send a letter of commendation to Alderman McGregor for his timely efforts in a recent Town Council meeting to have the assessment roll of the town published, as that union is strongly of the opinion that there are grave irregularities existing in over and under valuating properties. We believe the rolls should be published so that we may be able to learn what our neighbor's assessments may be. It is but justice to every citizen. Also that a copy of this resolution be sent to the daily papers for publication."

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—The Board of Education will meet this evening.

—In Belleville a license of ten dollars is charged for selling cigars in that city.

—This is the time of the year when aldermen are aldermen for election purposes only.

—The annual dance of the Peterborough Rugby Club takes place this evening.

—The Christmas number of the Canadian Magazine contains a portrait of Miss Alma Frances McCollum, who is described as a promising Canadian poet.

—Bobcaygeon Independent: Mr. David Comroy, jr., of Peterborough, has been around the last few days buying horses and large steers. He has picked up quite a number.

—Mr. Charles Gilchrist, Fishery Inspector, Cobourg, gathered seven thousand five hundred pounds of rice at Rice Lake this season, which he has disposed of at 9 cents a pound.

—It is a mistake some newspapers and a great many people make in calling county councillors—commissioners. If one of the council is appointed to look after a bridge he becomes a commissioner; otherwise he is a councillor.

—The Times has had several complaints regarding the condition of Water street, above London. It certainly needs looking after, or there will be a heavy bill of damages some of these days for the corporation to pay.

—Mr. Ed. Brown's spirited nag got a trifle gay on Saturday. While the driver was delivering goods to a house on Charlotte street, the horse took a notion to have a little spurt. After running a short distance, it got mixed up with the harness, and was captured.

—We are pleased to learn that the health officers of Port Hope have succeeded in cleaning that town of the several cases of diphtheria, and now has been granted a clean bill of health. At one time it was feared that an epidemic would break out, but prompt action of the Board happily prevented it.

—On Tuesday last the grocer's section of the Retail Merchants' Association, of Toronto, passed a resolution asking the Minister of Inland Revenue to have a standard fixed for vinegar. Much bad stuff is sold now-a-days as vinegar, and it is in the hope of stopping this abuse that the standard is proposed.

—Port Hope is attracting an enamel ware industry to locate in that town through 65 of its citizens signing a guarantee bond for $10,000. The Council will borrow the money on the bond. One hundred men will be employed the first year, and two hundred the second, at wages ranging from $2.50 to $5 per day. These were the people who tried to deal with Peterborough.

THE OLD SAW MILL

The Dickson Company Saw Mill now Being Dismantled

Another old landmark is being removed from the bank of the river. The Dickson Company's sawmill at the foot of London street is to be taken down to make room for the Cereal Company's dam. Men began yesterday morning to remove the machinery, which will be stored until such time as a new building is erected to receive it. The present stage of operations upon the new dam is such as to demand the immediate utilization of the site occupied by the sawmill. The Dickson Company will probably locate on a site to the east of the canal on Little Lake. The company owns the two hundred acres known as Beaver Mead Farm, which will make very fine piling grounds and admit also of easy railway communication. A large building on the farm has been used by the company for some time past as a stable.

Health is a magnet which irresistibly draws the man to the woman in life's mating time. Health does more than tint the skin with beauty; it puts music into the voice and buoyancy into the step, as well as happiness into the heart. A great many women covet beauty and are constantly seeking aids to beautify them. Let a woman first seek perfect health and all other charms shall be added to her.

There can be no general health for women while there is disease of the delicate womanly organism. The first step to perfect health is to cure womanly diseases by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"I used four bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. Elmer D. Shearer, of Mount-hope, Lancaster Co., Pa. "and can say that I am cured of that dreaded disease, uterine trouble. Am in better health than ever before. Every-one who knows me is surprised to see me look so well. In June I was so poor in health that at times I could not walk. To-day I am cured. I tell everybody that Dr. Pierce's medicines cured me."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

RULES FOR LUMBER CAMPS

Regulations to Govern Employees of Labour and Employers

The Times is requested to publish the following regulations to govern employers of labor in unorganized districts of Ontario, with a view to preventing a recurrence of the smallpox outbreak of last season. They are as follows:

Shantymen, miners and other employees of lumbering camps, mining camps, saw mills, smelting works and other industries or any railway construction camp, are hereby notified and cautioned by the Provincial Board of Health under the Act respecting sanitary regulations in unorganized territories. It is required:

1. That all owners, managers, agents, or foremen, or other persons in charge employ only vaccinated persons; that all employees are equally required to comply with the regulations.

2. That all employers of labour shall contract with a medical practitioner for their employees and works, and are authorized to deduct from the pay due to any employee a sum not less that 50 cents and not exceeding $1 per month.

3. That a hospital for the care of the sick must be provided by every employer, and that the men are entitled not only or regular treatment therein, but also to have the camps and surroundings inspected regularly and maintained in good sanitary condition.

The failure on the part of any person to comply with any regulation of the Provincial Board of Health, renders him liable to the penalties provided in hte Act.

THE COMPENSATION QUESTION ARISES IF PROHIBITION SHOULD CARRY

The Financial Aspect of Prohibition as it Really Exists

PREMIER ROSS IN FAVOR OF FULL PAYMENT

What It Will Mean to the State—Other Precedents Established For Compensation

Now that the possibility exists of carrying a measure of prohibition now before the people, it might be well to see what effect it will have, financially, upon the country. That Premier Ross contemplates compensating the brewers, distillers, hotelkeepers and all others engaged in the manufacture of ardent spirits, there is not the slightest doubt. When he introduced the Liquor Bill, Mr. Ross observed:

"Then there is the larger question of compensation. It has been said that any legislation dealing with the prohibition of the liquor traffic would not be just without compensation to those whose business it affected. The bill does not deal with this phase of the question, as it would be needless to provide the machinery for such purposes until the bill has passed. Some of England's greatest statesmen, Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Chamberlain, expressed their approval of the principle of compensation. My own view, as expressed on several occasions, and many years ago, is, if we could be entirely relieved for all time of the evil effects of the liquor traffic, the purchase of the vested interests of those concerned would not be too big a price to pay * * * * * I do not know as to some departments of the trade the compensation would involve considerable expenditure. That is a question we cannot ascertain or even guess at intelligently. The money invested in the trade is put at some seventy odd millions of dollars. How much of that ought to be recouped to those in the trade no one can tell at this distant point; the whole question is one that would have to be relegated to a commission, as a case is sometimes referred to the Master in Chambers, and threshed out."

LOSS IN CAPITAL.

To give one an idea of the vast amount of capital invested in industries affected by the passage of prohibitory liquor laws one has but to be reminded that there is invested in the distilleries and breweries of the Dominion 16 1/2 millions; in the real estate of the retailers, 58 millions; making 74 1-2 millions of money directly invested in the business. There was paid by the distillers and brewers to the farmers annually $2,282,000, and to the transportation companies, $460,000; wages, $1,200,000; other outgoings, $1,812,000. The retailers pay $10,500,000 in wages. There is an outgoing by the trade of nearly 15 1-2 millions annually. There is today in bond in the Dominion 14 million gallons of spirits, which, with the duty upon it represented $6 1-2 millions of dollars alone.

INTERESTS LARGELY IN ONTARIO.

Fifty per cent. of brewing interest of the Dominion are in Ontario, and only one distillery is situated outside of the province, so that the figures of the Dominion apply with equal force to the province.

The Board of Trade of Toronto, on February 10th, 1902, passed a resolution, which in part said:

"Further resolved, that this meeting petition the Government of the Province of Ontario that if it should decide to introduce a prohibition bill, such bill should contain provision for the just payment by the Government for that percentage of value of property which would be confiscated if such bill should provide for speedy application of the Act."

THE OTHER SIDE.

The temperance party, who are opposed to compensation claim that there are really no vested rights involved; that those who are engaged in the liquor traffic took all the risks in connectoin with a business that was as uncertain as it is impure, and that to "buy out" the liquor man would be nothing short of a crime.

ROYAL COMMISSION.

Equally as straightforward is the opinion expressed by the report of the Royal Commission on the Liquor Traffic:—

The question of making compensation to those engaged in the manufacture and those engaged in wholesale and retail vending of liquors, one or both classes, should the traffic be put an end to by legislation, has been frequently referred to and much evidence has been taken on the subject. The undersigned commissioners regarding the evidence given, and what has been proposed in other countries, as for instance, England, France, Germany and some of the British colonies, consider that the payment of compensation could not justly be avoided in the case of those who by such legislation, would have their business, which they have been carrying on under the sanction of the state, abruptly put an end to, and their capital in many cases almost swept away, and in many cases almost swept away, and in all considerably diminished."

From the report of this commission it is shown that the following capital is invested in the liquor business:—

	Capital.	Employees.	Wages.
Breweries ...	$ 8,211,453	1,724	$ 774,441
Distilleries ...	7,054,000	451	264,842
Malt Houses...	523,500	.....	....
Cider Mills ...	136,795	176	47,129
Wine Presses ..	306,475	150	27,565
Retail	60,000,000	20,000	10,500,000
	$75,122,223	22,500	11,744,0[illegible]7

It is true that these are Dominion figures, but by far the greater part of the business is done in Ontario. It should also be remembered that since these figures were compiled, improvements have been made, such as new buildings, etc, so that ten per cent. could be fairly added to them.

WILL ASK GOVERNMENT AID

Definite Statement by General Manager Hays

Montreal, Dec. 1.—"If anyone thinks we are not going to ask Government assistance for our Pacific Railway project, the sooner his mind is disabused the better," said Charles M. Hays, general manager of the Grand Trunk.

Mr. Hays also stated that they had this transcontinental railway project in mind when they made their recent terminal arrangements with the Government and harbor commissioners, and he expressed confidence in their facilities at this port.

Questioned regarding the Canadian Northern, he intimated that certain matters took time, but added, "The securing of the Canadian Northern is by no means essential to the success of the project which we now have on hand."

A despatch from Quebec says that the directors of the Trans-Canada Railway, which is chartered to run from Quebec directors of the Trans-Canada Railway which is chartered to run from Quebec to Port Simpson, are much incensed at the Grand Trunk's new transcontinental scheme, and have resolved to ask the Board of Trade to call a general meeting of all its members and of the representatives of the district for next week to discuss the whole question, and in the meantime to appeal to the Provincial Government to protect the interests of the Province, which are menaced by this new Grand Trunk scheme.

The Trans-Canada had a short time ago given a provisional contract for the first four hundred miles of its railway in this Province, and the financial negotiations fo the whole line are now in a very forward state, and the Grand Trunk have no charter whatever for any Western line. It was also pointed out that if the action of the Grand Trunk should stop the construction of the Trans-Canada, not only would the Province lose the immense revenue expected to be received from the forest lands of the James Bay territory, but the Quebec bridge, now under construction, might be imperilled by the prospective loss of traffic from the same service, and it was also pointed out that the Grand Trunk scheme would cut the Maritime ports out from the winter traffic, which would be diverted to Portland and New York.

Canadian Preference League

A circular has been issued by the Canadian Preference League outlining the object of the league, which is to encourage the purchase of home products. The circular signed by Mr. Wm. Wallace, Secretary, states that about 1,000 have already joined, and it is hoped to secure 100,000 by the spring, representing every part of Canada. There is no membership fee, as the organization expects to be supported by voluntary contributions.

People With Bad Breath

Generally suffer from Catarrh and should use Catarrhozone Inhaler Inhaler four times daily, and be cured. The pleasant scented Catarrhozone vapor spreads through every passage of the breathing organs, and reaches the very root of the disease at once; it kills the germs, purifies and cleanses the mucous surfaces, and eradicates every vestige of catarrh in a short time.

Pure, sweet breath, free from headache, sneezing and discharge are quickly derived from the use of Catarrhozone Inhaler. Complete outfit, guaranteed to cure, costs $1.00, trial size 25c. Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THIRTY THOUSAND HORSE POWER FROM NIAGARA

A Contract Let For Three Immense Turbine Water Wheels

TO BE THE BIGGEST IN THE WORLD

Power to Be Supplied as far East as Toronto and About the Same Distance West

Niagara Falls, Dec. 2—The Canadian Niagara Power Company has just awarded a contract for three of the greatest turbines ever used in the development of a water power. Each unit will have an output capacity of 10,000 horse power or twice the amount of force developed by the mighty turbines in the two wheel-pits of the Niagara Falls Power Company on the New York side at Niagara.

It is estimated that an able-bodied laborer is capable of doing the work of one-tenth of a horse power for eight hours a day. Accepting this as a fact, it will be seen that the new turbines will be able to develop the force of an army of 100,000 men, and this not only for eight hours but constantly for twenty-four hours a day. The present day visitor to Canadian Niagara must stand amazed at the enterprises in progress there. Two great power projects are being rushed to completion. Hundreds of men are toiling night and day in order that part of the power of that famous Horseshoe Falls may be developed for the use of man.

The two projects contemplate the development of several hundred thousand horse power, and the flow of the river will be diminished to the extent the water is diverted. The hope is that the beauty of the cataract may remain unimpaired.

The Canadian Niagara Power Company has sunk a deep wheel-pit in Victoria Free Park, only a short distance back from the brink of the Horseshoe. This pit is now more than 100 feet deep and when finished it will have pierced the rocks of the Dominion 170 feet. It will be 400 feet long and 21 feet wide.

From the wheel-pit to the lower river a tunnel 2,200 feet long has been driven through solid rock, 170 or more feet below the surface of the earth. This tunnel is 25 feet high and 18 feet wide, four feet higher than the tunnel on the American side, and when the installation of the wheelpit is in full operation, the stream of water that will rush through this tunnel will be double the quantity carried by many rivers on which boats ply with the commerce of their localities.

The big power tunnel on the New York side is nearly 7,000 feet long and is lined with brick from end to end. It was proposed to line the Canadian tunnel in a similar manner, but the prevailing brick famine, has forced the adoption of concrete for a portion of the lining. In this way over 3,000,000 brick will be saved, but 30,000 barrels of cement will be used in making the concrete mixture. In the arch of the tunnel more than 1,200,000 brick will be used.

This seems like a large lumber of brick to bury underground. It is like returning earth to earth, but it is interesting to note that in the big work on the New York side more than 20,000,000 bricks are forever buried, together with thousands upon thousands of barrels of cement.

Great interest is manifested by scientists and others in a remarkable condition that has been developed at Canadian Niagara through the construction of an immense wing dam by the Ontario Power Company, another concern that has secured power development rights in Victoria Free Park.

This wing dam is a fine piece of work. It extends out into and down the river from a point on the mainland a distance of about 800 feet and it drives all the water that once flowed about the shores of the pretty Dufferin Islands, far out into the deeper channels.

Thus it has made the river bed for a vast area dry, and the rock spectacle is wonderful. For the first time since white man has known of the existence of the Falls of Niagara, he is able to inspect a large portion of the river bed. When the water was first diverted the barren rocks were crowded with relic hunters, who searched about the bed, in the potholes, the crevices and all depressions for strange things that the river in its flow had deposited there. Many were rewarded with such things as old army buttons, swords, guns, &c., which apparently had been dropped into the stream years ago when the Niagara border was the scene of warfare.

The Ontario Power Company will erect a power station at the water's edge in the Gorge, close up to the base of the Horseshoe Falls. Its water supply will be conducted through the boundaries of the park in pipes eighteen feet in diameter, and sent down to the wheels in the power house through many penstocks.

This building will be the closest footprint made by industry upon the Cataract of Niagara, and may be looked upon as significant of the probability that in time scenic Niagara will entirely be supplanted by industrial Niagara.

THE CHEQUE FORGER

Charles Carter, the Cheque Fakir, Pleads Guilty at Kingston

Charles Carter, the cheque forger, pleaded guilty at the Kingston Police Court, to forgery and passing forged cheques.

His Peterborough victims will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that the sharper will receive ample punishment. It is not probable that any of the money will be recovered.

FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Peterborough's Board of Education Might Follow Toronto's Example

Peterborough educationalists will be interested in the new curriculum proposed for Toronto public schools. It appears that the special committee of the Public School Board of that City appointed early in the season to revise the existing curriculum have concluded their report and suggest that a course of English and commercial subjects be substituted for the present senior fifth book programme, the new class to be known as the English and commercial department. The committee, composed of Inspector Hughes, Trustees Douglas and Parkinson, have also recommended that nature study be added to the curriculum. Much is claimed for this study as a means of stimulating the pupil's interest and developing his powers of observation and reflection.

The junior children will be taken to the woods in the suburban districts and there given practical lessons in flowers, while the senior pupils will have their practical demonstrations in the fossil beds of the Humber, Don and Scarboro.' The revised curriculum will be presented at the meeting of the board on Thursday evening.

Barbers and the Board of Health

At a meeting of the Provincial Board of Health recently, a long discussion took place regarding the prevention of disease by the agency of barber shops. A number of Toronto barbers were present, and took part in the proceedings. Dr. Cassidy read a report to the committee on infectious diseases, which dealt entirely with the tonsorial aspect of the case. Barbers, said the report, should keep scrupulously neat and clean, and be careful to maintain a healthful condition of the mouth and hands. No barber suffering from any skin, scalp or contagious disease should be allowed to practice his trade. Nor should a barber go near any persons suffering or recovering from any contagious disease, or live in the same house with them. Persons suffering with, or recovering from such disease, should not be allowed to procure tonsorial attention save in their own homes. All instruments, and brushes, etc., should be kept clean and disinfected. Barber shops should be floored with hardwood, or covered with some impermeable material, and well washed, but never swept, as it raises dust.

A Capital Cure For Sore Throat

Is to use as a gargle a few drops of Polson's Nerviline in sweetened water, and before retiring rub the throat and chest vigorously with Nerviline. By morning the soreness and inflammation will have disappeared entirely. Nerviline drives away the pain and sore throat and hoarseness quickly, simply because that's what it's made for. Buy a 25c. bottle from your druggist to-day.

THE RUGBY CLUB BALL

The Affair Last Night a Splendid Success

LIST OF INVITED GUESTS.

The Opera House the Scene of a Brilliant Assemblage

DURING the existence of the Rugby Football Club in Peterborough, it has been their custom to wind up their season with a ball, and this year is no exception to the rule. Last night's function will long be remembered as one of the most brilliant of the Club's many successes. The opera house had been handsomely decorated for the occasion by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Son, and was a thing of beauty.

With their characteristic energy, the management secured the rooms in the flat below for the ladies, while refreshments were served in the large room adjoining the hall, the catering being done by Messrs. Long Bros., whose ability in this line is everywhere recognized.

Mr. A. J. McClelland very acceptably filled the onerous position of secretary, while the Misses Hurley, Peterborough's accomplished pianists, supplied the music.

The patronesses were: Mrs. T. A. S. Hay, Mrs. J. H. McClelland, Mrs. Dr. Bradd, Mrs. L. M. Hay, Mrs. T. H. G. Denne, Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Mrs. John Crane and Mrs. R. R. Hall.
